The Dahlia fruit and vegetable exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place on Saturday and Sunday September 14 and 15. Weather has been exceptionally favorable for Dahlias so if nothing unforeseen happens there will be an unusually attractive exhibition. In addition to Dahlias, hardy herbaceous flowers, early flowering Chrysanthemums and Japanese Anemones will be shown. Collections of wild flowers are also included. In fruits, prizes are offered for Apples, Grapes, Pears, Peaches, Plums and Melons. The vegetable exhibits should be attractive as the schedule contains practically all that are grown in this section and vegetables in Massachusetts were never better than this season. The vegetable feature of the exhibition should not only be larger but instructive to those interested in increasing food production.

Spokes in the Hub

Robert Koppleman, salesman at the Cooperative Flower Market, has enlisted in the British Army and will go to Palestine. He is a linguist who knows half a dozen languages so will be specially useful as an interpreter.

Ryan's Conservatories which were formerly the Hoffman greenhouses at Mount Auburn are well stocked with finely grown plants. There are about 2000 Cyclamen plants. Several houses of Chrysanthemums, several greenhouses of Begonias, and Poinsettias by the thousand. Mr. Ryan and his foreman, Michael Ryan, may well feel proud of their stock.

The first meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club will be held on Tuesday evening September 17. Many important questions will be discussed. A large attendance of members is desired. Seasonable exhibits of outdoor flowers will be welcome. Any other flowers or rare and new flowers will be passed on by the judges and awards made.

James Wheeler of Natick is cutting very attractive Gladioli. He makes a specialty of growing varieties suitable for retail florist work. He is also cutting Carnations.

The wholesale flower markets are now open until 5 P. M. on Saturdays. During July and Aug. they closed at noon.

H. M. Robinson, of Henry M. Robinson Co., and his family have returned from their summer home at Green Harbor, Mass.

W. R. Nicholson of Framingham is cutting fine Chrysanthemum October front. R. C.

The New York State Fair

The New York State Fair at Syracuse, which opened on Sept. 9 and will remain open until Sept. 14, inclusive, includes an excellent horticultural exhibit. The entries in both the professional and amateur classes are larger than ever before. The entries in the classes devoted to Roses are well filled; this applies both to professional and amateur classes. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, and the Quinlan Co. of Syracuse are prominent exhibitors (professional). In the amateur section there is spirited competition among members of the Syracuse Rose Society and others. In the sections devoted to Gladioli and Asters "we are going over the top" there being five and six competitors in nearly all of the classes. In dinner table decorations we have no fewer than 16 entries, and all the classes devoted to floral art have from four to five competitors. The plant classes are all full.

Splendid trade exhibits are being arranged by the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown; Jas. Vick & Sons, Rochester; Jas E. Prouty, Baldwinsville, and Madison Cooper, Calcium. D. LUMSDEN, Supt. Horticultural Dept.

Hartford, Conn.

The florists of this city after being closed every Saturday at 1 p. m. during the Summer began to keep open last Saturday the 7th. Trade, after so many weeks of half holidays, was very good.

Peter A. Troiano is stationed at Newport, R. I. with the 8th Company, 15th Regiment, N. R. Force. He was in the city and says that the florists' business has "nothing on" the Navy, even if he does not get "pie" three times a day.

Eugene S. Drake of Cedar Hill fame, is a grandaddy. It is a boy, Richard Drake Linder. They will not make a florist of this child.

George G. McClunie of Main st., following his custom of the last six years, was a judge of the floral department, of the Norfolk Agricultural Fair, held in Norfolk, Conn., Sept. 6 and 7. The floral displays were excellent.

Asters still are coming in in good quality, and are selling at a good price. Roses, etc., are small but funeral work keeps up.

Page Potter, who has conducted the Bon Ton flower shop in the Johnson bldg. for the last four years, has been called for the National Army. The shop has been bought by Paul Mathewson, a former employee. G. G. McCLUNIE.

Many a grower for market would be glad to know just what constitutes a "bunch" of any given flower. An article on "Bunching Flowers and Foliage," for the New York wholesale market appears in the Gardeners and Florists' Annual for 1916. 35 cents, from this office.

The Market

Sept. 10.—There is little change [illegible] surplus of anything of good quality. In some lines where the quality is poor there [illegible] outlet for. The shipping business is as always has been the principal channel [illegible] of social functions has so far caused local retailers to depend mainly on funeral work as their principal source of income. Under conditions that existed during the Summer wedding[illegible] have no cause for complaint. With the approach of cooler weather and better stock the wholesale trade has every reason to feel encouraged over business prospects for Fall and Winter demand.

The supply of Roses is good and the quality better than in some time. Mrs. Russell is still a favorite and continues to hold its position on the market with its new compeer Columbia. The price of these two varieties is about the same, but meanwhile the trade is wondering if with the free blooming qualities of the latter the price should remain so high. The originators state that this variety is as free bloomer as Ophelia. Probably as the season advances the supply will regulate the price if all the originators' claim for it materializes. In other varieties there is a good supply of excellent stock with a slight over supply of short and poorer grades.

The Carnation supply is increasing each week. At this season it is too early to expect fine quality as to stem and other qualifications. The blooms are good but stems are short and the flowers so far are used mainly for funeral work. [illegible]

Gladioli are abundant but of wide range of quality. All stock of good quality brings remunerative prices but a large amount of poor stock is sold for whatever the dealer can get. The range of prices is from $1 to $3 a 100.

There is quite an improvement in the supply of Asters, when quality is considered some really good stock is coming in that sells freely at $4 a 100. This season appears to be at its best. Late varieties will remain good for a few more weeks. As usual poor stock is sold cheaply for funeral work, some of which does not bring over 50 cents per 100.

Chrysanthemums are increasing in supply with the demand increasing proportionately. Golden Glow has been on the market for weeks and more recently the white varieties such as Smith's Advance and October Frost have come in. This week a few early pink varieties range from $1.50 to $3 a doz.

Orchids and Valley are on the short side with no particular demand but whoever wants them has to pay a good price, Easter Lilies are plentiful also rubrum and auratum but as funeral work is the principal demand the all white varieties have a preference with buyers. Dahlias are to be had but they have never been a feature of this market as in the East,

In the Service

Art Keenan, who is well known to the trade in the city, having conducted a retail flower store on 63d st. up to last December has been in the Navy for the past five months. He is stationed at the Marine Barracks, Paris Island, S. C.

Michal Bros., Stony Island ave., are wondering whether the new draft will compel them to get out of business. James, the youngest brother, some time ago joined the Airplane Service and is at Camp Logan. Joseph Havlicek, a former employee is also at Camp Logan; a recent letter states that they will soon leave for overseas. John Michal is already in the draft and expects to be called almost any time. Joseph Michal the oldest of the brothers is 33 and will register Sept. 12

Many Ranges to Close

Carl Bachler, who conducts the McKinley Park Flower Shop, at 3597 Archer ave., is preparing to close his greenhouses in the rear of his store for the Winter because of the high price of coal as well as the difficulty in securing it. He will continue his store and get supplies from the wholesale market.

The National Plant and Flower Co., 1249 W. 63d st., will close, for the Winter, the six greenhouses and the [illegible] facing 63d. st. These are the original houses that were on this property when the company purchased it about three years ago. Since that time two new houses of Moninger construction have been erected in the rear of the old house; these two will be kept going through the Winter. Additional shelving is being put in so as to make them hold as much as possible. Foreman A. Martin believes that there will be a great demand for bedding plants next Spring because many small establishments are closing down. He has therefore decided to make a specialty of bedding plants for next season.

A. T. Hey, who for some years has conducted a range of about 25,000ft. of glass in Maywood, has closed them up for the present because of scarcity of labor and high cost of fuel. Mr. Hey has been with the A. L. Randall Co. for the past couple of years.

The establishment of Felsch Bros., Maywood, which consists of about 25,000 sq. ft. of glass has been closed. This was managed by Fred Felsch up to a short time ago. Chas. Cassier, also of Maywood, who had a small establishment of about 10,000ft. of glass closed his place early in the season. He will not reopen immediately as he is employed at factory work.

The Geo. Keller Pottery Co., on Herndon st., near Wrightwood ave., has brought suit against the city in the matter of a municipal pottery, which is operated by convict labor. The Keller Co. claims that its business has been injured because its goods have had to compete with the products of convict labor. The prices shown on the list of this municipal pottery are 40 per cent. lower than those quoted by potteries paying the prevailing rate of wages. The case will be tried in the local courts.

The Market

Sept. 10.—The past week has taken the bottom out of the market, there being practically no demand for flowers of any kind. There was no heavy accumulation of stock despite the limited demand. Roses in variety are in a fair supply including American Beauty. Dahlias are coming strongly into prominence. Chrysanthemum are also much in evidence in the two early varieties Golden Glow and Smith's Advance. Asters are still leading the list in the staples for quantity. Orchids are very few and far between. The few early Carnations are not causing any comment.

Easter Lilies are in a heavy supply. Probably more of them are to be had now than any time this Summer. Gladioli are not of very good quality but the best find an outlet. There is no lack of greens.

Talk of the Town

The obituary of William F. Dreer, whose death occurred this week, will be found under another column.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Berkowitz announce the wedding of their daughter Celia to Nathan J. Edwards of Goldsboro, N. C. on Sept. 1. It was a quiet home wedding.

Carl Corts is receiving the first cut of the new Rose Columbia from the Joseph Heacock Co. They have 6000 of it planted at Roelofs.

A. M. Campbell has been having a steady cut of Easter Lilies from the Strafford Flower Farm.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving a large quantity of Smith's Advance and Golden Glow Chrysanthemums.

The Henry F. Michell Co. is featuring ferns and foliage plants attractively displayed.

Aschmann Bros. are well stocked with a general collection of pot plants for the Fall and Winter trade. Several houses will be closed with the advent of cold weather.

The S. S. Pennock Co. is handling a high grade of late Asters in variety.

The recently formed Outdoor Arts Co., Inc., has offices at 8438 Germantown ave., and 547 Drexel bldg. This new concern will do general landscape gardening and outdoor work along those lines. The firm consists of Edwin Matthews, L. U. Strassburger, C. E. and Ernest Hemming.

Retail Closing Voted Down

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held Tuesday evening Sept 10 to discuss the recommendation of Charles H.Grakelow of suggesting to the local Fuel Administrator the closing of retail flower shops at 6 P. M. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays of every week; after considerable discussion the recommendation was voted down.

Picnic and Club Election

A meeting and annual election of officers of the Detroit Florists' Club was held in the grove of the Breitmeyer Nursery Co., on Thursday, Aug. 29. The occasion was the annual picnic of members and their families and was thoroughly enjoyed by a large attendance.

After a delightful program of games and sports, refreshments were provided through the hospitality of the Breitmeyer Nursery Co., and everyone enjoyed the time of his life.

The meeting was held in a specially prepared place in the grove and was attended by the folowing members: E. A. Fetters, Philip Breitmeyer, Wm. Dilger, Louis Charvat, M. Bloy, Joseph Streit, A. Sylvester. Thomas Browne, A. J. Stahelin, Fred Miesel, J. E. Smith, M. Roseman, John Berlin, George Doemling, John Klang, J. F. Sullivan, R. Wells, Walter Coope, Carl Heide, Otto Kron and C. Vodica.

Mr. Breitmeyer in a highly complimentary speech nominated J. F. Sullivan and as no other nominations for president were offered J. F. Sullivan was declared elected by acclamation. M. Bloy nominated Robt. Rohaley for vice-president and J. Steit named M. Bloy for the honor, whereupon Mr. Rohaley withdrew and Mr. Bloy was declared elected. Henry Forster was unanimously re-elected secretary, and on proposal of Mr. Breitmeyer, J. K. Stock was unanimously elected treasurer.

Henry C. Forster, Sec'y.

Columbus, O.

Business has been steadily increasing, well up to last year. The cuts of Roses and Carnations are coming in more heavily, and the quality of both is much improved. Gladioli are still scarce and seem to be at the end of their season. Many outdoor flowers can be seen in the flower stores. Few 'Mums are on the market, the varieties offered are Golden Glow and Early Frost.

Ohio State Fair

The principal exhibitors at the fair were the Fifth Ave. Floral Co. and the Indianola Floral Co. of this city; the Clay Floral Co. of Salem, O., and the Wing Seed Co. of Mechanicsburg, O. In general the exhibits were well up to those of last year, but many more florists should use this fine opportunity and exhibit. There was an increase in the number of table decorations exhibited. The exhibit of the Horticultural Dept. of the Ohio State University, in charge of Prof. Hottes, attracted much attention, the large Lemon plant especially arousing considerable interest.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. is rebuilding some of its older houses.

The Rock Floral Co.,opposite the Ohio State University, has discontinued business, as Mr. Rock had to go to war. Joseph Katona of Olen Tangy Park bought most of the firm's store fixtures.

The flowers and vegetables grown by the Dept. of Horticulture of the Ohio State University, which formerly were sold, are now given to the soldiers.

The Columbus Florists' Ass'n held a meeting on Sept. 8, at the Niel House hotel. Walter J. Engel.

Denver, Col.

Business has been quiet the past few weeks, as there has been very little funeral work and cut flower sales are few and far between. Outdoor flowers such as Asters, Gladioli, Dahlias and Sweet Peas are plentiful but there is no demand for them. Labor Day started in with some real cool weather, followed by heavy rains. It is hoped that there will be some improvement in business from now on, as the middle of September usually shows some increase.

Early Closing

There has been some talk among the retail store men in regard to early closing this Winter and during the war period, but so far nothing definite has been done. Owing to the fact that a number of stores in other lines have been ordered to close at 6 and 6:30 p.m., the florists of this city feel it their duty to close early and help Uncle Sam. Keeping open evenings only cheapens the florist's business from an outsider's point of view. When the new closing hour became known to the public there would be as much business done as before.

E. P. Neiman of the Park Floral Co. is back at his post and ready to handle the Fall rush.

W. W. Wilmore is around every morning with a fine cut of Dahlias in all the leading colors and varieties; also Gladioli and Asters.

E. S. Kennedy and wife of the Alpha Floral Co. have returned from a few days' stay at Cheyenne, Wyo.

The City Floral Co. is supplying the stores with excellent Cyclamen plants.

Emil Glauber, the Rose specialist, motored to Grand Lake, Colo., over Labor Day, on a fishing trip, but for reasons unknown he could not get the fish on his hook.

O. H. Frank of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill., has been calling on the trade. He reports business good and a demand for plant and cut flower baskets.

N. A. Benson of the Denver Wholesale Florist Co. entertained a few of his florist friends at his residence on Sept. 3. It was a smoker, lunch and card party, and everyone spent an enjoyable evening, thanks to Mr. Benson. C. F. E.

Trade conditions in the Northwest have been quiet, except for the usual funeral trade, which fills in the gaps. the recent fair has been the main attraction, and this interfered with business. —Best All Around fact that the Government exhibit was in the building. This drew large crowds and in this way many more people than usual viewed the horticultural exhibits.

Holm & Olson were the largest exhibitors. They had a considerable space devoted to evergreens and shrubs; also a fine collection of Gladioli and perennials. The firm took first prize for its bride's bouquet and corsage. Swanson's of Minneapolis won first in the original design class, having a replica of the Liberty Bell. The beam and upright were of Goldenrod; at the base of the support were ornamental foliage and Liatris. The bell was made up of Scabiosa, a small white flower being used to outline the crack. The Chicago ave. Greenhouses took several prizes. The prizes were more widely distributed this year than formerly. The Baker Nursery exhibited an interesting display of flowering perennials in pots. The Minnesota Mushroom Society staged its usual exhibit of Mushrooms, including several hundred both edible and poisonous sorts.

The vegetable exhibits were good. The State Farm exhibit of fruit was perhaps the best it had ever staged. A feature of the fair grounds was a Liberty Bell 12ft. high, the bell measuring 3ft. This was planted in Alternanthera and Echeveria.

On Sept. 1, 2 and 3 St. Paul suffered from a three-day spell of very cold weather, the temperature going down to the freezing point, but no damage was reported. E. C. T.

Minneapolis, Minn.

Swanson's Inc. advise us that the information published in a Chicago contemporary, under date of Sept. 5, to the effect that they had been endeavoring to effect a composition of creditors was entirely unauthorized by them, and that the purported statement to the effect that creditors' accounts cannot be liquidated by them is untrue. The company claim there is no necessity for their endeavoring to effect a composition of creditors as its assets are largely in excess of its liabilities and that all its creditors will receive payment of their accounts with reasonable promptness and in the usual course of business.

San Francisco, Cal.

The flower shop of the Misses Hannon, located at 368 Sutter st., San Francisco, was sold on Sept. 4 to Mrs. N. Copeland, who plans to conduct the business along its established lines. The Hannon sisters plan to move to Sunnyvale, Santa Clara County, Cal., where they will make their home.

Among local florists who last week visited the State Fair, in Sacramento, are H. A. Hyde of Watsonville and Richard Diener of Kentfield. Mr. Diener plans to make an exhibit of some of his recent introductions at the coming Land Show, in Oakland, from Sept. 9 to Oct. 6.

H. A. Hyde of Watsonville has received advices from France that the division with which his son, Lieut. Harold A. Hyde, is connected has been in the thick of the fighting lately, he believes, in the vicinity of Soissons.

Peter Ferrari of Ferrari Brothers, who has been in New York during the past week, is expected back in town within the next few days.

H. Plath, of the Ferneries, together with Mrs. Plath and family, left on the 7th inst. for a week-end automobile trip to Monterey and Pacific Grove

H. F. Brian of Los Angeles, has adopted the trade name of "The Flower Gardens" under which name he will hereafter conduct his nursery and store.

Among the visitors in town on a buying trip this week was H. Von Hofgaarten, of Long Beach.

Dahlia Society's Show a Success

The annual Dahlia Show of the Dahlia Society of California, held at the Palace Hotel Sept. 2 to 4, 1918, was a success from the standpoint of fine exhibits, good attendance and public favor. Frank Pelicano's Dr. Tevis which has been a prize-winner for four consecutive years was again the winner of three first prizes. F. Schlotzhauer of the Francis Floral Company, contributed several unique baskets of various varieties of Dahlias, the color schemes of the baskets made to blend with those of the blooms, but as the exhibit did not conform to the rules prescribed for exhibitions these artistic creations were not eligible for competition. Angelo J. Rossi, of Pelicano-Rossi & Co., served as manager of the show. Among the exhibits which received popular favor were Richard Lohrmann's Pride of California and Mrs. Lohrmann. The lavender Millionaire Dahlia 13 inches in diameter exhibited by Mrs. Jesse L. Seal, received considerable attention. The general tone of the exhibit contributed by Golden Gate Park was very high. It had a mascot in the way of a freak production in grafting—a Tomato plant bearing luscious fruit, upon roots of a Potato plant with several small tubers attached. Principal first prize awards were as follows: Most meritorious exhibit, table cover for eight, and most artistic Dahlia, F. D. Pelicano; most artistic basket, and best collection of Dahlias originated in Cal., F. C. Burns; best Cal. seedling, Richard Rohrmann. Among the principal prize winners were F. D. Pelicano, Mrs. Jesse Seal, Bessie Boston, Amy Hodgens, F. C. Burns, Star Dahlia Farm, Elizabeth Spencer, Richard Lohrman, Arthur Hill, Mrs. S. C. Walker, Mrs. M. C. Key Kendall, and J. Bernhard. J. Florists in California Doing Well

It would be a wise thing for the publicity committee of the S. A. F. and O. H. to do what it can to correct the erroneous reports circulated by the daily papers of the country to the effect that because of the war the florists' business is all going to smash. One of our wholesale growers of Asparagus has doubled his capacity for growing these greens during the year in order that he may be able to supply the demand. His stock of Cyclamen is larger and finer this season than ever. I visited San Diego last month, and made special inquiry of one of the leading florists there, as to how business was compared with other years, and was informed that while elaborate social functions were not as numerous as in previous years, yet her trade was better than ever before, and I suspect the same is true of all other parts of the country, if the truth were reported as persistently as is the dark side of the picture. P. D. B.

Lancaster, Pa.

Retail business, while not exactly wonderful, is very good, and the supply of flowers ample to take care of it.

Walter Hammond is one of the few retailers in the country who keeps his books clean from obligations and can always tell exactly where he stands.

Dahlias are conspicuous by their absence, but there are a few on the markets, where great quantities of flowers are sold at cheap (too cheap) prices. An example of this is seen in the following incident: One of our local store men knowing that a farmer had good Asters in quantity went out to get some the evening before market. When the florist reached the place the Asters had been cut and made up into bunches of 12 to 18, to be sold the next morning at 8c. per bunch, and they were high quality stock at that. After considerable dickering a deal was made to get some at $1 per 100 as the grower preferred selling them on the market at the rate of 8c. per bunch to selling them by the 100, at a higher rate. Just how to educate such people I imagine would be a hard proposition for even the Harvard Bureau of Business Research.

The Labor Problem

Some of the growers are much worried over the new draft, with regard to the way it will affect their employees. The majority, however, are going to keep going, although it may prove a difficult problem. In the country it is possible to get women, but in the vicinity of Lancaster the women who can or want to work are all employed. On a trip down the river road recently the writer saw a number of young girls working as track section hands with shovels and wheelbarrows, showing that in case of necessity even this class of work can be handled without men. ALBERT M. HERR.

Scranton, Pa.

T. J. Nolan, until recently representing the King Construction Co. for the district of Philadelphia, has taken a position with the Burlington Willow Shops, Burlington, Ia., manufacturers of willow baskets for the trade.

Business Difficulties

Michael F. Enwright, 662 Highland ave., Malden, Mass., doing business under the firm name of the Highland Nurseries, has submitted a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities $551; no assets.

Ernest Rober, who has been carrying on a plant business at Wilmette, Ill., independently, since the dissolution of the partnership of Rober & Radtke at Maywood, Ill., about five years ago, has closed his place, feeling that the outlook for the coming season would not justify him in keeping open, due mainly to the scarcity of labor and high cost of fuel. He suffered serious business losses last Winter on account of the severe weather and scarcity of fuel. He is asking his creditors for more time as he does not want to go into bankruptcy unless he is forced to. Mr. Rober has many friends in Chicago who hope he will be able to straighten out his business affairs for another season and resume business again.

The case of Wm. Langhout, Chicago, Ill., who recently purchased the Anton Then greenhouse establishment, is still pending owing to the absence of Judge Landis, who is away on a vacation in Michigan. The referee in bankruptcy offered the stock of plants, coal, automobiles, and all the necessary working accessories of the place for sale on Saturday. The amount bid was so small that there was no sale, and the referee announced that all stock would be sold at public auction on Sept. 17. In the meantime Wm. Langhout is held in default of bail pending an investigation of the case.

A Busy Lecturer

Richard Vincent, Jr., of Waite Marsh, Md., is scheduled to deliver two lectures at New Haven, Conn., Sept. 11 and 12, and to repeat both these in Horticultural Hall, Boston, Sept. 14 and 15, on the occasion of the holding of the Dahlia show at these cities. One of the lectures is on Dahlias, the other one on the bulb fields of Holland; both are instructive and should have a large circle of hearers. Mr. Vincent is an inspiring speaker and a keen observer and, at his age, an example to all younger men in the line.

Cincinnati, O.

Since the cooler weather has set in the Rose cut has come along nicely. It is heavier than it was and is of a quality that is much better than during the hot weather. They are selling pretty well. A good cut of Carnations is available for market use. They have been cleaning up pretty regularly.

Easter Lilies are not as plentiful as they were. Some Chrysanthemums are coming into the market. Asters and Gladioli are in a good supply; as to the former, the cut is unusually heavy. A few are from local growers; the remainder are from Northern New York State. They meet with an active market. Other offerings include Dahlias and Cosmos. New Wild Smilax has made its appearance, the first coming in last week.

Mrs. Dora Jones, the wife of C. J. Jones of The Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar, died last week and was buried on Monday of this week. Mr. Jones has the sincere sympathy of his many friends in the trade, in his bereavement.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Kyrk are receiving congratulations on their 33d wedding anniversary, which was celebrated by them, their family and near relatives on Monday Sept. 9.

Recent visitors were J. R. Goldman, Middletown, O., and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beckman, Middletown, O. TEDDY.

Cleveland, O.

The chief topic of conversation is the new amplified draft law and its possible effect on the trade. The Government's "autoless Sunday" request is also causing discussion. It is permissible, according to the local fuel administrator, to use motor trucks for the delivery of funeral orders only, on Sunday, all other business being considered non-essential. While more or less inconvenience is being caused by the ruling, Cleveland florists are a unit in complying with it. However, considerable business is being transacted, the week ending Sept. 7 exceeding past records in volume.

Asters are on the decline, and while Gladioli are not as plentiful as previously they occupy a leading place in the market and are commanding better prices. The ever-popular Easter Lily is in strong demand and the supply limited. Employed for so many purposes, perhaps no staple flower would be so substantially missed if its cultivation suddenly ceased.

Limited quantities of Dahlias in attractive assortment are arriving, and meet with ready sale at $3 per 100. A few Tritomas are being offered and are eagerly taken up for window trimming. The supply of this splendid flower is fully 50 per cent. below the demand, each succeeding year, and it is surprising that larger quantities are not grown. Helianthus, Marigolds, Larkspurs, Scabiosa and Buddleia, in good quality, can be had daily.

Jottings

Latest reports from the Grullemans Co., Gladioli farm at Avon-on-the-Lake, O., are to the effect that the supply of marketable flowers from some varieties, notably America, has been materially curtailed by the excessive heat and drought of early August. Such sorts as Niagara, Pendleton, King, Panama, Augusta, are being cut however. The stock is being handled exclusively in Cleveland by the J. M. Gasser Co.

To secure florist's wire at the present time it is necessary to sign a pledge to the effect that the wire will be used with economy and only for essential trade purposes. Hoarding is strictly prohibited, to prevent which only five stones are being sold to a single customer.

F. C. W. Brown and son, Edgar, spent Sept. 5, 6, 7, at their former home Toronto, Can.

J. G. Esler, secretary of the Florist's Hail Ass'n, and vice-president of the A. T. De La Mare, Co., Inc., New York City, publisher of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, spent Sept. 4 calling upon friends in the trade here, being on his way home from the St. Louis convention.

A. M. Stackhouse, of Minerva, O., spent Sept. 6 on the market purchasing supplies.

The Joseph M. Stern Co., dealers in artificial flowers and florists' supplies, has removed from its old location on High ave. to 223 Huron rd., occupying both first and second floors.

Annual Meeting

The Florists' Club held its annual meeting Sept. 9 at the Hollenden, which, because of its unusual importance was attended by a goodly number of live wire members. The new officers were installed and the new President Chas. J. Graham can justly feel that he has the hearty support of the entire club membership. The retiring president, Carl Hagenberger, handed the gavel to his successor, with the consciousness, that as the club's first war-time executive, his administration, crowded with new problems from beginning to end, had been eminently successful.

The annual report read by Secy. Jas. McLaughlin, was heard with great interest and given hearty applause, not only because of its detail and comprehensiveness, but because it showed a comfortable bank balance.

Frank Friedley was heartily thanked for his donation to the club of the $100 Liberty Bond secured in the S. A. F. membership contest. In recognition of his great service to the club it was unanimously voted to purchase for him a life membership in the S. A. F. & O. H.

Robert Weeks, President of the National Gardeners Ass'n, announced that it had been decided by his organization to postpone the annual meeting scheduled for latter September in this city until after the war. One new member, John Blechschmidt was added to the roster. J. McL.

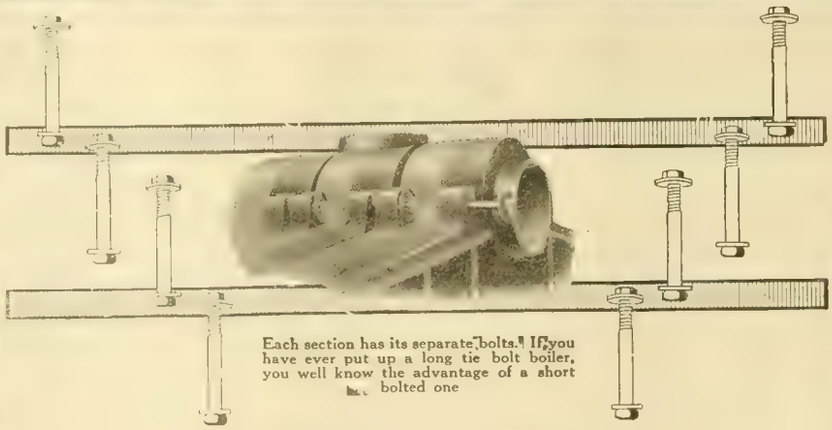
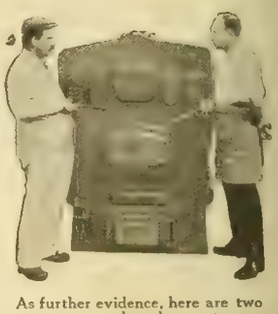
Actual photo of two men setting up a No. 30 Burnham



Each section has its separate bolts. If you have ever put up a long tie bolt boiler, you well know the advantage of a short bolted one



As further evidence, here are two more men, who alone set up a No. 30 Burnham

A War-Time Boiler That Starts Saving at the Start

THE Burnham starts saving the minute you start to set it up.
No expensive masonry foundation needed.
No bricking in.

But, better yet, with even so big a boiler as size 30, two men can set it up.

That means a lot in these days of labor shortage.

There are no long tie bolts to bother with or about. Each section has its own separate bolts. Each section is tightly bolted tight as you go along.

There is no trick about setting up a Burnham. Two half-way intelligent men, with a screw driver, hammer and wrench, can set it up.

Shipments we can make promptly.

Send for new Handy Hand Book, fully describing all the Burnham boilers.

Winter Coming and Not Enough Coal—Then What?

I Have Found a Way Out with my Specially Constructed

KEROSENE HEATERS

From February to May last year these KEROSENE HEATERS, placed in my boilers, kept my houses warm.

It is a proven fact that this means of heating is 100% better than any other method. It is quicker, cleaner and, above all, a tremendous time saver.

The

HEID KEROSENE HEATER

Needs no Electric Motor, no Air Pressure and there are no Ashes to Remove

With a few lbs. of coal you cannot heat water, but with 5 gallons of oil in my KEROSENE HEATER you can.

Are you convinced? Don't forget this:

You know that from now on you will get only 50% of your coal, but you are not limited in buying oil.

Another Big Factor

The use of THE HEID KEROSENE HEATER will warm up your hot houses in one hour on a rainy day—no half day wait.

You can see this HEATER working successfully for me any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain everything to you. Information will also be sent through the mail, but call personally, if at all possible.

Britain Through a Florists' Eye

Nelson Coon, formerly with Elmer Coon, florist of Rhinebeck, N. Y., but now with "Uncle Sam and Co.," as sergeant, 1st class, writes interestingly of his observations in England and Scotland

As many young florists in the United States, like myself, have never had the chance to see English horticulture at first hand, I write them through THE EXCHANGE of things they might find if they come to this country. Doubtless there are hundreds of florists though, who have been even more fortunate than I and have gone to beautiful, though much scarred, France. But as it has been my lot to be stationed in England I have tried to see how, what and why as regards horticulture.

The first impressions of the country are good beyond all doubt. One doesn't need to dig deeply to see from whence the inspirations of the great English painters and writers came. Undoubtedly the great features that strike the American eye are the walled gardens and the low rolling hills, most of them capped by a symmetrical wood. All the woodlands are worth walking through and unlike the woods at home are free of the underbrush. The branches being high walking is possible. Hedges I would place third in making an impression on the visitor.

Effect of War on Floriculture

What has war done to floriculture here? I have often asked gardeners and florists here. Sometimes they have answered and sometimes the answer was evident. The florist profession has, I believe, not been hurt a bit, outside of the first shock, and many men report better business than ever. Many new graves, of course, bring some business but my observation has been that as a whole the people of Great Britain are a flower loving people. Many a time I have seen homely country people, with perhaps a garden full of many flowers, step into a shop and purchase perhaps a six penny bunch of some perennial. This is the kind of spirit that makes trade.

The private gardener over here surely has my sympathy, though, for he is surely up against a proposition. He perhaps had 25 men working before the war (this is not a hypothetical case) but now only has eight. Till this year he has been able to obtain nearly all the coal he needs, hence all the houses must be kept running. "The big house" is perhaps used as a hospital, so lawns, etc., must be kept up. The production of vegetables must be increased to help win the war and delicate fruits, the wounded must have. All this with one third less help the gardener does remarkably well and never grumbles. But (and this is just the sort of thing that has happened in many cases at home) he has perhaps a beautiful formal garden. The lady of the house thinks that the war would be won quicker if vegetables were grown therein, so the pride of the gardener's life is sacrificed, while 300 feet away he has a fertile untilled field that would produce 50 per cent more yield with less labor and would not destroy the work of years. One such man whose formal garden had 132 beds said "I never go near the old garden any more." This I tell to show men with the same troubles, that enthusiasm to dig up the work of years in order to win the war is not alone a disease peculiar to Americans. The case of the man with a quarter acre (where it might be excusable) digging out his flowers to plant vegetables is rare.

Popular Methods

A word might be said about methods. Among the big landowners the use of modern tools and machinery is prevalent but the small gardener has no Planet Jr. tools and the other little aids to gardening which we at home so much depend on. The flower shops are mostly up-to-date, the only difference noticeable being the exclusive use of wire for all floral work. A wired matchstick is not known. As we draw most of our ideas for good cultural work from this nation, little mention may be made of this phase of the work.

In Hants County intensive cultivation has to be resorted to, owing to the shallowness of the soil. The average soil here is not over 18 inches deep upon a sub-soil of a pure chalk from 25 to 3000 feet deep, so it is quite impossible to do real subsoiling. Perhaps owing to these conditions the trees are mostly evergreens, Beech and similar shallow rooted species.

Everywhere is seen the result of patient, careful work. The American is too prone to want quick results and to hurry plants along with all the resultant bad effects. Here it is different, for Englishmen are by nature patient, painstaking and want and will have a thing good, no matter how long it takes. Of course, much that would seem to indicate this patience is in reality only what age has accomplished. No one in even a hundred years could hope to obtain the effects that centuries will bring.

On the other hand the American hurry up system has produced a fever for newer and better subjects and a realization of the defects of the old, which is one of the things I have heard florists here complain of. Here are often still cataloged perhaps 50 varieties of a subject where the U. S. A. firm will show only five and perhaps state that owing to certain defects of this or that one he has discontinued to propagate it. But as England's old buildings still remain and are the joy of its peoples (and rightly) so many old floral and vegetable plants are not discarded. This trouble is acute but the needs for less unnecessary work which the war has occasioned will help to solve the problem.

Interest in Vegetables

As food is the thing we all think of first it is well to note something of vegetables. When the American first arrives he hears people talk about Corn and cornfields but looks in vain for anything that looks like either Sweet of Fodder Corn. I have not seen a cornstalk since I have been here. The only "Corn" they know is Wheat. If one talks with a grower about what we know as Corn he says he has heard of it or perhaps has seen it growing but hasn't much faith in it. I can well imagine though that with the uncertain weather that prevails here Corn would not do well.

Cucumbers and Tomatoes are grown indoors exclusively on account of the weather. From what I have seen I would say that the British understanding of this trade is A1. I have seen houses of these two plants which will turn over more money to their owners than any flower would and it is possible to grow more than one crop. Onions and Cabbages do well here. The cultivation of Potatoes is receiving more attention with better results than formerly. That good variety Early Rose which seems to be losing its character at home is doing the same here.

Wall Fruit Growing

Most of the orchards in this country are on walls whose advantages it takes only a glance to see. I have had the pleasure of seeing one garden with over 100 fruit trees trained against its walls. It was surely a fine sight. Cherries with every cluster within each reach; Peaches with every cheek red and visible; Apples growing large and fine, though poor eaters compared with American Apples. Much more fruit is grown indoors here than with us and a small range of houses with Peaches, grapes, etc., is not uncommon. With the little labor available the men with these in charge, try not to have anything less attractive and so are careful to thin the fruit and get the best results.

If a wall doesn't protect a garden, a hedge does or perhaps, and often, both. Hedges are mostly of holly or the common English thorn, which latter has all the advantages of height, color and impregnability. One of the most attractive hedges I have seen is of flowering Currant, which when in bloom was a beautiful sight. Hedges and walls not only surround gardens but front yards so it is disappointing to walk the streets of a city and see nothing of the front yards. These walls are, I believe, indicative of the "exclusive" spirit of the people which the action of the war is breaking down. Those of us who are stationed here realize that the English have lost all the feeling the War of '76 engendered. In many ways we are one people having in common at least the one feature of language.

The flowers grown here consist of most of the species we use for commercial purposes. The American "Tree" Carnation, as they speak of it, is rapidly replacing the unproductive if beautiful, English varieties. Roses are good though not plentiful as with us. In Scotland I saw some of the finest Sweet Peas it is possible to produce. That cool climate is just right for them. Asters which I have seen were inclined to look sick and have short stems. Perennials find a ready sale here and both florist and gardener know how to get them fine and healthy. Prices for all things seem to be on a par with ours.

Rock Gardening and Landscaping

A rock garden in a front yard 30x40 would seem a thing out of place and yet I have seen more than one such that gave a pleasing effect to the yard. I can only realize that the fine art of rock gardening in America is surely in its infancy. What I am told is the finest rock garden in Britain is in Edinburgh. It is about 2½ acres in extent and is full of almost hundreds of pleasant surprises. Another very good one is in London, at Kew Gardens, which, by the way, is all that is said for it as the most wonderful garden in the world. One doesn't need to ask why the Kew gardener has a thorough understanding of his trade after seeing the place where he was educated.

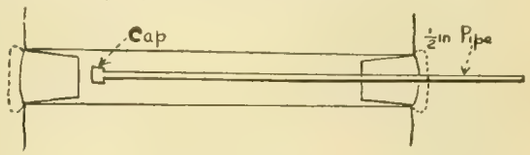
Landscaping small properties is a custom which might well be imitated in America and which would not only add beyond measure to the beauty of our cities but which would make a reliable source of income for all in the trade. No household, however small, but has its attractive garden, and one more often than not worked out on correct principles. The large estates are all landscaped with an eye to the impressive beauty of the scene. They afford many chances for the study of the fundamentals of the art.

In the analysis it appears to me that the American gardener can take many lessons from his English friend and learn to be patient, to study our possibilities, to keep everlastingly at it and make the industry come out ahead at the end of the war.

I surely hope that many florists will have the opportunity to study the methods of this country. They will not only be pleasantly surprised at many things they see but also go back to the United States with a firm conviction that there is no place like home.

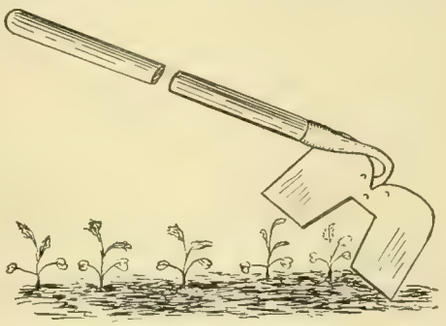
To Remove a Flue Plug

When a flue gives out in a tubular boiler the usual way to stop the water is to plug it with an iron plug made for the purpose. Sometimes no iron plugs are on hand and wooden ones are used. These generally burn down level with the boiler sheets and it requires a lot of chiseling to remove them, an expensive operation when a boiler maker is paid to do it. An easy and simple way to remove these plugs is to bore an inch auger hole in the plug where the boiler is usually cleaned from. Use a ratchet brace or extension bit for making the hole. Then with a piece of ½in. pipe with a cap on the end knock out the back plug; reverse the pipe and knock out the plug with the hole in it.—HILD BROS., Lake Forest, Ill.



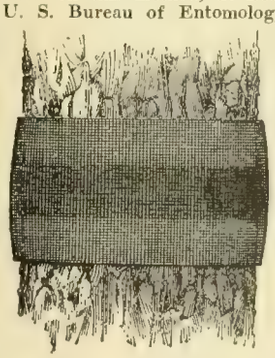
Hoe for Small Plants

The advantage of the hoe shown in the illustration over the ordinary hoe is that it is much more satisfactory for small plants; for instance, Turnips, Beets, Radishes, etc., as it enables you to hoe on both sides of the row with one operation, and at the same time do whatever thinning is necessary. It also permits you to cut out the weeds which grow too closely to the plants to be safely cut with an ordinary hoe. This improved hoe, as will be seen from the illustration, is made by cutting a piece out of the blade of a regular hoe.—CHAS. A. BLACK, JR.



To Destroy Moths on Trees

When the codling moth larva has done its best to destroy the appearance of the ripest and rosiest fruits it can find, it seeks a place to spin a cocoon, and for this purpose it generally crawls up or down a tree trunk. Hence the usual method of trapping the moth is to wrap a band of burlap around the tree trunk. An improvement on this method, devised by E. H. Sigler, of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, employs a wire screen over the burlap band to form a trap into which the larva enters and spins its cocoon, but from which it cannot escape as a moth.



A burlap band covered with a wire screen to catch the larvæ of destructive moths

To make the trap, strips of burlap 6in. wide are folded into three thicknesses. The loose bark from the lower branches and trunk of the tree is removed. A strip of this burlap is folded once around the trunk and held in place by large tacks, driven in such a way that the edge projects about ¼in. beyond the burlap. Black-painted wire screening, with 12 meshes to the inch, is then cut into strips 6in. wide, and the edge of each strip is folded twice, allowing ¼in. to each fold.

The strip of screening should be long enough to allow for an overlap of three to four inches when placed around the tree over the burlap. It is tacked to the tree so that both the upper and lower edges fit snugly against the bark. The projecting tacks used to fasten the burlap prevent the wire from pressing against the cloth. To make sure that no moths can escape through the openings along the edges of the trap or along the flap, a thin coating of pitch tar may be used.

The traps may be placed on the tree during the Winter or in the Spring, not later than one month after the petals have dropped.—Popular Science Monthly.

Boston Ferns

Stock which has been grown in benches for the past six or eight weeks is ready now to be potted. If small plants are on hand these can be planted out to take the place of the larger ones. Bench grown plants carefully lifted hardly show the effects of planting and in just a few days are ready for the store trade. A better way is to give them a liberal sized pot and keep them in the greenhouse for a few weeks. If given plenty of room they will keep on growing into money. As soon as the frost finishes the flowers outdoors every florist has more or less call for Bostons again. Those who don't grow their own plants will find the present the best time to stock up well.

Late Sown Perennials

Sometimes we start out early with the sowing of the bi and perennials but something will happen one way or another and we have to resow certain things. Before we know it the Summer is over and frosty nights the rule. To plant small or late sown perennial seedlings into the open field after the middle of September is risky. The plants won't have a chance to become re-established and grow into strong enough plants to stand a severe Winter. Instead of transplanting more than is needed a better way is to make use of a coldframe. With glass protection later on the plants will keep on growing when the ones in the field are at a standstill. Such plants are bound to overwinter in good shape. Don't grow more than are actually needed. Save time, labor and room, all three important and more so than ever of late.

From Summer to Winter Conditions

Avoid a Low Temperature and Excess Moisture

To postpone starting to fire as long as possible at this time of year in order to save coal is apt to be expensive, whether in the Rose, Carnation or 'Mum house. After weeks of daily watering, a few cool nights without firing is bound to create trouble. Excess moisture combined with a low temperature is bad for almost any greenhouse plant. By early firing isn't meant to close every door and ventilator and get all the return pipes hot or run the houses up to 55 or 60 deg. As we change from Summer to Winter conditions outdoors, it is necessary to keep a close watch on the weather and temperature for Carnations and 'Mums and general greenhouse stock. For the next few weeks 50 deg. or thereabouts should be maintained. 'Mums, Violets and Mignonette are better off with less, but as long as there is plenty of ventilation on the houses no harm is being done to any of these during September with a night temperature of from 45 to 50 deg. For most plants firing over cool nights or dark, cold days always means giving a crack of air along with it to prevent a soft growth. The small grower who has no fireman will find it pays him to start a fresh fire late in the evening. With a little practice a fire can be started and enough coal put on to warm up a part of the pipes sufficiently to take the chill and excess moisture out of the houses. That's all that's necessary; the stock will appreciate it.

Looking Ahead to Easter

We are likely to have a Hydrangea Easter in 1919. Hydrangeas can be sold to every patron who wants a flowering plant, then even if you have no Lilies, Azaleas, Rhododendrons or Ramblers grown from Dutch stock, but on account of a shortage of so many important Easter plants, Hydrangeas are bound to be in extra heavy demand and it is indeed fortunate that those French varieties came out when they did, for we no longer are confined to just one but have several to choose from. With Easter coming in the last week of April next year, growers with a shortage of coal and those who have to get along with 50 per cent. screenings can get their plants in good time. If you have field plants on hand the sooner they are potted up the better, the object is to have the plants become established in the pots before cold weather sets in so they will become fairly pot bound this Fall. This will make it that much easier to get the plants in flower early and with better foliage. Make use of a liberal sized pot and good soil and drainage, pot firm and don't disturb any more roots than possible, place the potted plants in a frame, water well and keep shaded a little for a few days and during the first cold snap protect with sash. In other words keep the plants growing as long as possible. They will lose their foliage soon enough afterward and especially if kept a little on the dry side.

Planning Ahead

Start Now for Next Year

While we are living in times just now when the unexpected keeps on happening and even the most optimistic of us has his doubts about predicting just how good the bedding plant business will be in the Spring of 1919, for all of that if we expect to do business at all we must be prepared. The present is none too soon to get busy. No matter what crop we intend growing usually many months are required to turn out almost anything.

With bedding plants enough stock has to be brought inside before frost in order to have plants to propagate from. To take up a few Salvias, Ageratums, Heliotropes, Cupheas, Petunias and almost anything else doesn't mean a great deal of labor and expense. If for any reason they are not wanted later on it is an easy matter to throw them out. I suggest to stock up well and prepare the same as usual as far as possible considering shortage of labor. While it isn't very likely that conditions will be normal again by next Spring there is reason for the average out-of-town florist to expect a fair business as long as he depends upon a retail trade. Nothing whatever is gained by letting things go. To have a complete assortment of bedding plants ready by May 20 means to start at it now. You can't put it off until March or April. If you should see fit to make a different arrangement between now and then not much harm will have been done.

Poinsettia Cultural Notes

We are nearing the critical time for the Poinsettias. Let the plants have a hot spell and just a few cool, damp nights and you will notice the first batch of yellow leaves; perhaps no other plant is more sensitive as to changes in temperature at this time of year or from now on up to the time the bracts are ready to be cut. One may see them, in the West Indies or far enough South where chilly nights are unknown up to Christmas, with foliage down to the ground and 6ft. to 8ft. stems, but on the Pacific Coast where a snappy night frost is thrown in for good measure now and then and they grow just as high and the bracts as large and beautifully colored, but the foliage usually is very scarce and lacks color. That is enough to show us they like an even temperature. This holds good under glass. Watch out for cold nights. You may not want to heat up the whole place but the Poinsettias should have about 60 deg. Stock not well established is more in need of it than bench grown plants. Without heat you can't grow good Poinsettias. Any florist who requires only a limited number of plants for Chrismas and hasn't his stock on hand will do better by letting the specialist grow the plants for him until ready for the counter unless he has a warm house to grow them in. To provide heat for only the Poinsettias won't pay.

Nobody Sticks

The janitorship at the city library goes begging and it is a job that pays $60 per month. In the past eleven months 13 different parties have started to take care of that job. Every one of them has suddenly disappeared, and when finally located they had secured better employment somewhere else. Finally a stranger was induced to try the work. Being hardly dressed suitably for a position of that kind he was furnished a new suit of clothes. He worked a half day and disappeared without even asking pay for his services. Independence (Kan.) Reporter.

The above is so typical of the help situation (and not confined to unskilled labor particularly) and expresses so closely the situation in which practically all employers find themselves that we could not resist the temptation to reproduce the item.

The Pathos of Distance

In England and France I have seen things which I wish could be burned into the conscience of every business man in the United States. I have seen factories in ruins, office buildings blown into bits, commercial districts, miles in extent, lying deserted and silent, grass growing in the streets like places of the dead—everything that years, perhaps hundreds of years of patient industry had built up and passed on as a heritage from father to son—all vanished.

We in America have known nothing like this. We can know nothing like it. Thanks to our Allies, these experiences will be kept from us. That factory of yours in New England, that mine of your neighbor's in Michigan, that farm I own in Iowa—they are being protected today by the untold sacrifices of the soldiers, the business men, the women of England and France.

Why then should we complain? Why should we protest that our business is ruined? Why should we bewail lessened profits, cavil at high prices, inconveniences, hard conditions? Why should we rage at the disaster that overtakes our business?

Our business? Our profits? Our lives? Good God, will we ever open our eyes to see the truth? Can we ever repay the debt we owe? The time has come for us, the commercial men of this country, to relieve our French and British Allies overseas of their appalling burden. Their soldiers are now our soldiers, as truly as if they wore our uniform; and our boys are theirs.—E. T. Meredith in The Nation's Business for August.

Conversion of Liberty Bonds

The privilege of conversion which arose in consequence of the issue of 4 per cent. bonds of the Third Liberty Loan will expire on November 9 next and under existing law can not be extended or renewed. Delay in exercising the privilege will overburden the banks and the Treasury Department by congesting all conversions at the last moment. It may result in many cases in the loss of the privilege of conversion altogether. Holders are strongly advised to exchange coupon bonds for registered bonds in order to protect themselves against the risk of loss, theft, and destruction. The banks as a matter of patriotic service, will doubtless all assist bondholders in converting and registering their bonds.

Worms Attacking Iris Roots

Under this heading an inquiry from a subscriber appeared in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 17, page 245. This was answered by Prof. W. E. Britton of the Conn. Agri. Exp. Sta., New Haven. The following reply from an expert Iris grower of long experience will doubtless be of much interest. Mr. Farr states that he has given the subject much study.

The Iris root borer Macronoctua onusta is one of the hawk moths, which flies at night. It is similar in appearance and size to the common dusty miller, except in color, which is a rusty black. It lays its eggs in the tips of the Iris leaves, and is generally observed about the first or second week in May, just as the buds are beginning to make their appearance.

The minute worm, about ⅛in. long, can be detected by the little spots where the eggs were laid, and the slimy appearance of the inside edge of the leaves, where the worms are at work. The worm gradually works its way down toward the base of the leaves, increasing in size. By the time the buds are beginning to open, the worms will be found 2in. or 3in. above the base of the leaves; at this time it is about ¾in. to 1in. long, and about 1-16in. in diameter. By the first of July the larvæ will be well down in the rhizomes, fully developed, about 1½in. long and ¼in. in diameter. They are then very destructive, entirely eating out the center of the rhizomes, causing the roots to rot and the foliage to turn yellow. By the first of September they will have entirely disappeared, having gone down into the ground beneath the Iris roots, and become dark brown pupas, about ¾in. in length, where they remain until Spring, emerging again as moths.

In view of the habits of this pest the destruction and burning of foliage is of no benefit, there being no eggs to destroy in the late Fall. In a small garden the remedy is simple. In the early part of the season cut away the tips of the leaves below the point where they are affected, and as each leaf affected can easily be seen, it takes but a short time to go over a large plot. Later in the season, by pulling the leaves apart and opening the foliage, the worms can easily be dectected and killed. After they have gotten down into the rhizomes, the only remedy is to dig up the roots and replant. Young plants are not often attacked; the most destruction occurs in old clumps, which are often completely destroyed.

Where Irises begin to decay and rot at the base of the plants, in nine cases out of ten the trouble is mistaken for the fungous disease commonly called the Iris rot, whereas nearly always it is the worms that are causing the rot. With the fungous disease just mentioned, the crown rots at the surface of the ground, and gives off a very offensive smell. This disease can be checked by spraying with a solution of permanganate of potash, used strong enough to make the water a deep pink. BERTRAND H. FARR.

A Holland bulb house reports that quantities of bulbs are being converted into starch for home consumption, Hyacinths and Narcissi being used particularly for this work. This sets up the possibility of accentuating shortages here, unless prices make it worth while for the Hollanders to ship to America.

European Notes

Beets and Mangels have been somewhat of a trouble to us this season, but so far as the latter crop is concerned the finish promises to be better than we dared to expect. The copious rains early in the month not only cleaned the plants from vermin but also infused new vigor into plants that were sufficiently responsive to their influence. This has considerably enlarged the size of the seed bolls and in every way improved their appearance and quality. As stocks of the most popular varieties are very low this is welcome news. The very limited acreage will keep the price up to its present level if there is an average demand.

As regards table Beet only the long, late varieties have benefited to the same extent and they also had suffered less from the frosts and drought. The early globe-shaped sorts suffered more in every way and the crop is both small and unsatisfactory. Growers are fighting shy of his culture for another season, but Mangel can be placed without much difficulty if one is disposed to pay the price demanded.

The copious rains referred to previously are responsible for quite an appreciable shrinkage in our deliveries of Turnip seed. The drought had made the stems and pods so brittle that they were easily broken by the heavy rains and as a consequence the fields from which the crop has been taken closely resembles a lawn.

Although very few references to flower seeds have been made of late in these notes it must not be supposed that the culture has been entirely neglected. The increage under cultivation is considerably less than formerly, but a fair supply of the popular sorts is still being grown and up to the present the outlook is fairly satisfactory. Pansy is an exception to the rule; the supplies, especially of the choicer strains, are very limited. The regular growers are engaged in sterner duties, and the pickers are concerned in the collection of the necessaries of life.

William Boyd Currie of Milwaukee, Wis., was a recent visitor, being on his way to take up duties with the American Army branch of the Y. M. C. A. in France. Other visitors will be welcome.

The French and Dutch Bulb Situation

As regards the arrival of French bulbs, there has been no change in the situation since last week. In all probability no more French bulbs will arrive in this country before Oct. 15 to 30. One of the largest of the French bulb exporters, writing under date of Aug. 21 from Ollioules, France, to one of the largest bulb importers in the city says in effect that the steamer which was expected to sail from Marseilles about Aug. 12 carrying a fair proportion of the crop of French bulbs, was at the last moment replaced by another steamer, which sailed without any bulbs aboard and that practically the entire crop of French bulbs is now at Marseilles under the sheds on the pier of the Fabre line. However, it is believed that there is little danger of the bulbs suffering any damage from the delay in shipping as it is the belief that they have been stored with reasonable care. It is expected that a steamer sailing toward the last of September will bring these bulbs, but as the whole matter with regard to what cargo the steamers shall carry is now under Government control no certain information as to what steamer will carry the bulbs now on the pier, and when she will sail is given out. We may add to the gist of the matter, in this letter as just given, that the best time any of the Fabre line steamers bringing bulbs last year made from Marseilles to an Atlantic port was from 18 to 21 days.

In the matter of Dutch bulbs a cablegram to one of the largest importers in New York, received Sept. 17, from Holland says that a shipment of "baby" Gladioli has been made via England, and that shipments of early Dutch bulbs have arrived in England on their way to this country. The same importers who received the above cablegram say that there appears to be no difficulty between England and Holland as regards the latter country being allowed to ship its bulbs to this country via England. Furthermore the American agents of a steamship company today, Sept. 17, informed these importers that a steamer bringing Dutch bulbs via England was expected to arrive at an Atlantic port at an early date.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., Inc., 52-54 Vesey st., has begun its bi-weekly Autumn auction sales and will continue them through the season. These sales, which are held on Tuesday and Friday of each week, opening at 11 a.m., drew this week a fair attendance of buyers.

end; he is now sergeant in the mess department.

John Degnan, manager of Winterson's Seed Store, takes pleasure in exhibiting his registration card. He will not be 45 until October and came within a month of exemption from the registration of Sept. 12.

A. Miller of the American Bulb Co. reports a good sale of Freesias and Callas. Albert Koehler, secretary of the company, registered in the new draft call of Sept. 12. The sympathy of Mr. Koehler's many friends is extended to him on the recent death of his father. A. Miller, president of the firm, registered in the previous call but is in a deferred classification. The company has received its first shipment of Holland bulbs through England and these are on display on the retail counters.

The W. W. Barnard Co. reports the delay of a French steamer on which bulbs from that country are en route. It is probable that these will not arrive until the beginning of October.

On the special committees of the American Seed Trade Ass'n the following Chicago seedsmen have been appointed by President F. W. Bolgiano: Leonard H. Vaughan, standardizing of field seeds; resolutions, Chas. Hollenbach; customs and tariffs, J. C. Vaughan, chairman.

It was with great regret that the trade learned of the recent death of Mrs. Edward S. Leonard, wife of Edward S. Leonard, sec'y of the Leonard Seed Co. Mrs. Leonard was operated on for appendicitis about six weeks ago and apparently got along well for about two weeks when complications set in. She died on the morning of Sept. 5 and the funeral took place on Sept. 7.

Wisconsin Seed Notes

The Green Bay Seed and Feed Co. of Green Bay is a new concern just organized to engage in business there. C. A. Olsen of Milwaukee is the organizer and manager. The company will lease the building 123 North Washington st. Wholesale and retail distribution of seeds and feeds will be carried on by the new company, which will make a specialty of Clover seed, and will handle Timothy and dried Peas, as well as a full line of all field and garden seed. A new mill for cleaning seed will be installed and the building will be thoroughly overhauled to suit the needs of the company. Mr. Olsen was for several years engaged in buying and selling seed for the Courteen Seed Co. of Milwaukee. The Green Bay Ass'n of Commerce assisted the company in securing the location for its business.

A new seed company, the Breckheimer Seed house, has been organized in Madison, Wis. It will be opened this Fall by Matthias Breckheimer, president and treasurer of the Breckheimer Brewing Co. The new business will occupy a portion of the brewing company's property.

The Proceedings of the 1918 convention of the American Seed Trade Ass'n, held June 18, 19 and 20 at Chicago, have just been issued. The publication runs to 128 pages and contains the usual reports, as well as details of the interesting discussions that took place at the convention.

Parcel Post Packages for Great Britain

The Post Office Dept. calls attention to the necessity of full and precise details on customs declarations, for packages to be cleared from the United States through the British Customs, in order to prevent delay in transit.

Kentucky Grass Seeds

A better demand is opening in Kentucky and vicinity for field seeds, although buying hasn't been as heavy as inquiries due to rain in August and early September. This delayed plowing, but conditions are improving. During the past few days there has been active shipping. Farmers are asking very high prices for seed. There is no immediate demand for Blue or Orchard grass seed at $1.50 a bushel and up for the former uncleaned and $2 for the latter. This forces the price of recleaned seed to about $2.75, and $2.50 respectively.

These high prices coupled with lack of export demand has kept the crops in the farmers' hands. Though many buyers would speculate on low priced seed no one is interested in high priced. Buying is now for immediate demand only. It is believed, however, that a better demand will occur toward the end of the month, or in early October.

The best quality crop of Clover seed in years is on the market from Southern Indiana, and the season is at its height. Early deliveries in car lots are quoted at $17 and $18 a bushel.

Excellent Red Top seed has been moving from Southern Illinois at 12½ to 13c. a pound although the earlier market was 13½ to 14c. in car lots. Farmers are inclined to sell such seed at around 12c., which makes recleaned seed come to 12½ to 13c. About 75 per cent. of the red top crop is out of the farmers' hands. Dealers are reselling to Kentucky farmers at 14c. for Fall planting.

There has been some movement of Timothy seed, which is picking up steadily. At present dealers are getting $4.50 to $4.75 a bushel.

Onion sets are opening up nicely in Jefferson County. The crop is of fine quality. Though high priced there isn't much speculation, buying being for immediate consumption or to cover old contracts. Farmers are getting $8 a barrel for yellow sets, and $10 a barrel for white, on basis of 160 pound barrel. Resale prices are on 32 pound bushel, with yellow sets quoted at $2.50 a bushel immediate delivery, or $2.85 a bushel January delivery. White sets are quoted at $2.95 immediate, and $3.30 January. Some fair shipments are moving to the South for immediate use, but the speculators have gotten cold feet, and are not dabbling in sets to any extent, or making any efforts to corner the market. Cornering attempts have been disastrous in the past.

Tattlings on the Trade

State Fair week brought many buyers from the country to the Louisville seed houses. This increased the demand and inquiry materially. The Hall Seed Co. had a display of seeds and implements at the fair grounds.

Harvey Hays, of the Louisville Seed Co., recently returned from Illinois, where he inspected Red Top conditions. He visited the company's seed cleaning plant at Flora.

The Lewis Seed & Implement Co. reports a heavy run of Fall business, seeds and implements both moving freely and early. Farmers are not taking chances this year on traffic congestion.

The Chambers Seed Co. with a capital stock of $50,000, was recently incorporated by Sam R. Chambers, Kirby Chambers and others, to do a general seed jobbing business and operate a local warehouse. The Chambers' for many years were with the Lewis people, the house then being known as Lewis & Chambers. Two incorporated companies succeeded the old one.

W. N. Arterburh, of the Wood Stubbs Co., reports that business is very active, but that the company is having much trouble in getting deliveries out due to the shortage of men, and inability to secure help in the house.

When Foch Says "Smash Em" the American Expeditionary Forces will smash them if they are equipped and ready. Foch hasn't said it yet—he isn't ready. But when he is —

Do you know what that hour, that moment will mean to the world? Foch is driving the enemy back to the point where they must and surely will make their critical stand. Then, the last battle of the Great War will be fought.

Either the Allies or the Germans will win—a decisive victory. It will be the Allies if Foch, when the moment comes, can call to the aid of his armies the great power, the fresh strength and the crushing initiative of the American Expeditionary Forces—if he can rely on an army fully equipped, morally backed by the money—the power to fight—of the United States of America.

Foch is going to say it soon—"Smash 'Em!" What kind of an answer is he going to get from our army, our American boys? He's going to get the right answer—the decisive, smashing, final blow! He's going to get it if you and you and you and all of us respond to-day and all this year with Bonds and Stamps—the money to give that answer when Foch says "We've crushed their line, we've crumpled their defense, now American soldiers 'Smash 'Em.'" Gentlemen, think this over. Then smash them with the biggest sale of Bonds and Stamps since this drive started.

Dandelion a cool house crop easy to grow, excellent for greens Aphids easy to control by early fumigation with tobacco mint needs Lettuce conditions, is in limited demand—Fall plowing will improve the texture of heavy soils, kill insects that hibernate in sod, insure decay of organic matter before spring.

Dandelion as a Cool Crop

Dandelion, grown to a limited extent in greenhouses and frames in the East, is excellent for greens. It is far superior in size and quality to the common Dandelion growing wild in the fields. Seed of improved varieties may be secured from most of the large seedhouses.

Dandelion is well known as an extremely hardy crop; it will grow well at Lettuce temperatures or a few degrees lower. Near Boston, it is grown in cheaply constructed houses and frames. Sash houses are sometimes built, and as it is a low growing crop and does not require much head room, low lean-to houses may be used to advantage.

The usual custom is to sow the seed outdoors in the Spring; the roots or crowns are dug in the Fall for forcing. In this way good sized roots are secured. If there is any greenhouse space which growers have not planned to use this Winter, the seed may be sown now and good sized plants grown for planting in such houses.

The soil should be moderately fertile, although Dandelion will grow better on soils suitable for Lettuce. The crop needs a constant supply of moisture. Plants may be set as close as 4x8in. apart. While this crop may not be grown very extensively, there may be some growers who can use it to good advantage especially near cities where the foreign population is accustomed to eating the wild supply of this vegetable during the Summer.

Control the Aphids on Lettuce

Aphids or green plant lice are very fond of greenhouse Lettuce. When cool weather comes on they seek their wintering quarters and many come in from outdoors. Florists have to combat them on their flowering crops and should therefore watch the Lettuce also since this is one of the first greenhouse vegetables to be visited by the pest.

Fumigation with tobacco smoke will be just as effective in this case as with flowering crops. There is probably less danger of injuring Lettuce with tobacco smoke, so the smoke should be heavy to make sure to

Mint as a Greenhouse Crop

Mint is a cool crop that may be grown under the same conditions as required for Lettuce. The crop is not difficult to grow. Plants may be started from seed and handled similar to Lettuce. Growers who have it on hand usually plant a new section by using portions of roots just starting new plants. These are given a rather shallow covering of soil. The crop may be propagated also by stem cuttings.

While there is a limited demand for this crop, some growers may be able to make it profitable. Mint is popular for use in seasoning and flavoring. The low houses may be used since Mint is a low growing crop, and may be planted on the ground level.

Fall Plowing Outdoors

Before the ground freezes it will be a good plan to plow fields where the soil is inclined to be too heavy and where the land is rather level. Steep slopes should remain in sod over the Winter on account of excess erosion that might follow from Fall plowing.

Freezing and thawing improve the physical condition of Fall plowed ground, especially with heavy soils. Land which has been in sod for a long time, if Fall plowed will give time over the Winter for the sod to decay and the soil will be in better condition next Spring for a crop. Another advantage is that, injurious insects which have gone down into the sod for the Winter, will be exposed and be killed by freezing.

The ground should be left in the rough after plowing. It will absorb more moisture during the Winter than unplowed ground. Such land may be prepared for a crop earlier in the Spring than land that is left in sod over Winter. Another advantage of Fall plowing is that it relieves the pressure of Spring work when growers are usually very busy. Manure plowed under in the Fall will be well rotted by Spring although manure is not usually applied in the Fall to extremely sandy soils which have a loose subsoil. When sod land is Fall plowed it is a good plan to lime this land in the Fall, but manure and lime should not be applied at the same time. If manure is applied in the Fall, it is better to apply lime in the Spring.

Potash and the Crops

Robert S. Bradley, chairman of the board of directors of the American Agricultural Corporation, says there is no better illustration of the influence of German propaganda than the exaggerated opinion held by the American public as to the value of potash as a fertilizer. "For many years before the war," he says, "the German Potash Syndicate expended millions of dollars in this country in booming the potash creed until our farmers became obsessed with the idea that potash exerted an almost magical influence on crop production.

"In Dec., 1917, Professor Roth, of the Griefswald University, was quoted as making the claim that America had entered the war in order to secure the potash deposits of Alsace, as American crops would be in perpetual jeopardy without potash.

"Since 1914 the United States has been unable to import potash from Germany, and as we have produced but a small fraction of the amount normally used for agricultural purposes, fertilizers have contained little or no potash. This is especially true of the last two years, and yet this country has in sight today the largest crops ever produced in her history, while Germany's crops are, from all accounts, far below their normal yields before the war, though she has doubtless used excessive quantities of potash in an effort to minimize the effects of the dearth of phosphates. Other countries also have grown normal crops since the war without the use of potash.

"This emphasizes the fact that phosphoric acid, in the form of superphosphate, is far more important to crop production than potash, as was long ago demonstrated in this country, when phosphatic fertilizers were used successfully for over 20 years before the advent of potash. Germany has no mineral phosphates with which to make superphosphates, being dependent upon the United States, Algeria and Tunis for her supply of this basic raw material.

"While potash is valuable as a fertilizer for strengthening the stalk and improving the quality of some crops, phosphoric acid is the essential element for the production of the grain and fruit of all crops.

"Germany needs our phosphates far more than we need her potash, and the longer the war lasts the more anxious she will be to get our phosphates in exchange for potash."—Market Growers' Journal.

Witloof, or French Endive

A crop which being grown cool, can add to your earnings this coming Winter

During the last five or more years "French Endive," or, as it is more correctly called, "Witloof," has been gaining in popularity as a late Fall and Winter salad. It often sells for 50c. to 75c., or even $1 a pound.

As with most other new things it is thought to be hard to grow. This is a mistake. The plants are as easy to raise as Parsnips or Salsify, for the seed may be sown at the same time, the plants cultivated and the roots dug and stored in the same way and with no more labor or risk.

In late Fall dig up so as to save at least 8in. of each main root. Discard roots smaller than ¾in. in diameter, cut off the tops so as to leave stubs of the leaf stalks about an inch long. Store in a cold, moist cellar, or a "pit" such as used for Potatoes or Turnips. From this storage remove roots for forcing as needed.

Preparatory to forcing trim each root to an even length—all 8in., 9in. or 10in.—so they will be uniformly deep when placed in forcing quarters.

Production of heads may be done out of doors, under the greenhouse benches, in the cellar or other convenient place. The cooler the place the slower the growth, but when the temperature gets much above 50 deg. the results will not be as satisfactory as when near that temperature or somewhat below. Beneath the bench of the Lettuce or similarly cool house is an excellent place.

Whether grown indoors or out the roots are stood vertically. Out of doors they may be covered with earth which must be kept from freezing by manure piled 6in. to 10in. deep over them. This should also permit reaching the heads without difficulty. Indoors boxes 15in. to 18in. deep are often used. Butter tubs are excellent because they are not too heavy to handle when full of damp sand and roots.

In the bottom of a butter tub with drainage holes in the bottom, place a couple of inches of clean sand, next press the previously trimmed roots into this sand so they practically fill the whole space. Pour in dry sand and shake the tub so the crevices will all be filled. Cover the tops about 2in. deep with more sand. Place beneath the greenhouse bench or in a cool, moist cellar. Soak the sand thoroughly with water. If the air is dry water may be needed once a week or oftener.

When little mounds of sand begin to show on the surface add an inch or two more damp sand. When they show above this sand again add more. Repeat until the tub is full. In other words by two or more applications when the mounds appear, raise the sand to a total depth of about 6in. above the crowns. When sand mounds appear above this depth of sand the heads will thus be about 6in. long. They are then ready for use. Gently turn the tub on its side and carefully remove the plants, beginning on the upper side. As each plant is removed cut the head so as to retain about ⅛in. of the top of the root. This will prevent breaking the head. After removing the sand and any defective outside leaves the heads will be ready for use or sale.

Last Winter one Long Island grower who practised the above method made a gross average income of $1 on each butter tub each time he used it. If he had not run out of roots he could have used each tub four or five times during the Winter. Last Spring when interviewed he was enthusiastic as to the profitableness of his venture.

Chicory is sown in the early Spring but roots for forcing are occasionally advertised for sale by men and firms who make a specialty of Rhubarb, Asparagus and other roots for forcing.

Club Meeting

The last meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club, held Sept. 9, was well attended and interesting. The subject was to have been cost and accounting but the meeting developed into a discussion of conditions brought about by the shortage of labor and other help and the effect that the new draft was going to have on the florist. Everyone seemed to be deeply concerned as to the outcome, some reporting that all their men of the previous draft age had been called or ordered to work at essential industries, in several instances leaving them without either teamster or chauffeur. One man said that he had two horses and two trucks on his place but no driver for either, and the only way he had of getting his flowers to the city was to have a boy carry them in a basket on the street cars.

Not only have the florists been hard hit, but many of the market gardeners are so short of help that crops are spoiling in the fields for want of someone to gather them. Cases were mentioned where the owners were called from the farm, leaving no one to care for the crops; the stock was left with neighbors to be sold for whatever it would bring and yet in face of it all everyone semed determined to do whatever was necessary to bring the war to an end, believing that the fiercer the storm the sooner it will be over. A committee was appointed to distribute flowers through the hospitals at Fort McHenry every Friday afternoon. All the members present promised to send whatever they could and it is hoped that every member will become interested in this work. The flowers are to be sent to the S. S. Pennock Co. before Friday noon.

Houston, Texas

If the enemy does not get Houston, it looks as if it will be a Crape Myrtle city. At the meeting of the Houston Hort. Society, held last Monday in the office of C. L. Brock, superintendent of parks, the movement was definitely launched. The local press had representatives present, gave good write-ups of the meeting and is showing a disposition to keep the matter before the public.

The Truth Concerning California

75 PER CENT. of the financial tragedies which have been enacted in California, during the last twenty-five years, could have been avoided had the parties who were the victims sought and heeded the advice of well informed, but disinterested, parties before investments were made. Immigrants may avoid these costly mistakes by inquiring of one who knows.

Secretary Laughlin read a paper on the beautiful shrub in all its aspects, and was instructed to write for prices on cuttings. The idea will be to plant along the sidewalk lines in the city and on the boulevards and to get people to plant in their yards, as the Oleander is treated in Galveston. President Mitchell entertained the meeting by reading a paper on observations of interest made during his recent travels, and Mr. Kerr delivered a talk on the outlook for the trade in general founded on his investigations during the S. A. F. convention.

Kerr the florist reports a lively business this week. There is the big funeral of Admiral Vann, twice a candidate for mayor and a thirty-third degree Mason. The R. C. Kerr Co. is now well along with its construction work. Its 'Mums and Roses are doing well. The season will not really open for the company however until November.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses reports a good business. He will not experiment again with Carnations, as he finds they do not do well in this climate. C. L. B.

Louisville, Ky.

The Kentucky State Fair, held in Louisville last week did much toward increasing business in all lines. Some of the Louisville florists had exhibits and considerable interest was shown. However, there were fewer of the local florists to go into the fair than in former years, because premiums hardly paid for the expense.

George Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz Co., one of the judges of the floral displays, says the displays were exceptionally good. William L. Korb, of Louisville, took the silver cup for the best design and The Nanz & Neuner Co. took first prize for the best table decoration with the C. H. Kunzman Estate, second. The latter took first for the best display of decorative plants with the Nanz & Neuner Co., second in this

The Wood Stubbs Co., of Louisville and the Jacob Schulz Co., both had very attractive displays of evergreens. While the displays were not in competition, they attracted an unusual amount of comment. Mr. Schulz states that his exhibit at the fair was the means of getting several good prospects so feels that he will profit considerably.

At the last meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists cooperative delivery was the principal topic of discussion. The matter was thoroughly discussed with the result that the following plan has been developed: Each day the various florists in the downtown section having orders for some special event will call the others in his section telling them that it is his intention of sending his delivery wagon to that particular place and those that have flowers going to the same place will allow the one delivery wagon to make deliveries for them and so on till each florist has taken care of deliveries in different parts of the city. The system has been tried and has proved a labor and a gasoline saver. The fact that each event calling for flowers usually means that some dozen or more florists are called on to make deliveries to the same place, would indicate that the system as worked out by the Louisville florists will mean a big saving in a number of ways.

Articles of incorporation were recently filed by the Walnut Hill Floral Co., of Harrodsburg, Ky., with a capital of $2,500. The incorporators are Glover Kyle, C. D. Thompson and Lou Bonta.

At a recent meeting of the Louisville Board of Park Commissioners, Harry G. Evans, who for the past 12 years has been telegraph editor of the Louisville Times, was elected as secretary of the board, succeeding James S. Phelps, who resigned to accept a position with a stock brokerage firm in Louisville. At this meeting the salary of the secretary was increased from $1800 a year to $2400.

Butler Pierson, who has been with the William Walker Co., Louisville florists for several years, has recently entered the service. At present he is stationed at Macon, Ga.

Kansas City, Mo.

W. L. Rock and M. E. Carter, of the Rock Flower Company, are members of the Seventh Regiment, National Guard, said to be the only completely equipped National Guard unit in the country. Drills are held every Friday night at Thirty-ninth street and Gillham road. The occasion always calls out a large crowd of spectators.

According to the wholesalers, business has not been so good thus far in September as in August. The draft registration has naturally held things back to a great extent. It will make business in certain lines rather quiet for the next few weeks. The sudden change in weather from hot Summer to cool has also had an effect.

Roses are getting better right along since the cool weather has given them a chance to improve. There are good showings of Russell, Ophelia, My Lady, Ward, Pink and White Killarney and a few Am. Beauty. They are selling wholesale at 3 to 10c. each. Carnations are coming in but will be scarce for a couple of weeks. Asters are nearly done for, those on the market selling for 3c. each. Gladioli are 6c. and Lilies 10 to 12c. apiece.

It is reported that owners of the Morrill Apple orchard, near Usher, on the southern line of Leavenworth county, Kansas, refused

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

a flat offer of $70,000 for the crop on the trees this year. The owners have decided to pack and market the Apples. They expect to realize $100,000. This orchard of 800 acres was set out about 14 years ago by the late Francis Goble in conjunction with former Governor E. N. Morrill of Kansas. A son of the late Governor Morrill now owns the orchard.

The trees are loaded with the late Fall and Winter fruit. Apple packers who have investigated big orchards from Omaha to Kansas City, say the Morrill orchard is one of the few in the Middle West that has a big crop this year. Many of the orchards in this section have from 30 to 50 per cent. of a crop, but this one has the largest in its history. The trees are now in full bearing.

Funeral services for Joseph T. Bird, president of the Emery, Bird, Thayer Company, who died in Colorado Springs, Sept. 8, were held Sept. 12 at the family home, Elmhurst. The services were conducted by Bishop Cameron Mann, a close personal friend of Mr. Bird. Mrs. Bird and a daughter, Miss Josephine Bird, and a few close friends of the family were the only ones who attended the services.

A memorial service, held in Grand Avenue Temple the morning of Sept. 11, was attended by 2000 employees and former employees of the company. Eulogies were delivered by the Rev. Robert Nelson Spencer, rector of Grace Episcopal church, and Henry D. Ashley, legal representative of the family. The floral offerings at the home were the most beautiful ever seen at a funeral in Kansas City and the orders were the largest. As soon as news of the death of Mr. Bird reached his friends orders poured in by wire from many parts of the country, from friends out of town. Samuel Murray's force worked three days and all night Wednesday on orders for the funeral. Other florists, too, had numerous orders. Miss Hayden, of Murray's, had charge of the arrangement of flowers at the home. All of the flowers were taken to the Mount Washington cemetery where the body was placed temporarily in the W. R. Nelson vault.

Greenwich, Conn.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society, held in Hubbards Hall, Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 13, drew a good attendance, with President P. W. Popp in the chair. One new member was elected and two proposals for membership received. Several letters were read from our soldier members describing various incidents. After a good deal of discussion it was decided that owing to the rulings of the local fuel commissioners, it will be impossible to hold the annual Fall flower show in Greenwich. The intention was to do this for the benefit of the Red Cross. Some members are much disappointed as they were working for this event. The many fine out gardeners have plenty of stock to keep them going until next Summer, but they will not be allowed to use it. Mr. Fuel Man says shut down, let the Roses, Carnations and other flowering plants freeze. I will allow you 15 tons to keep your palms and orchids warm; put them all in one house. On motion of Mr. Seeley it was decided to bring this matter before the committee of the National Association of Gardeners.

The judges for the evening were Messrs. Williamson, McAllister and Vert. Their awards were as follows: Display of Dahlias from President Popp, first; Oncidium Spec. from James Stuart, second; vase of Delphiniums from W. Graham, third; vase of Asters from J. Linane, vote of thanks; collection of cut flowers from H. Bulpitt, vote of thanks; collection of vegetables from James Stuart, first; collection of Apples from Paul Dwenger, second; Celery from J. Linane, third; from A. Brown, vote of thanks; sheafs of Rye from Paul Dwenger, highly commended; collection of fruit from James Stuart, very highly commended.

Our next meeting will be on Friday, Oct. 11, when a social entertainment will be given and light refreshments served. We expect to have prominent speakers that night. Prizes will be offered for the best collections of fruit and vegetables. JACK CONROY, Cor. Sec'y.

New Haven, Conn.

Annual Flower Show

The event of the week was the 86th annual exhibition of the New Haven County Hort. Society. The show was held in the large hall of our magnificent public library. The Board of Managers had decided that this year a special effort should be made to stimulate vegetable growing and offered prizes accordingly. The entries in these classes were very numerous, especially in the Junior classes and specimens of vegetables were shown that would do credit to any market gardener.

The vegetable exhibition was held in conjunction with the New Haven War Garden Committee under supervision of Frank J. Reveley, and great credit is due him. Mr. Frazer of Storrs College proved an efficient judge.

The flower exhibits were better and more numerous than was expected as weather conditions for a week previous to the show had not been favorable.

An excellent showing was made in the Dahlia class for 24 varieties one each, John H. Slocombe being first. He also took first or second in seven other classes. For Cactus Dahlias, 12 blooms 12 vars., A. W. Davidson of Ansonia took first, also winning first or second in six other classes. For Decorative Dahlias, 12 blooms 12 vars., C. Louis Alling of West Haven was first with a beautiful display. Mr. Alling took six firsts and four seconds. Lester B. Linsley captured first in the class for 12 duplex, one or more vars., also seven first or seconds in other classes, including the Carter Tested Seed prize for best vase of 25 seedlings of 1918. W. F. Jost the well known Dahlia shipper of East Haven had some fine specimens and took four prizes and Nathan J. Miller of Branford three prizes.

Occupying nearly all one side of the hall was the beautiful display of the East Hartford Gladioli Co., E. M. Smith, Manager. The newest and best vars. were displayed, and the exhibit was possibly one of the best ever shown in New Haven. It received many first prizes.

A highly interesting and enjoyable feature of the show was an illustrated lecture on Dahlias by Richard Vincent Jr. of White Marsh, Md. The colored slides were exceptionally fine. Mr. Vincent handled the subject in an able manner, interspersing his talk with anecdotes and witty stories.

The judges in the flower department were Mr. Vincent, Mr. Duthie of Oyster Bay, L. I., N. Y., and Mr. Scribner of the Funnell Greenhouse, Hartford.

Among other visitors was Mr. Hay of Henry A. Dreer's, Philadelphia. The visitors were taken for an auto ride to the Elm City Nurseries and other growers' places by Geo. A. Cromie, Pres. of the Society.

Mention must be made of the fine display of evergreens and other plants distributed about the entrance and through the building by E. F. Coe of the Elm City Nursery Co.

As to the florists business in general there is not much to be said: There is the usual amount of funeral work, in which mostly Asters, Gladioli, and Dahlias are being used, the bulk of this stock being local-grown. The florists are now working forward to 'Mum time for an increased demand for cut flowers.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

American Association of Nurserymen—President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

Yuccas

The name Yucca is of Indian origin, as one could readily surmise from its guttural sound. Of the dozen or more species found in this group of American plants, the ones which are of the most interest to nurserymen—principally for their hardiness—are Yucca filamentosa, Y. flaccida, Y. angustifolia and Y. gloriosa. In point of beauty of flower and foliage the last named species is the best, but unfortunately its hardiness must be questioned except for climes more equable than we can hope for in the North.

Occasionally we come across a plant of it that has stood severe tests. The writer recalls one in particular, which, with a little Winter protection of straw litter, safely weathered 15 or more seasons, and in that period flowered some three or four times. This last Winter, however, proved too much for its semi-succulent root, leaf and stalk.

Another drawback to its full usefulness in Northern gardens is the fact that its late-flowering propensities lay the flower stalk open to damage by early frosts. Its chief sphere of service, then, is for the more Southern States where the length of season is such as to enable it safely to develop and show off the superbly erect inflorescence, which under right conditions often attain a height of from 10ft. to 12ft.

Our best and most dependable sort for Northern limits is Yucca filamentosa, commonly known as "Adam's Needle," which cheers the arid month of July with its conspicuous spikes of white flowers. The plant itself is modest and unpretentious compared with the regal show of bloom it bears, and the writer would venture to say that little notice is taken of the plant when the flowers are absent.

Not a few people labor under the impression that they have to wait years for Yuccas to flower, and put them in the same category as Aloes and "Century Plants." This, of course, is erroneous, for while they are slow compared with some plants, such kinds as filamentosa and flaccida will produce flowers within five to six years from the time seed is sown; while from offsets taken from the parent plant with a little root attached, we can expect flowers in three years.

Most of the Yuccas in their native habitat are found on high and dry positions. This information at once gives us the cue as to what conditions to give them under cultivation. No list of plants for the rock garden would be complete without Yuccas. To do them full justice, however, they should have liberal space to develop good proportions. The upper ridge or plateau of the rock garden would be just the place for them. As a matter of fact, on any dry slope where, by lack of moisture, it is difficult to establish most plants, the Yuccas would be serviceable and most fitting.

In conjunction with groups of conifers (using the Yucca, of course, in the foreground) these plants are most effective, especially so during the blooming season when the bold stalks of showy white flowers are seen against the background of the higher growing Pines or Cedars, as the case may be. The foliage of the Yucca, also being evergreen, conforms at all times with that of the other plants in the group.

Edwin Matthews.

Yucca gloriosa

Yucca gloriosa is rarely seen in cultivation in the Middle States. There are two reasons for this: One is that it never seeds in the North, whatever it may do in its home in the Southern States; the other is that the propagation of it from its roots is a slow process compared with the ease with which filamentosa is raised from its seed. It is said that in its wild state gloriosa does not bear seeds, requiring artificial pollinization to produce them. However, a good propagator, by cutting up pieces of roots and starting them in a greenhouse could get a great many plants that would be available from seed. A strange feature of this Yucca is that in the South of England where it is not uncommon in gardens, it gets to be a tree in time, that is, it makes a permanent trunk, and it flowers in Midsummer, while with us it flowers when quite small, and is never seen as an arborescent tree, and, too, it flowers so late in October that frosts often catch it. Specimens 8ft. to 10ft. high are to be found in England, while here, at least about Philadelphia, where it has been in collections for half a century, it is never found except as a low bush, and flowers when but a foot or two high, then branches out from near the ground. A strange thing is that the specimen photographed was imported from England several years ago, when a tiny plant, in order to see how it would behave, and here it is doing much as ours do, making but a growth of about 2½ft. before flowering, and then flowering late in October.

Jos. Meehan.

Yucca gloriosa

Monarda didyma "Cambridge Scarlet"

No hardy flower garden is complete without the Bergamot, Oswego Tea or Bee-Balm (Monarda) as it is variously called. The bright purple form, Monarda fistulosa purpurea, is the most seen but by some it is regarded as approaching the dreaded "magenta." There is no questioning the color of the crimson form, M. didyma "Cambridge Scarlet," and the writer considers it the best of the lot. The plant grows to a height of 3ft., the flowers appearing in July, and continuing for several weeks. They are desirable for cutting though many would appreciate the plant for the "minty" foliage alone.

It appears best in the garden as a massed effect, and will grow well in partial shade as well as in direct sunlight. Achillea Ptarmica plena "The Pearl" and Lysimachia clethroides (Gooseneck) for white flowers, and Hemerocallis Thunbergii (Yellow Day Lily) and Heliopsis scabra major for yellow flowers, bloom about the same time and are desirable subjects for associate grouping. All are hardy. The Monarda is tenaciously hardy and simply refuses to be crowded out by weeds, grass or fellow plants in the border. It forms matted sods, division of which affords ample means of increasing the stock.

Discovery of Hydrangea arborescens var. grandiflora

"American Everblooming Hydrangea"

At a birthday anniversary picnic held at my home on June 30, 1904, a prominent florist told me he had lately discovered a native Hydrangea as tall as himself, 5ft. 9in., a compact bush as broad as his outstretched hands, bearing pure white flowers, 8-in. to 10in. in diameter, blooming continuously from early June until cut by Autumn frost—a combination of good points quite out of the ordinary. After allowing a margin for over-enthusiasm, I concluded it must be some plant. The gentleman said he had bought one-half of the plant, and early in July was going to dig and bring home his portion. I told him if it was my case I would employ a watchman to guard the plant until the season came to safely remove it, but he said he could not rest until he had it in his possession. When he went to dig the plant he bought the entire clump for $10, and removed it and began its propagation.

Up to this time the Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, introduced from Japan, was the only hardy Hydrangea generally grown here. This was and is a very useful and desirable flowering shrub. I think, however, its beauty and usefulness is more manifest on the Atlantic Coast, Long Island, etc., where there is more moisture in the atmosphere, than inland where dearth and heat combine to interfere with moisture loving plants.

This new native American, "made in America" Hydrangea was first called "American Everblooming Hydrangea," and well deserves this title, as it is more nearly everblooming than any other flowering shrub that I am acquainted with. We have in this town, village, or city, hundreds of clumps of this shrub, three to five years planted, that stand three to five feet high, with six or more fresh flower heads besides those that are fading, and the plant will continue to furnish blooms, more or less, until late October. These clumps contain 75 to 100 shoots by actual count, and the bushes will average 5ft. to 6ft. high and about 3ft. across. This plant does not form as much of a woody shrub as Hydrangea r. g. [The notes which follow appeared in great part in our issue of July 27; they are repeated here so that the article may be entire.] It is customary here to cut the plants back to 6in. or 8in. in February or early March, leaving four to six shoots full length for early June bloom. The young shoots come up rapidly, up to 3ft. and 4ft., and are in gorgeous bloom by the last of June, standing now (about end of July), 3½ft. to 5ft., with flower heads 6in. to 10in. in diameter.

This Hydrangea grows readily from 8in. cuttings of ripe wood taken during the latter part of Winter, rooting nearly as readily as Currant or California Privet. Cuttings often bloom the first year in the cutting bed.

This type Hydrangea arborescens is native in moist ravines in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and south to Georgia and Alabama. I have sold plants of it to customers in N. W. Canada and Montreal, so it may be called hardy. E.

"Plant Another Tree"

"Do plant another tree,
Although you cannot know who will enjoy its shade,
Remember that your forbears planted some for you."

As a 43 year veteran of the trade I send the above as being my sentiment in the matter. In some countries the law requires anyone who fells a tree to plant two in its stead which is right, but their care should also be included, so far as possible.

Let not the coming generations point their finger of scorn toward us and say we not only wasted one of nature's bountiful resources, but also spent our forbears' inheritance for ourselves, neglecting those who are to come after us in the matter of Nature's most beautiful gift, the trees, indispensable for the use and enjoyment of mankind.

Yes, yes, by all means, "Plant Another Tree."

F. F. Wiebe.

Victory Loan Drive!

The fourth Liberty Loan drive which will begin Sept. 28 will open under more fortunate auspices than any of its predecessors. Our troops are not merely giving a good account of themselves but are justifying all the confidence we have hitherto placed in them. Therefore the new drive should be the most wonderfully successful of all. Florists have special cause to push this loan, not merely because many of their sons and brothers have joined the Colors but because ours is a business peculiarly peaceful and therefore the more worthy to fight for. Now is the time to consolidate effort to make this the Victory Loan Drive.

What is Advertising?

Advertising is the power of an idea multiplied.

But how multiplied?

By its continued use it becomes a force, more or less unconscious, yet at the same time growing in its purpose so that when the article or material you desire is needed, the manufacturer or dealer's name who handles or makes the object comes to you instantly.

When you can create this thought in the public mind you are advertising in the true sense and also getting proper results from the efforts made.

Publicity and advertising go hand in hand and, therefore, the advertiser who thinks in terms of publicity enters into a channel of broad business thoughts as, without advertising, your business is merely moving with the tide; but in these days of strenuous efforts we must move faster if we expect to keep up with the new stride now necessary to assist in doing our share so that the returns to the U. S. revenue coffers will put the florists business on the level to which it is justly entitled.

To these progressive florists who pause and reflect before entering into an advertising campaign, whether it be large or small, I say, go to it now stronger than ever, regardless of the thought of not being able to get flowers enough to sell. If you create the demand for flowers you will find material to sell.

Be progressive and optimistic in your thoughts and action and the rest comes easy. Also, in these days of strife, we must learn the new curriculum and use instead of the three R's, as in the days of old, the three C's, Cool, Calm, Collected, and, being in this mood and using the modern weapon, "Advertising" to help your business, flowers ought to be in greater demand than ever, providing you adhere to it.

Make up your mind this season to try it out, stick to it persistently and success will crown your efforts.

By using our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," whenever and wherever possible, on all advertising of every character, whether stationery, in newspapers, or otherwise, its accumulativeness will bring you the desired effect.

On the Benefit of Keeping a Stiff Upper Lip

Psychology furnishes one of the most interesting of studies.

Bankers, business men in many walks, speculators, often find a way to make a good turn through an understanding of its mysterious workings when its development affects an entire community.

Last week we had a registration day, the ultimate effect of which on general industries may not be felt for months to come; for all that, in New York and quite likely in all our larger cities, average business men acted as though they were facing some impending calamity in that they would discuss nothing, start nothing, do nothing. Trade was dead. Students of psychology, on the contrary, understanding this was but a temporary condition, a mental anachronism which would endure but a few days, were able to put through deals which brought them in the best of returns.

The point we wish to make is that if we are to be successful we must not allow doubt, hesitation, fear of the unknown, to enter into our plans for the future. Exercise reasonable precautions but do not allow yourself to fall into a grove of despair, don't wail, don't whine, but just go ahead to the best of your ability.

Following right on the heels of this peculiar week came the news of the glorious victory at St. Mihiel in which the first American army struck a mighty blow, a blow which has made its force felt all the way to Berlin, and one, the results of which afford us reasonable belief has produced throughout Germany a quite strong impression that with Uncle Sam now on the job in force, coupled with the successes of the revitalized allied forces, its possibilities for the winning of the war are fading fast away. The recent and unexpected great successes of the past few weeks give rise to a further reasonable belief that before snow flies in Dec., 1919, the war will be won or as good as won.

Surely then, with every prospect in our favor, great crops and great earnings by the classes who spend most freely, we should be well able to make both ends meet (and do our duty by our Government as well) in spite of handicaps, throughout a comparatively short period of time.

The auguries are such that every man is warranted in planning to run his business this coming Winter just as fully up to the maximum as his circumstances admit, conscious that soon, almost before he realizes it is upon him, peace and plenty will be with us, and we all the better men and women for having gone through our trials without fear or falter.

N. Y. Federation Hort. Societies and Floral Clubs

Syracuse N. Y., Sept. 11.

The meeting was called to order at 2:30 p.m., with President F. R. Pierson in the chair. Twenty-one delegates were present from the various affiliated societies. The records of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer reported funds on hand to the amount of $230.46. A report of progress on the horticultural building was made by the president. In view of the changes recently made in the State Fair Commissioners, it was deemed advisable that a committee be appointed to appear before the present commissioners with a request that the horticultural building be the next on the program of construction after the war. The following were appointed on this committee: Dr. Erl Bates, Syracuse; Charles Vick, Rochester; George B. Hart, Rochester.

President Pierson called on Prof. Ralph W. Curtis of the landscape art department of Cornell University for an expression of opinion as to what landscape effects would make the setting of the new horticultural building most pleasing. Professor Curtis stated that he would like to make a general study of the whole plan of buildings and grounds and submit the results of his study to the federation at a later date. It was moved and carried that Prof. Curtis be made a member of the committee appointed on Sept. 14, 1916, to make a study of plans for the horticultural building. The personnel of this committee is President Pierson; Vice-president Bates, Prof. D. Lumsden, W. H. Workman, George A. Thorpe and Prof. R. W. Curtis.

President Pierson made a report for the committee appointed at the last meeting to keep in touch with the fuel commissioners and lend whatever aid is necessary in getting a supply of fuel for any florist in difficulty. Mr. Pierson represented the federation at a conference in Washington last Spring and stated that everything was done at that time which could be done to secure recognition of the floricultural industry in the regulations of the Fuel Administrator. A canvass of the members present showed that most of the florists already have their 50 per cent. coal allowance.

There was a discussion of the bill which is now before Congress, prohibiting the importation of all plants, including bulbs. It was the general opinion of the delegates that such a restriction would be disastrous to the horticultural industries, both in this country and abroad. A committee consisting of Dr. Erl Bates, Prof. D. Lumsden and Charles Vick was appointed to draw up resolutions expressing the disapproval of the federation on such legislative action. It was also suggested that each member of the federation immediately get in touch with his Congressman and state his opinion regarding the passage of the bill.

In the general discussion which followed regarding trade conditions in the various sections of the State, the opinion was expressed that trade conditions as a whole were better than at this time last year. While as many flowers have not been sold as last year, prices have been better and the general trade demands have been good. The labor situation is one of the most troublesome factors now facing the florists.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown; first vice-president, Dr. Erl Bates, Syracuse; second vice-president, Charles Vick, Rochester; third vice-president, Hugh McCarthy, Syracuse; fourth vice-president, F. A. Danker, Albany, fifth vice-president, W. H. Workman, Oswego; treasurer, W. A. Adams, Buffalo. The meeting adjourned at 4:30.

E. A. WHITE, Secretary.

But I can make a wet day fair

National Publicity Campaign

It is pleasing to note that our Washington representative, W. F. Gude, has, as the result of a personal interview with General Crowder, been able to set at rest the widely circulated rumor that the florists' business was to be classed non-essential, and, further, to convey to us the assurance of the General that there has been no idea of so classing it. This assurance carries with it the endorsement of our own views, and the views of all right-minded people, that the products of the florist are most essential in these times of gloom and unrest.

But the general public, somehow, has absorbed the idea that flowers are, or ought to be tabooed, and we are almost daily called upon to contravert this idea expressed in some form or other. How are the florists to disabuse the public mind of this idea, which is to a very considerable extent undermining their business. Individually our craftsmen can do practically nothing. Collectively they can do, and are doing, much.

Every contributor to our publicity campaign fund is helping in an organized effort to educate the public mind to the fact that flowers are even more of a necessity in times of war than in times of peace; there are more uses for them. The great, good-natured American public is quick to absorb ideas built upon sentiment provided such ideas are presented in the right way. Our committees have realized this, and consequently have met with success in the publicity work which they have accomplished since the beginning of the year, work made possible by the liberal contributions of men in the trade whose broad-mindedness has taken them out of their own surroundings and enabled them to see things as they are. Theses men are staunch supporters of our publicity campaign, their subscriptions for the major part extending over a period of four years and many have duplicated and triplicated their subscriptions as they have noticed the excellent results.

It is scarcely credible that with the good results of our work before the trade there can yet remain so many florists who can solace themselves with what they, perhaps, like to term "reasonable doubt", and withhold their support from this work in consequence. And what a little they are asked to do. Ten cents a day, even, set apart for this fund would make a yearly subscription of no mean order. Very many subscribe less, and their contributions are greatly esteemed by the committees. We are in immediate need of about $6000 to complete our $50,000 fund for this year. The committees have gone as far as it was possible to go with the funds at their disposal, but it is urgently necessary that they go this little bit further. No matter where you are located Mr. Nonsubscriber, your business is helped. There is nothing local about this movement, it is national in every sense of the word. Helping this work is helping yourself. If you doubt it, write this office and we will cheerfully explain.

"Well, that's not so bad an observation," said the purchasing florist, "but listen: do you observe how they've admitted flowers, they have become necessary now as tools for talkin', and so long as there's still things to be said, we're not liable to have a flowerless day, are we?" *

"Ah, rats!" said the second boy, "be a sport, I'll match you for the whole quarter." Raymond Hitchcock, the eminent leading comedian, in the play "Hitchey-Koo," has seen fit to introduce flowers as actors in his production. A very beautiful stage setting is produced, being the interior of an uptodate retail flower shop, with real flowers in vases, pot plants, and the usual flower shop accessories in full attractiveness. Mr. Hitchcock assumes a Don Quixote role of the "Bad man from the West," killing with great bravado all the actors in the flower shop, and as they lie in heaps dead upon the floor, he waves his hand to the bouquet decorations about him, as if to say: "Let the play go on. Seeing that he was growing rather thin by this arrangement, he approached the office one day, quite disheartened. "What's the matter, Zee-Zee, don't your work agree with you?" asked the manager. "Oh, sir, the work's fine, sir, but there's quite a mistake in my name, it's Ee-Zee, not Zee-Zee." The change was promptly made, and on the same day the president in fairness to all decided to reverse matters so that the last names of the alphabet should come first, resulting that Zee-Zee is still buying his nourishment at the corner grocery on tick, trusting to brighter days.*

Building Good Will Through Advertising

American florists may well take a leaf out of the book of British experience during the war in building good will through advertising. According to Val Fisher, a member of the London Chamber of Commerce, many stores cut down their advertising during the first few months of the war. But Selfridge, a leading department store did not. He did not skip a single day. He used all the space the papers would allow him to use and has continued to do so. The result is that Selfridge's profits during the first year of the war were $573,000; during the second, $750,000, and during the third year, $1,125,000. From fourth or fifth place among London stores, in volume of business and profits, at the start of the war, Selfridge has climbed to second place as the result of his continuous advertising, and he would be first today, had not the war prevented building additions to his store.

"British manufacturers who have not a dollar's worth of merchandise to sell, whose entire plants are employed on Government work, are keeping their advertising continuously before the public, because while they are perfectly willing to turn their profits over to the Government, while they are perfectly willing for the sake of winning the war to have their factories commandeered and their normal business completely stopped, yet they are not willing to sacrifice their good will; they are not willing to have their names or their products forgotten.

"And so they continue their advertising, continue building their good will, so that when the war shall be won there will be an immediate demand for the billions of dollars' worth of merchandise that their greatly enlarged factories will then turn out."

Three Times And In!

The old formula of three times and out has been reversed for American women in their work for the Liberty Loan. There it is—three times and in! The First Loan for initiation into the idea that we must lend our money to the Government to pay the expense of war; the Second Loan for instruction in bond buying and in selling bonds to our neighbors, our families and our friends; the Third Loan for participation in the saving and earning of money to lend. And what is there left for us in the Fourth Loan, the greatest of all Liberty Loans, the largest loan ever issued by any Government. What but to go farther in—farther into our pockets for money we have saved, farther into our leisure for time to earn money, farther into our hearts for the impulse not only to give but to sacrifice to pay the price of victory!

Fourth Liberty Loan drive starts Sept. 28.

Obituary

Mrs. James. M. Lamb

We deeply regret to learn that Mrs. James M. Lamb, widow of the late James M. Lamb, pioneer florist of Fayetteville, N. C., died at her home "Sunny Side" on Saturday night, Aug. 31. Mrs. Lamb was 63 years old. She leaves 13 sons and daughters to mourn her going. Two sons are in the service of their country: Capt. R. J. Lamb is in France and Capt. Chas. Lamb at Camp Cody, N. Mex. Since the death of her husband in 1911 Mrs. Lamb has continued to conduct the business and her daughters will continue to carry it on.

Funeral services were conducted from the Methodist church, of which she was a devoted member, on Monday afternoon, Sept. 2, The many and beautiful floral tributes attested to the high esteem in which she was held by the community.

Mrs. Augusta C. Mather

Augusta C. (Cunningham) wife of Albert I. Mather, died Sept. 13, at Rockland, Me., after a period of invalidism covering nearly ten years. In her younger days she was an expert telegraph operator which vocation brought here to Rockland in 1861. When she retired in 1892, she had seen 31 years' service as manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co. She then established the present greenhouses on Pleasant and Purchase sts., and was the pioneer florist in this section of the State. With the assistance of husband and son she built up an important business, and the Mather greenhouses have become widely known.

The deceased was a member of Golden Rod Chapter O. E. S.; Miriam Lodge, D. of R.; Edwin Libby Relief Corps, the Methebesec and Progressive Literary Clubs and the Actors' Fund of America. Mrs. Mather, who was married in Nov., 1866, is survived by her husband and one son, Harry A. Mather. Funeral services were held from the family residence, Rev. Pliny A. Allen officiating. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The remains were taken to Belfast for burial.

William F. Dreer

As mentioned in last week's issue announcement of the death of William F. Dreer reached us at the moment of going to press.

William F. Dreer was fortunate in being the son of Henry A. Dreer, who started in the seed business at Philadelphia in 1838. He was also happy in having the mental make up that led him to follow in his father's footsteps. Born Nov. 11, 1849 he took kindly to plant study at so early an age that he naturally educated himself to succeed his famous parent. At the age of 18, when his schooling ceased, he became connected with the then largest German seedhouse in one of the most important seed growing sections of that country. Later he was similarly associated with a large seed house in Paris, France. Upon his return to Philadelphia he became active in his father's seed and plant business and in 1873, following his father's death, took full charge and continued to develop the business until 1892, when it was incorporated. Since then, though still active until about two years ago, his labors have been less confined within the walls of the establishment and more extended throughout the horticultural world, many parts of which he visited in the interests of the business.

In ability to make and hold friends and to inspire confidence among his associates, among the trade and in social circles, Wm. F. Dreer was particularly fortunate. He will therefore be sadly missed by his family, and his friends in the various organizations of which he was a member, notably the Masonic fraternity. He was a member of the S. A. F. and O. H., Royal Hort Soc. of England, Pennsylvania Hort. Soc. (of which he was an ex-officer), Massachusetts Hort. Soc., New England Soc. of Penna., Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, Union League, Art Club, Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia Country Club, Radnor Hunt, Corinthian Yacht Club, Santee Club of S. C., Blooming Grove Hunting and Fishing Club, Veteran Corps of the First Regiment, N.G.P., and other associations.

After a business activity of nearly fifty years, while still in the prime of middle life, he was compelled two years ago to seek rest at his Summer home in Woodstock, Vt. Here during July of this year he was stricken with Bright's disease in acute form and here his life ended on Sunday, Sept. 8. The funeral and internment occurred on Wednesday of last week at Woodstock. Mrs. Dreer and a daughter survive him. The seed house was represented at the funeral by its principal officers: J. D. Eisele, vice-pres., H. G. Tull, sec.-treas., J. Otto Thilow, store manager, G. D. Clark, manager of the flower, seed and bulb department, and C. H. McKubbin, manager of the vegetable, seed and advertising department.

New York State Fair

The floral exhibit at the fair at Syracuse was large and called forth much favorable comment. There were a large number of entries.

The table decorations brought out many fine exhibits. Werner Bultmann won first honors in this entry with a very pretty center piece of Gladioli Panama and individual favors of the same variety. In the bridal bouquets P. R. Quinlan and W. Bultmann each won first in two classes. There were many entries in these classes and some exceptionally pretty work was shown by out-of-town florists. A large basket of Roses exhibited by P. R. Quinlan carried off first prize.

From Buffalo, Wm. Griever and Edw. Slattery, manager for the Palmer store showed attractive decorative designs which aroused considerable admiration.

The exhibit of the F. R. Pierson Co. of Tarrytown, N. Y., was up to the firm's usual high standard, consisting of several long tables of ferns and Roses.

John J. Prouty of Baldwinsville, N. Y., won first in the Gladiolus classes for white, pink, blue, yellow, red, and six ruffled varieties; also first for a collection of 12 vars. and first for a collection of 20 vars. Thus he had a perfect score with eight firsts out of eight entries.

The Syracuse Gardeners' Club won first prize in the competition for a large group of plants. Fred Scharoun, grower for Mrs. L. C. Smith, furnished many rare plants and orchids for this group and showed excellent taste in the arrangement. This group occupied the center of the hall and took a prominent part in the decorative scheme of the building. The Syracuse Florists' Ass'n won second place. In this group there were some well-grown specimen nursery plants potted for this occasion by Mr. Stuart. Third prize was awarded to the Syracuse Retail Florists. The three groups were arranged in the center of the hall. G. Bartholme's and P. R. Quinlan's large specimen palms and ferns especially took an important part in the decorations. Mr. Bellamy, grower at the Oakwood also furnished excellent potted plants.

Enjoyable Entertainment

Thursday evening the Syracuse Florists' Ass'n entertained the out-of-town florists at Kohl's Grill. Tables were set for 40. The dinner was most enjoyable and there were interesting discussions on florists' problems. F. R. Pierson gave a timely and helpful talk on the coal problem, as it is being met by various florists throughout the country.

The delivery problem as it is being solved in Buffalo was discussed by Mr. Griever, who gave facts and figures on the present high cost of delivery and remedies for a more economical delivery system. His talk brought out much discussion and many questions were asked, but Mr. Griever was there with facts and figures that convinced those present that this problem has received much attention in Buffalo, and should be looked into by every city.

Mr. Slattery of Buffalo spoke on how the Buffalo retailers' and growers' associations are cooperating in the maintenance of prices and other necessary war-time economies that resulted in a saving.

Prof. Lumsden, supt. of the flower and fruit exhibit at the fair spoke entertainingly on the good work done at Ithaca. M.

The F. R. Pierson Co. carried off the grand special Rose premium for the best collection and display of Roses, comprising 500 blooms and consisting of the following varieties: American Beauty, Columbia, Rosalind, Silvia, Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Charles Russell, Double White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, Radiance, Christine Miller and Mme. Cecil Brunner.

The premium for the best new hybrid tea Rose introduced in 1917-18, was awarded to Jerry Brookins, Orchard Park, N. Y., for September Morn.

The silver medal awarded by the American Rose Society for the best collection and display of Roses by an amateur was captured by the Syracuse Rose Society whose collection consisted of 57 vars. of hybrid perpetual, hybrid tea and tea Roses.

Jerry Brookins, Orchard Park, N. Y., exhibited some very fine hybrid tea Roses, conspicuous among his collection were well grown specimens of Mrs. Francis Scott Key.

John J. E. Fryer, Mrs. Frank Pendleton, America and Black Beauty. Mr. Prouty's collection of six spikes, ruffled, named, was made up of Glory, Purple Glory, Orange Glory, Cinabar, White King and Mottled Beauty. His prize-winning exhibits for color were: white, Europa; yellow, Schwaben; pink, Pink Perfection; red, War, and blue, Baron Hulot. The following made up his exhibit for the best 12 vars.: America, Ivory, War, Gretchen Zang, Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Peace, Pink Perfection, Mottled Beauty, Schwaben, Evelyn Kirtland, Charlemagne and Summer Beauty.

In the Gladiolus classes, amateur, the silver medal offered by the American Gladiolus Society for collection of Gladioli, was awarded to Madison Cooper, Calcium, N. Y. His group consisted of Myrtle, Lily Lehmann, Europa, Niagara, Schwaben, Glory of Holland, Eldorado, Wm. Watt, War, Peace, Liebesfener, Summer Beauty, Evelyn Kirtland and Intensity. Mr. Cooper also took first for his collection of ten named varieties, three spikes of each. His collection comprised Madam Mounet Sully, War, Peace, Loveliness, Giant White, Mrs. Dr. Norton, Mrs. Watt, White Glory, Mrs. Frank Pendleton and The King. Mr. Cooper's exhibit of Primulinus hybrids in colors was unusually fine.

In Dahlias, the premium varieties staged by N. Harold Cottam & Son, Wappinger Falls, N. Y., comprise: King of the Autumn, Weber, Rev. T. W. Jamieson, Southern Belle, Pierrott, Grace Reed, John Reding, Mme. J. Coissard, Bianca, Gracchus, Margaret Bouchon, D. M. Moore, Dr. H. H. Rusby, Sneenweitze, Snowstorm, America, Breezelawn, Princess Juliana and Governor Guild.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., staged a large and splendid trade exhibit of Nephrolepis Ferns, including varieties in which it specializes. The group consisted of N. elegantissima, N. elegantissima compacta, N. muscosa, N. Smithii, N. superbissima, N. viridissima, N. Scholzeli, N. Harrisi, N. Teddy Jr., N. Bostoniensis compacta, N. Giatrasi. N. tuberosa compacta and N. cordata. The exhibit was in charge of J. Theo. Trevillian and Alfred Wood.

Trade exhibits were also made by John J. Prouty, Madison Cooper, Calcium, N. Y., Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

The amateur section was fully represented and the exhibits showed skill in culture and good judgment in selecting material for exhibition purpose.

Among striking features of the show was the New York State service flag, 62 stars representing the number of counties in the State. The size of the flag was 11ft. by 18ft., and 60,000 blue immortelles, and 10,000 white Cape flowers were used in it, 100 sq. ft. of Ruscus forming the border. The flag, was designed and made by the superintendent, Prof. D. Lumsden, Ithaca, N. Y. There was also an American flag, in which 6000 Asters were used, in the following varieties: red, Rosy Red, early branching type; white, white late branching, blue purple late branching. The "Heart of France" was a large design in the shape of a heart comprised of the new red Aster, Heart of France. The last two features mentioned were designed and exhibited by James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y. D. LUMSDEN.

Robert Koppleman, salesman at the Cooperative Flower Market in Boston, has enlisted in the British Army and is going to Palestine. He is familiar with half a dozen languages so should be specially valuable as an interpreter.

We regret to learn that Wm. Wilmore, Denver, Col., son of W. W. Wilmore, the Dahlia specialist, is in a hospital in France, suffering from the effects of being gassed while on the fighting front. Two other Denver boys connected with the trade have been on the fighting line for some time.

Walter E. Pillsbury, who has been with his father, I. L. Pillsbury, in the florist business at Galesburg, Ill., left last week for Camp Forrest, Lytle, Ga. Private Mallgrav is attached to the ammunition train of the 101st Regiment, being driver of a truck. He enlisted last year and was sent to Fort Banks in August, 1917, and later to France. He is reported to be improving and will eventually recover.

He had been in charge of landscape work in the Washington department of buildings and grounds, but being a Cornell University graduate he resigned and joined the Cornell squad in the officers' training camp at Camp Meade whence after he had made good he was sent to the artillery school at Louisville, Ky.

The writer has had the pleasure of receiving a bright and bracing letter from Sergeant John H. Earl, son of Howard M. Earl of Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., of the American Expeditionary Force. He is enjoying a well-earned rest after very severe fighting, and reports both himself and his brother in the best of good health. Hearty congratulations to their parents, and the "Boys." EUROPEAN SEEDS.

While the men whose names follow are not florists, they are indirectly connected with the florist's trade, in that they were formerly employees of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. These men have joined the Colors and each one is "doing his bit."

Paul F. Viguier, linotype operator in the composing room, now with the Sixth Field Artillery, reports his safe arrival in France.

Sergt. V. A. DiClemente, monotype operator, is with the Headquarters Ambulance Section, Sixth Sanitary Train, A. E. F., France.

Herbert Byitte, formerly a member of the Seventh Regiment and one of our apprentices in the composing room, is now in Battery F, 59th Artillery. He writes from "over there" that before this letter reaches its destination he will be on the firing line, sending 200lb. shrapnel over at every shot toward the enemy and toward the finish of the war.

Tom Murphy, stone man in the composing room, in a letter under date of Aug. 5 writes us: "THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE would look like a Sunday newspaper here, and Oh, to get a glance at The New York Journal; I'll never 'knock' that paper again. After riding in the trains here I'll say that the B. R. T. (Brooklyn Rapid Transit) is the best road in the world, and I got more sleep on a trip home from work than I did in three days on these. Another thing: instead of following the ponies you follow the cows here and you need more than a shovel, so you can picture me with my big feet."

Publication Received

The Backyard Garden, by Edward I. Farrington (Laird & Lee, Inc., Chicago, Ill.), a book of 192 pages for the amateur, giving information on the growing of various vegetable crops and on the canning and drying of vegetables; also some hints on flower gardening. Illustrations and garden plans are also included. A handy feature is the flexible waterproof cover and the convenient size.

Iowa State Hort. Society, Report of, for 1917, Vol. 52, running to 476 pages with illustrations and including the proceedings of the 52d annual session. The report contains interesting papers on horticulture, floriculture and related topics.

The Wheat situation is less acute. But that by no means is saying we can go back to our old habits of eating. The world's bread basket is still big and the total food supply is still very inadequate.

Mrs. Ernst Asmus Seriously Injured

Mrs. Ernest Asmus, widow of the well-known Rose grower, residing at 4011 Boulevard, North Bergen, N. J., while driving in that city on Monday afternoon was severely injured when an automobile truck crashed into her limousine. She was taken to the North Hudson Hospital, Weehawken, N. J. We learn today, Wednesday, at 11 a.m., direct from the hospital, that Mrs. Asmus is still alive, but is suffering from several fractures of her limbs and body and is in a very critical condition. To the sick soldiers at Camp Merritt, N. J., to whom Mrs. Asmus has been carrying weekly hundreds of Roses for months past this accident will cause much concern.

A Personal Note

F. W. Fletcher of Auburndale, Mass., called at our office this week on his way South. His greenhouses there have been closed down for the Winter, failing a purchaser. Precautions have been taken to shore up the glass in case of necessity and to keep the place in good condition as, without doubt, a purchaser can be found eventually. A. H. Fuchs of Newton Highlands, Mass., is growing on 40,000 bulblets, the balance of Mr. Fletcher's Freesias, for him. He will have the flowers and the bulbs will later go to Mr. Fletcher, who at his Southern nurseries at Orlando, Fla., will grow them on, together with some 15,000 to 18,000 Freesia bulbs containing the selections of his new colored hybrids.

At Orlando Mr. Fletcher has two acres in the city (the Rosalind Gardens) and he here has one Cypress slat, half shade greenhouse, covering some 17,000 sq. ft., in which he is growing a fern which has found favor in Philadelphia and Boston, although rejected in New York. It is Polystichum coriaceum, which has taken kindly to the cognomen of the "Leather Leaf Fern." It is peculiarly adapted to the climate there, making a vigorous and speedy growth, but is a very slow grower in the North. It is used considerably by the retail florists to make up and it also makes a beautiful house plant. In a new slat house, 24ft. x 320ft., Mr. Fletcher is growing Asparagus Fletcheri densifolius, a seedling variation of A. Sprengeri, originating with him. Just one mile outside of Orlando Mr. Fletcher has an estate of ten acres, which he is utilizing for the growing of vegetable plants. He here also is erecting a sash house for his Freesias.

The soil in this vicinity is a gray, sandy loam with a clay subsoil. Mr. Fletcher has been engaged in experiments having to do with destruction of nematodes in the acid soil of the South and believes he could obtain successful results were it not for the present high price of the chemical materials required. Perhaps after the war he will be able to resume his experiments in that direction and we trust this may be the case, as it seems to be the fact that much of the Southland is afflicted with these worms on account of its general acid condition.

Mr. Fletcher left by boat for Newport, Sept. 17, from whence he will proceed to Orlando direct overland. He speaks hopefully of the future, and we wish him success. He has owned the Orlando property the past three years. Before leaving Massachusetts Mr. Fletcher sold his Delphinium seed to T. A. Havemeyer of Glen Head, L. I., pronounced by J. H. Dick, the late editor of THE EXCHANGE, as the finest strain he had yet seen.

Iowa State Florists' Ass'n

The annual meeting of the Iowa State Florist Ass'n was held on Aug. 29 and officers were elected as follows:

J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines, president; John Reardon, Ames, vice-pres.; Wesley Greene, Des Moines, sec'y-treas. Directors: J. L. Denmead, Marshalltown; M. Bocklin, Sioux City; J. Auldous, Iowa City and Roy Holt, Des Moines.

Cincinnati, O.

The supply of Roses is fair. The cut coming regularly includes many blooms of good quality. Carnations are in a good supply for this time of year. Easter Lilies are not plentiful. Aster receipts are large and generally excellent in quality. They have been selling well. A limited amount of choice Gladioli may be had. Some Chrysanthemums are coming into the wholesale houses. Cosmos is in a large supply. Dahlias now are plentiful.

Personalities

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Ohmer and Master Jim Ohmer, their son, of West Palm Beach, Fla., who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett, are now on a visit to Columbus, Ohio. They plan to leave for their home the first of next week.

C. E. Critchell has put a lady in the place of one of his salesmen who has entered the Service. He has been getting choice Dahlias from J. C. Rutenschroer.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co., of Lockland has been sending excellent Roses to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange. They have sold well.

Mr. Blackshaw, representing the Ove Gnatt Co. of Laporte, Ind., called on the trade in this city last week. TEDDY.

Wisconsin Florists' Organize

About 50 florists responded to a call to meet here to organize a state florists' association. Florists from various parts of the state, outside of Milwaukee were in majority. The first meeting was a very interesting one. All that attended became charter members and the following officers were elected:

C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, pres.,
J. E. Mathewson, Sheboygan, vice-pres.,
H. J. Seel, Milwaukee, sec'y.,
Gustav Rush, Milwaukee, treas.
Directors: Richard Haentz, Fond-du-Lac; Fred Rentschler, Madison, and Wm. Zimmerman, Milwaukee.

Many in the trade from various points in the State, unable to attend the meeting expressed a willingness to join the organization. The meeting was held at the club room of the Blatz Hotel, and in addition to the business meeting, the new association enjoyed a sociable time.

Wisconsin State Fair

A notable feature at the Wisconsin State Fair this year was the horticultural display in which the florists took an important part, and, with a special appropriation for decorations the horticultural building was one of the most attractive buildings at the fair. The amount of the prize money was also increased, thus making possible more creditable displays and some fine groups of palms, ferns and miscellaneous plants were staged.

Business in general is fair. Outdoor stock is going out of the market fast. 'Mums are coming in; also the new cut of Carnations and Roses. The supply is about equal to the demand. C.C.P.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The cool weather last week has improved the local flower trade. Considerable funeral work has helped sell short stemmed stock. Asters have been the heaviest crop. They will probably continue for some time. The quality is somewhat better than for several years. Fine flowers are seen on the market and prices are good, although the short stock at low prices helps keep the average price down. Gladioli still on the market sell at good prices considering the quality. Lilies are very much in demand with not nearly enough to supply all orders. Prices are firm and may advance before this week is over. Roses coming in limited quantities sell at almost Midwinter prices. There are no extra long Roses except Russell and Prima Donna. They are much in demand. Ophelia, also of good quality, is holding well in price. American Beauty are coming in limited quantities and have advanced in price. Specials are selling at $30 and $35 per 100. The quality is good for this time of the year. Good Sunburst are seen and are in demand. Regular shipments of Dahlias are expected daily. The flowers are the finest that have ever reached this market and there is a demand for them as people are always glad to get something different at this time of the year. Some yellow 'Mums are on the market but are slow in demand as they are never good at this time. They are used mostly for window display. Greens are plentiful.

On People's Tongues

Geo. McCallum, who enlisted in the Naval Auxiliary Reserve last May, has been called for duty and has left for Municipal Pier, Chicago, to complete his course.

Milton Alexander was a visitor this week.

Almost all the florists in the city were called upon to contribute to the various carnivals and fairs held in the city last week for the benefit of the war activities. North Side florists in charge of a flower booth sold everything in sight.

John McCarthy of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. will enter Carnegie Institute this week, to take up special military training.

Earl Tifton did not reach the Canfield fair last Wednesday as his train was late in making connections. He was very much disappointed.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Funeral work continues to be the mainstay of the flower business. There are no Autumn decorations booked so far to speak of, and none of the downtown department stores are making any unusual preparations.

Early 'Mums have made their appearance in mass and are selling right well over the counter at $6 to $9 per doz. Northern Michigan and New-York Asters are arriving by the thousands at $30 to $40. These are readily disposed of at retail at $1.50 to $2 per doz. Good Roses are not at all plentiful, at $8 to $15 per 100; good medium lengths are coming from local growers at $3 to $5 per 100. Columbia, Russell, Ophelia, Killarney and Hoosier Beauty are the varieties mostly handled. Am. Beauty, few in quantity but high in quality, may be had at $5 to $50 per 100. Cattleyas are offered right along but there is little demand for them ar 50c. to $1 each over the counter.

There is seemingly a bigger supply of foliage and fern plants this season than in other years and many of the growers are finding trouble keeping their heavy stock under cover.

Jottings

Isaac Bayersdorfer is transacting business in this city. Reports from Philadelphia lead him to believe that the growers are purchasing much of their stock in advance this Year.

Field grown Carnation plants have all been taken in this vicinity at good prices and the growers are well satisfied.

The New Castle florists have begun shipments of good Roses into this city once more.

The beautiful gardens at Garfield Park are made the center of many patriotic occasions these days. They are an attraction in themselves and when a good speaker is on hand thousands of people flock there.

Lilies will probably be missed more than any other one item in this market. There are not many of them at this writing and the outlook is not bright for a great many more.

Herman Piel, foreman of Bertermanns' E. Washington st. place, has a fine bunch of 'Mums coming on.

John Rieman says that the drafting of his son will cause a big gap in his force at the store.

A heavy hail storm at Noblesville last week is reported to have done much damage to the greenhouses in that locality.

The many friends of Albert Kempe, well known local florist, sympathize with him on the loss of his brother who was unfortunately killed in a motorcycle accident last week. Albert and his brother were very closely associated and his loss will mean very much to the Kempe family, as he was known for his bright disposition and business-like habits.

R. E. Blackshaw of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., and Mr. Heilman, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, were recent visitors. I. B.

Catalogs Received

Central Illinois Nursery, Wm. H. Gibbs, prop., Normal, Ill., Fall 1918, Spring 1919, price list for nurserymen only, of nursery stock and flowering plants.

Denver, Col.

The weather has been very unusual; we had rain almost every day and outdoor flowers are showing the effects. Retail business has improved somewhat since last writing. The Jewish holiday season added some "pep" to business, but trade is rather uncertain, as it seems to have the skip-stop habit.

Good Roses are coming into the market in all the leading varieties. Carnations are scarce and the quality poor. Dahlias grow unusually fine in this climate; the blooms are extremely large; in fact larger than those grown in the East, but for some reason or other the keeping qualities are not good, a cut Dahlia out here lasting only about 24 hours.

About Town

Mrs. Conrad Lengenfelder was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital on Sept. 9. The trade all wish her a speedy recovery.

Carl L. Gross former Pacific Coast representative for the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has resigned his position with that firm and accepted a similar one with the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. Mr. Gross was in the city recently on some personal business. He reports business excellent in his territory and will make Kansas City, Mo., his headquarters during the busy season.

A call on Frank Fraser found everyone busy, with several large funeral orders for the morning and a wedding decoration for the afternoon.

Barteldes' Seed Store will move from 821 15th st. to their new location, 1616 Champa st. on or about Oct. 1. In addition to the firm's enormous seed business in its new home an up-to-date cut flower department will be added, with Wm. Horlocker in charge. Mr. Horlocker has had years of experience in the business in all its branches and is sure to make the new enterprise a success.

G. B. Gleason manages to make his rounds daily. Gladioli, Asters and few short Snapdragons make up his present stock.

From Overseas

A letter just received from "over there" states that Wm. Wilmore, son of W. W. Wilmore, the Dahlia specialist, who has been on the fighting line, is in a hospital in France from the effects of being gassed. Word has also been received that Zeal Neff of the Park Floral Co. and Joseph Whalen of the Alpha Floral Co., who joined the Colors together in this city over a year ago have been on the fighting line for some time. The last letter received from them states that their company had been gassed four times.

Early Closing

The early closing movement will go into effect in this city and a card will be placed in the windows of the leading downtown stores, reading as follows: "In order to conform to the Government's desire to conserve fuel as far as possible, we the following florists of Denver consider it a patriotic duty to close our places of business at 6.30 p.m. every day except Saturday when the closing hour will be 9 p.m.—Park Floral Co., Alpha Floral Co., American Flower Shop, Frank Fraser, Geo. H. Cooper, Boldt & Lundy, Columbine Floral Co., Sullivans' Flower Shop, Bargain Flower Store, Mauff Floral Co., New York Floral Co."

Recent visitors were Grover H. DeGolyer, St. Joseph Paper Box Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; Hansen Bros., Greeley, Col., Chas. Fawcett, Boulder, Col., Burt Clippinger, Laramie, Wyo. C.F.E.

Clubs and Societies

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

The society held its September meeting on Friday evening, Sept. 13 at Moose Hall. It was decided to hold the flower show on Nov. 1, 2 and 3, and to devote the proceeds to the Red Cross as was done last year, when the show was liberally patronized by the public. The discussion at the meeting centered around Pear blight and blight in general. It was decided the blight was caused by the Winter, as also the blight on Maples. The trees were left with enough vitality to survive and leaf out in the Spring but did not have enough to withstand the blight. The following exhibited: A. Huniend, A. V. Carve, A. Wynn, N. Vasileff, A. Bieschke, M. Smith, I. Foster, A. Alius, and A. Cant. W. J. RICE, Corr. Sec'y.

Do you think milk at 12c. or 13c. a quart is an expensive food? The food experts say it is not. Ask the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca for R. C. F. H. 111, "Milk: A Cheap Food." A postal card request will bring it to you.

When will you Link Up your Home Town to this F. T. D. Chain of Retail Flower Shops?

MANY towns of 5000 inhabitants have good, reliable Retail Florists. We often have orders for them and, if they were F. T. D. members, we all would feel more confident that our orders would have the best of care, and we also would feel more secure in filling their orders.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Why Join the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association?

THE fact that the F. T. D. will hold its annual meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 8 and 9, suggests to the retail florist the questions: "What has this organization accomplished and how would I benefit by becoming a member?" Notice the following points:

Its sturdy and rapid growth is the strongest proof that the F. T. D. is meeting a definite need. Its membership has steadily increased during the past six years to more than ten times the initial enrollment of 57. This growth is due to its clear cut policy of service to its members and to the public. Retail florists eligible to membership realize that it is living up to this policy and are thus eager to join. They find that the society guarantee fund of $7500 establishes for them a credit with the entire membership that they could secure in no other way and, further, that the non-members readily accept orders upon the strength of this membership. Added to this is the assurance of prompt payment of bills between members, a feature alone worth the small annual dues.

The above statement summarizes the main reasons why the majority of retail florists become members, but the association stands for a far larger ideal. It stands for the closer union of retail florists for mutual help, a standardized method of bookkeeping and accounting, a better system of credits, enlarged sales channels, the exchange of the best thought on floral matters; in short, it means the breaking down of cut-throat competition and the substitution of genuine cooperation to the end that the florists' business everywhere shall develop more normally, healthfully and broadly.

That portion of humanity which has not as yet been made receptive to the business tendency of the age is prone to consider such aims too altruistic, too Utopian for any use. But the fact that in rapid succession men and firms, not hitherto actively enjoying its benefits are becoming members, "to see how it pans out," is primâ facie evidence that the association is on the high road to success. When these renew their membership it is their usual comment that they are sorry they did not join years before because they have profited so largely in their first year's experience. The history of the association further shows that scarcely has a member dropped out on account of being dissatisfied with the results derived from membership.

THE EXCHANGE confidently predicts that this statement of principles and the record of achievement just sketched will strongly increase the membership at the coming convention and thus enable the F. T. D. to start another year of greater service to the trade and to the public.

F. T. D. Convention Notes

Preparations for the annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, to be held in Cleveland Oct. 8 and 9, are well under way and reservations are already being made at the Hollenden for visiting members. James McLaughlin, secretary the Florists' Club Publicity Fund, 221 Huron rd., is taking care of this for those wishing accommodations secured in advance.

The prizes offered by Messrs. Seligman, Grakelow and Pollworth for the best florist's window in advertisement of the aims and purposes of the F. T. D. will be striven for with spirit, according to snatches of conversation heard in retail circles.

Herman P. Knoble has addressed the following letter to F. T. D. members and requests that any member not having received a copy kindly comply with it.

President Gude has asked me to make an exhibit of all types of advertising used by the florists of this country, at the F. T. D. meeting, at Cleveland, Oct. 8 and 9.

Will you be kind enough to collect all of the advertising material that you have been using in the past and send me a copy of each one that it is possible for you to take out of your collection? The local committee intends to use these copies in making a large display around the entire meeting room, as this will be one of the big features discussed at this meeting. I hope it will be possible for you to submit me at least a representative number of newspaper clippings, "direct by mail" literature, and any other suggestions that you might have, knowing that these will be properly displayed in Cleveland.

I wish you would make every effort to get this material to me no later than the 25th of this month, as it will take considerable time locally to prepare it for display. Just remember that this is going to be a lot of work for the local fellows, and a little cooperation on your part will surely help much to make this meeting what it deserves to be.

Awaiting your immediate reply with the advertising material, and your good wishes, also hoping to see you at the meeting, I am, yours very truly, HERMAN P. KNOBLE.

Helping the Government—Helping Yourself

The retail florist of today is facing business conditions that are without precedent as a result of the war. Business cannot be successfully carried on along the old lines. It must be adjusted to meet existing conditions. The florists of the United States, as well as all other retailers, have for the last few months been facing the same conditions and struggling to solve the same vital problems that have been met and overcome by their fellow retailers of Canada and England in the last four years. The Commercial Economy Board asks the stores of this country to conserve man power, materials and money, and to stop waste wherever it may be found. These wastes are the results of old, slow, and inefficient methods. It is these methods that the English and Canadian Governments asked the merchants of their countries to stop four years ago.

The cost of merchandise, and overhead and operating expenses, have gone up and will increase still further. In order to maintain normal profits, it is obvious that it is necessary to cut down expenses as far as possible, stop losses, avoid lost motion, eliminate waste and work faster. No store can hold on to the old, wörnout methods and yet operate at the speed that is required by present-day conditions. The war has called thousands of trained workers out of the stores; the new employees are untrained.

One of the most difficult problems that the florist of today has to meet is how to carry on business more efficiently than ever before, yet with less help, and at the same time avoid all waste. On the way he solves this problem depends not only the extent to which he will benefit by the coming time of general prosperity but whether or not he can with justice feel that he is doing all in his power to help win the war.

This matter is therefore of vital importance to the florist. He owes it to himself as well as to his country to make certain that neither his time, goods nor money are wasted. If he is actively to cooperate with our Government in this crisis and at the same time benefit himself, he must conserve labor, eliminate waste and speed up his business. He can only achieve these results by having a more efficient system than he has heretofore used.

There are two ways of learning: by experience and by observation.

The least expensive way is to profit by the experience of others. The retailers in all lines in Canada and England found a solution to this problem and the same solution has been found by progressive merchants of America. That is, the substitution of labor-saving machinery wherever it will do the work of human hands. In a store that means labor-saving machinery that is able automatically to do a good many things that otherwise require both physical and mental effort on the part of clerks.

One labor saving device that fulfils these requirements is a cash register. Many merchants have stated that only through the use of cash registers were they able to continue to do business at a profit. Stores that have cash register equipment have found it easier to meet the requests of the Government. The register enables clerks to make more sales. It reduces deliveries. It helps to increase business without increasing the operating force. It makes every motion count and speeds up the whole organization. It makes it possible for the stores to operate with fewer clerks. It gives quick service, which increases "takes" and decreases deliveries. It saves clerical supplies and delivery supplies. It cuts down clerical work.

Cash registers do almost everything in their particular line except talk. They help to make first class clerks out of poor ones. They are so simple to operate that even an inexperienced clerk can make correct records by simply pressing the keys. The registers show how much business the salesmen do, how many people they serve, and how big their sales are. They not only make salesmen quick, careful, and reliable, but they are in themselves mechanical bookkeepers. They enable the retailer to operate with less help, handle a greater rush of business and yet give quick service. Moreover by simplifying the salesman's work they enable him to concentrate on the selling end of his duties, for he has fewer steps to take; he does not have as much writing to do; he can make two sales where before he made one. Thus the retail florist will find the cash register of the greatest assistance in helping him comply with the Government's request to conserve man power, materials and money and to stop waste. In the foregoing we have spoken of the salesman as "he"; probably "she" would be the correct word under the present order of things going.

Additional to the use of the cash register we have previously given mention to several other labor saving ideas. That one in regard to combining deliveries we look upon as practicable and a labor and cash saver, for wherever two or more retailers will club together for that purpose it means one horse and one man less. Deliveries can well be reduced in number each day and more time requested in which to make them. In a perfectly courteous manner, and through the use of good judgment, many purchasers can be induced to carry home with them packages not bulky.

The two new classes of patrons which are making their presence increasingly felt at the retail flower shops—principally wage earners at the one extreme, with, at the other, those whose earnings have been largely increased as a result of the war—not having been pampered will all the more readily adapt themselves to war conditions. And even the old and valued customers will readily understand that they are getting all the attention possible under the shortage of labor.

The one prime factor, the one thing above all others which is going to help the retailer to carry on to the best possible advantage, is that in every town and city, retailers come together and discuss the situation frankly and fully to the end that an adequate charge be agreed upon for specified services and flowers, according to season, on the one hand, and conservation of labor and material on the other. Weekly meetings and discussions of problems would be found of high value. Cooperation to the fullest extent is what these times call for.

In the large cities, retailers could come together according to sections, it being manifest that this would be an advisable procedure owing to the differing interests which have to be catered to. Even then, a committee of the whole, one man from each section, could hold meetings at which the action of each one section could be made known to the other sections.

Suggestions for the Beginner in the Business

While the first and most important characteristic of good salesmanship requisite to secure the confidence of the customer is honor, equally necessary is it that we should school ourselves thoroughly to understand the practical parts of our trade, that is to say, to be always prepared to suggest the right subject at the right time and in the right way.

As an instance, when a customer expresses himself in the very usual way, "I want something for a funeral, etc.," you, as a salesman, may ask the very proper question "How old a person was the deceased?" or, "Was the deceased an elderly person?"

Flowers are God's Visiting Cards Dropped Everywhere

Should your customer say it was an elderly person, then you know that the color to be used in this case should be sombre, that is, white, lavender or violet, and you undoubtedly know which of these flowers you have the most of on hand and which will be in the best condition at the time the work is required. The questions of price, and design wanted, remain to be decided before you can tell which flower you can afford to use.

It being necessary to know the price to be paid before you can go on as to the design, the flower, etc., you might ask, "Have you thought about how much you would like to spend or how much you would like the design to cost,"? and if the customer puts it up to you by saying he was not decided, or did not know, then you could remark, "Have you thought of anything special you would like to have carried out?" and if, after this, he has not arrived at any conclusion, then it is up to your good judgment and that must be brought into action.

Whether it is a man or a woman who is deceased, a wreath is always good form, so why not get a wreath frame, show this to your customer, and say, "Such a design would be in good taste and as to price, it could be made for, say, five, six or seven dollars and a half, or we could make it for ten dollars, or even more elaborately if you wish it"? Through this conversation some definite idea as to the limit, the customer will spend will have been reached.

If white flowers are what you have on hand, or would like to use, suggest these, and if you also have some lavender or violet flowers, and you would also like to use these, then address the customer about like this: "That your first thought would be to make the wreath pure white, and at the base, either in one spot or in a cluster, have a touch of violet or of lavender, just to relieve the white, and that you feel for an elderly person this would be the first choice," or add that this make-up would be very rich looking, dignified and artistic.

If, on the other hand, you have more violet or lavender flowers than white, and the amount customer is willing to spend will permit their use then, by all means, suggest first those flowers, and add that a touch of white at the base would be effective and this too, would be very dignified and artistic.

The Retail Advertisers in these columns are the men you will find it to your interest to deal with.

If, however, a customer wants certain flowers, and has come with his mind set upon them, by all means take every measure to fill his requirements as, by opposing, you may become as the shoe salesman who feels he is clever when telling a woman the shoe doesn't pinch her when it is in on her feet and she "feels" to the contrary.

The artistic thought expressed in dwelling upon the funeral design does not mean that the same characteristic should not be developed in the general trade; indeed, if it is encouraged and carefully exercised it will strengthen the patron's confidence in your judgment over his own, and this will reap you your return by his leaving the choice of much of his necessities to your personal selection, thereby giving you the opportunity to utilize the flowers or goods you most wish to push or sell.

As you must know, the real secret of success in the florist trade, if not in every business venture, is in our ability to buy well and then in our knowledge to sell the same to advantage.

It is realized that the above instructions may not always be possible to carry out in the form in which they are here placed, but the suggestions in themselves, if used at the proper moment, I feel cannot but be of assistance in carrying out the delicate and important part of our profession.

F. L.

An Advertising Suggestion

By I. R. MERRITT

The column writer, in his never-ceasing search for something new, has invented the story which is told in three or four words to the line, punctuated by capitalized words. Its vogue has now extended to the magazines and "the stunt" is becoming so general that no one nowadays thinks of apologizing to the man who originated it. A florist recently ran an effective ad. in this style, beginning at the top of one column and running to the bottom of the next. The ad. ran as follows:

'THE DAY WE put
THAT NEW line
OF BULBS
IN OUR show window
A LADY came in TO LOOK at it
AND WE SHOWED her
SOME Hyacinths
AND some Tulips
AND Daffodils
AND Narcissi
ALL GUARANTEED to grow.
AND SHE WAS surprised.
TO SEE SUCH nice bulbs.
SO REASONABLY priced.
AND SHE bought
SOME Tulips
AND SOME Hyacinths.
AND SHE TOLD us today
THAT they are growing finely.'

This method may be effectively used for advertising window displays. It is worth while asking yourself whether people habitually watch for your window displays. It is a habit which people will cultivate if you make your displays attractive. Use newspaper space to praise your window arrangements, but see that they live up to your claims. Your displays may speak for themselves, but there is nothing like advertising the fact, especially if you are hemmed in by other stores whose windows are of the hodge-podge variety This is the way Austin's, Tupper Lake, N. Y., did it:

NOW I don't like
TO BE too personal
BUT I saw you
THE OTHER day
WHEN YOU stood
LOOKING at our window
AND THERE was something
IN THE corner
ON YOUR face
THAT SAID you thought
THE DISPLAY was pretty
AND THAT was enough
TO MAKE ME feel WELL PAID
FOR ALL the work
OF PLANNING it
THAT WINDOW display
AND NOW right here
WHILE we're talking
ABOUT it
I WANT to suggest
THAT IT MIGHT pay you
TO STOP OFTEN and look
AT OUR window
BECAUSE every week
WE PUT in something
THAT IS worth while LOOKING at
AND EVEN if you
DON'T NEED IT just then
WHEN YOU do
COME TO need it
YOU'LL remember
THAT YOU saw it
IN OUR window
AND YOU'LL know
RIGHT WHERE to come
AND GET it
NOW ISN'T that
SOME plan?
ANOTHER spasm
NEXT WEEK.

George F. Lane of the firm of Welch, the Florist of Asylum st., has entered the U. S. Service, making the sixth from this shop. He is on limited service, and is located somewhere in this country.

Early 'Mums are coming in well and selling briskly. Field-grown Carnations are also arriving, but as they are small do not seem to find a ready sale.

John Coombs of South st. is using girls in his greenhouses, because of labor shortage.

The Posey Shop, Bill McManus, of the Hill section keeps busy with funeral work; we have all had plenty of that.

E. S. Drake is bringing in attractive Boston ferns which sell readily.

Thomas Garrety of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., was a caller.

G. G. McCLUNIE.

Lancaster, Pa.

Business is going along a rather even tenor with funeral work the bulk of the trade. It seems to me that in times like these the retailer should use every possible endeavor to get the best out of the flowers he sells in satisfaction to the customer. Every piece, every spray, every box of flowers should be given that artistic appeal that makes for further trade regardless of the price. Even so simple a thing as a boutonnière can be pinned on in such a way that it will at once attract attention and admiration. One sees these little things overlooked every day; it is a pity to have the present sale made the only object, for this is not selling flowers. To compete with our numerous markets in this city requires a special store touch that is not given to the bunches sold in the markets.

The cool nights make one think of the coming frosts. It is the wise florist who is ready for them. These cooler days are a blessing to Geranium growers as the cutting houses are once again beginning to look like cutting houses instead of the burnt over forest with here and there a tree standing, which they resembled with the heat of August. From the way in which the florists all over the country are clamoring for Geraniums it looks as if they are afraid to risk getting them in the Winter after last year's experiences. I believe that the parcel post with proper packing will handle them with as little loss in Winter as they have in the extreme heat of August.

Barr Greenhouses Busy

The B. F. Barr greenhouses are the only ones in the city that attempt to grow a complete line of stock for their store. Its artistic office, packing house and range of glass are all in good order. There are numerous frames of Boxwood and small evergreens for the nursery at the farm which is the only one of this section run on modern principles under the efficient management of Harry Haverstick. In the cutting houses a batch of August Geraniums showed up a possible 5 per cent rooted, but there are as fine a lot of pot Geraniums in Bloom for Fall trade as can be found anywhere. Every imaginable plant that can be used for store purposes is being grown so his customers will not be able to complain of lack of variety.

In the cut flower section 'Mums are looking fine with variety to have continuous bloom until Christmas. Roses never looked better. Some beds are cutting heavily. Carnations are nicely started and the end of the house that was burned is replanted ready for the roof which will soon be in place. Callas, Stevia and other flowers are planted in liberal quantities, with a fine section to Budleia Asiatica which he considers an important part of his cut flower supply, in its season.

The burnt boiler house will soon be a thing of the past as the concrete base is up and ready for the brick superstructure, which will be a great improvement over the frame affair that burned down. ALBERT M. HERR.

The President on Mob Spirit

"I have called upon the Nation to put its great energy into this war and it has responded -responded with a spirit and a genius for action that has thrilled the world. I now call upon it, upon its men and women everywhere, to see to it that its laws are kept inviolate, its fame untarnished. * * *

"I can never accept any man as a champion of liberty either for ourselves or for the world who does not reverence and obey the laws of our own beloved land, whose laws we ourselves have made. He has adopted the standards of the enemies of his country, whom he affects to despise."—PRESIDENT WILSON.

Cleveland, O.

The cool weather of last week not only served to improve the quality of stock but to stimulate trade, but it decreased the supply of both indoor and outdoor flowers, resulting in a well cleaned up market. As yet there are no Chrysanthemums. It will probably be middle October before they begin to figure in this market. Dahlias are arriving plentifully and have good length of stem. Tritomas come in slowly and are much later than usual. Liberal quantities of Larkspur are being received and sell readily. Receipts of Asters are lighter but excellent late stock is still to be had. Shipping trade has been particularly good since the first of the month, but now that more Roses of the better varieties are coming into the market, it is becoming heavier. City business is also well sustained. The possibility of the present draft taking a heavy toll from the ranks of the trade has created much uncertainty among florists, and is the leading topic of conversation.

In the Public Eye

Fred. L. Gunton, foreman at the Hecock Floral Co. range, Elyria, Ohio, has taken employment in one of his city's numerous munitions factories.

Sam Seligman, F. T. D. booster extraordinary, called upon members of the trade here Sept. 12 to 14.

F. J. Piggott has received word that his son Percy, a member of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, is in the hospital suffering with a slight wound. J. McL.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

While business is still slow there are signs of an improvement in the near future. The schools have opened and cooler weather has brought many of the resorters home. The recent request of the Government to stop the Sunday auto riding will doubtless keep many people home and consequently we will sell a few more flowers for house decoration and so on.

Prices are fairly well maintained at present, 75c. a doz. being asked for Carnations while indoor grown Asters command $1, Roses $1 to $2.50. Plenty of Gladiolus and Asters are on the market but Dahlias have suffered by the hot, dry Summer, so few are to be seen.

We are getting enough and to spare of both rain and cooler weather so bright sunshiny days are appreciated, as there is still much work to be done before cold weather. Another drive in W. S. Stamps is about to take place in the city and will doubtless use up a lot of loose change that we might otherwise get but these things must really take precedence over everything else. The Van Bochoves who have already taken $1000 worth are going to take on another like amount and we are all glad to do what we can.

William Thomas is able to get around to look after things a little although not fully recuperated from his illness.

John R. Van Bochove and wife are expecting to take a trip through some of the Western States hoping thereby to get braced up for the coming season.

The writer has been busy with the War and Welfare League work the last few weeks and expects to take a hand in the raising of the next Liberty Loan. By the way, out here we are calling it The Victory Loan expecting our boys soon to bring in the bacon. S. B.

NEW YORK

Wholesale Market and News of the City

The Market

Sept. 17.—There are in general moderate arrivals in the wholesale cut flower market of all seasonable flowers, except Roses, which are in increased supply.

American Beauty Roses are in large supply, as are also hybrid teas, though largely in the short grades. Special American Beauty Roses are moving very slowly today (Tuesday) at from 8c. to 25c. [illegible] grades at corresponding prices. The best grade of hybrid teas now arriving are selling at from 2c. each for such varieties as common Pink Killarney up to 8c. and 10c. each for the preferred varieties. The lowest grades are realizing from 25c. to $1 per 100. All grades are moving slowly.

Carnations are in larger supply and of improved quality, but are meeting with a weak demand, $1 per 100 being top figure for the best.

Cattleya orchids are in larger supply, and, as there is no corresponding increase in the demand prices have sharply declined to 30c. to 75c. each for the choicest blooms. The supply of Lilies is abundant, the white realizing from $5 to $8 per 100 and the pink from $1.50 to $5. Lily of the Valley is very scarce and top grades are selling at from $8 to $12 per 100.

Of the Summer and Autumn flowers the supply of Asters and Gladioli is on the decrease, and that of Dahlias and 'Mums on the increase, but few of the latter two of high quality are yet seen. Cosmos shows an increasing supply and higher quality. Other flowers of this class now seen in the market are Delphinium, Tritoma, Tuberose, Helenium, Helianthus, Eupatorium and Antirrhinum. All Summer and Autumn flowers and also greens are meeting with a moderate demand at quoted prices.

Special Meeting N. Y. Florists' Club

Charles Schenck, president of the New York Florists' Club, complying with the wishes of the New York Liberty Loan Committee that the club take action in regard to the coming drive for the sale of the fourth issue Liberty Loan bonds, has called a special meeting for Monday evening, Sept. 23, at 8 p.m., at its hall in the Grand Opera House, Eighth ave. and 23d st., to consider and act upon a request made by the United States Government that the club lend organized assistance in the forthcoming Fourth Liberty Loan drive, and appoint committees to canvass the trade with a view to disposing of an allotment of bonds which shall exemplify the patriotic spirit expected of the florists' industry. It is imperative for the good of the business that members should pay attention to this call and make it a point to be present and assist in the discussion of ways and means.

Buy Liberty Loan Bonds Through the Club's Committee

The Fourth Liberty Loan drive will soon begin. The New York Florists' Club at its special meeting on Monday night next will no doubt appoint committees to sell these bonds to members of the florists' craft, and of allied industries. "It is a matter of great importance," says President Charles Schenck, "that members of the florists' craft and of associated industries buy their Liberty Loan bonds through the club's committees to the end that the florists' craft as a whole may receive due credit for the purchase of those bonds. Buy your bonds through the club's committees and not through trade or other organizations with which you may in a way be connected."

Frosts in many sections of New York and New England the night of Sept. 11 damaged seriously late Sweet Corn, Beans and Tomatoes.

William F. Gude's article published in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 14, page 424, under the heading of "Florists Not Classed as Non-Essential" has attracted much attention in this city and vicinity, and many favorable comments upon the value and encouragement to the trade of the information which it contains.

Thomas Young, 541 Fifth ave., will retire on Oct. 1 from the retail flower business which he is conducting at the above address. Mr. Young has for many years had one of the finest retail flower stores in Fifth ave., or in fact in New York City.

There was noted at J. S. Fenrich's, 51 W. 28th st., this week very choice blooms of several of the new and of the preferred varieties of Roses, among them being Premier, Columbia, Martinet and Hadley.

Dahlia Shows

We would again remind readers that the Dahlia show of the American Institute of New York City and the American Dahlia Society will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 24, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., and Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 25 and 26, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., at the Engineering Building, 25 to 33 W. 39th st., between Fifth and Sixth aves. Admission is free.

The Dahlia exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held at the Museum Building, New York Botanical Gardens, Bronx Park, Sept. 21, 2 to 5 p.m., and Sept. 22, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Boston

Market Report

Sept. 17.—There is a slight improvement in business at the wholesale flower markets—better demand and somewhat advanced prices. Owing to rainstorms, outdoor flowers have shortened up and the greenhouse flowers are not plentiful yet.

American Beauty Roses are in fair supply and are in better demand from 8c. to 25c. each. Hybrid tea Roses of good quality in moderate supply cleaned up quickly at 2c. to 10c. each. Carnations are showing a slight improvement in quality. The supply is not too large for the demand. Prices are $1 to $1.50 per 100. Gladioli have shortened up considerably and prices have advanced to $2 to $3 per 100. A few sell at $4. Asters, owing to wind and rainstorms, are in less supply. Very few flowers are of good quality. Chrysanthemums, more abundant, of extra nice quality, are selling well on account of the shortage of other flowers. Plant sales are better. Nicely colored Croton plants sell well. Dracæna Massangeana is in good demand. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and moving fairly well.

Mass. Hort. Society

The Dahlia exhibition of the society was held on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 14 and 15. It seems strange that such a poor showing should be made of such a popular flower. Dahlia society members should put up more flowers, and the large growers for their own sake make larger displays. This season was a good one for Dahlias and there were plenty of flowers in the vicinity of Boston to make a fine exhibition. Another weakness in these exhibitions is that so many Dahlias are shown without names. If the flowers are worth staging they certainly ought to be named.

For an artistic display the Boston Cut Flower Co. won first prize. In this class W. B. Hathaway was second. For 12 named decorative Dahlias A. M. Hayden won first and second. For 12 blooms Peony-flowered, first George L. Stillman. Pompon, 12 vases, 3 blooms of each, first J. K. Alexander.

For 12 vases single Dahlias, first J. K. Alexander. One vase Peony-flowered, 6 blooms on long stems, first George L. Stillman.

Honorable mention was awarded to the following exhibitors: C. Louis Allin for display; George S. Stillman for collection of new seedlings; the Ames Plow Co. for Gladioli and Dahlias; the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. for Gladioli and Dahlias.

Hints IF you know how satisfactorily we handle your shipments of flowers, you would certainly ship to us.

We guarantee you best market prices and prompt returns.

Special opportunity for a couple of Good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

The Wholesale Market and News of the City

Better Market

Sept. 16.—The cool weather of the past week has assisted greatly in improving market conditions. There is an increase in the shipping trade, and the heavy end of all surplus stock has passed away. Local trade, while not in noteworthy volume, is improving. Outdoor stock, with the exception of Asters and Gladioli, has had its day for the season so that the time has come when growers who have heavy coal bills to pay and increased working expenses will have an opportunity to get returns on their investments.

There are not as many Roses on the market as there were a week ago. Am. Beauty is to be had only in limited supply and what is offered moves at prices satisfactory to all concerned. In all other varieties the supply equals the demand, with no surplus worthy of note. It is possible that just at present a heavier demand might mean a shortage. Prices are still low, as conditions do not yet warrant an advance.

Carnations are again in good supply and for so early in the season the stock is good; only longer stems are lacking to bring the quality up to the standard of Winter stock.

Asters are a strong feature of the market and there is no trouble in moving all the good stock. The best stock is chiefly greenhouse grown and the price of $4 per 100 for some of it, when the quality is considered, is not high. Poor stock is in oversupply and goes for whatever it will bring, the range of prices being from 50c. to $4 per 100.

The supply of Gladioli is fast decreasing but there is still as much as can be moved satisfactorily.

Easter Lilies are slightly on the short side; also rubrums and auratums but so far dealers have little trouble in picking up enough stock for each day's requirements.

Orchids are scarce; there have not been many on the market for several weeks. It is the winding up of the season for Cattleya gigas and the beginning of the season for C. labiata, two of the most popular varieties coming to this market. One of the leading orchid growers for this market states that the Summer has been a fine one for Cattleyas and the prospects for a good supply for Fall and Winter trade were never better.

Each week sees an increase in the 'Mum supply. All the extra early ones are in crop, with the second earlies following quickly. So far all stock moves at satisfactory prices. How the 'Mum season will terminate this year is a matter of some anxiety to the growers. It is known that there are larger crops this season than ever. Many growers intending to close their greenhouses before extreme cold weather sets in have planted 'Mums this year, knowing the crop can be produced without firing. This will make a marked difference in the amount to be marketed during the next two months. To offset this however, there is little fear of an invasion of the market this year by California grown stock. The express companies under Governmental control, will not encourage the shipping of 'Mums from California. Reports from that section state that their use this season will be confined chiefly to the Coast cities and towns of the Far West and they will not come into competition with the stock handled on the great Chicago market.

Carnation Company Meeting

A meeting of the creditors of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. was held in the office of the referee in bankruptcy in Joliet on Tuesday, Sept. 10, to consider an offer of $8000 for the property. The offer was not acceptable to the creditors and was consequently rejected. The referee will again advertise the property in an endeavor to realize more on it for the benefit of the creditors. It was the opinion of a few present familiar with the greenhouse business that an effort to sell the property again this year would prove to be unsuccessful, as no purchaser could operate the range during the next six months without loss. A number of

The American Dahlia Society's awards were as follows: Display of Dahlias, J. K. Alexander, Michell's Silver Cup. For a collection, Louis Alling was awarded the Carters Tested Seed prize. In Class J, for a display of Dahlias, J. K. Alexander was awarded a silver medal, and Thomas Murphy was awarded a bronze one in the same class. In Class K, for decorative Dahlia, J. E. Jones received the Vincent prize for his new Dahlia President Wilson.

The exhibits of vegetables were especially fine. D. R. McLean, who had 12 varieties of Onions, was awarded a silver medal for the display. A silver medal was also awarded to the Brookline High School for Girls' War Garden display of vegetables. Handsome displays of fruit were shown in large numbers. A first class certificate was awarded to John Scheepers Co. for a new Raspberry "La France."

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., gave an illustrated, largely attended lecture on Dahlias, at Horticultural Hall, on Saturday, Sept. 14. Many of the slides showed ways in which the retail florist may use this flower. The writer suggests that a few slides showing the use of Dahlias as garden plants, as border plants and not solid would be instructive and show the value of this plant in Autumn flower gardens.

Straws in the Wind

Among recent visitors: Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md.; Leonard Barron, editor of The Garden Magazine at Garden City, N. Y.; Otto Thilow of the Henry A. Dreer, Inc., of Philadelphia, Pa.; George W. Stillman, of Westerly, R. I.; H. E. Downer, of Northampton, Mass.

The subject for discussion at the meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club on Tuesday, Sept. 17, was "What Can Gardeners Do to Win the War?" The discussion was opened by W. N. Craig.

Thomas Roland is cutting from his Nahant greenhouse Golden Glow Chrysanthemums, which are selling well because of Asters being spoiled in heavy rains. His Crotons and Dracæna Massangeana are selling well.

A. M. Davenport of Watertown is growing about 5000 Chrysanthemums in pots. Many women are employed, and most of them give good satisfaction.

weeks would be required to make repairs; and coal and other necessary materials would also have to be purchased to conduct the business. The season is too far advanced from a practical standpoint for the consideration of an immediate sale. The sum of $8000 with accrued court costs, offered for the property, will no more than pay off the secured indebtedness, so that a sale of the property at this price would not pay a penny to unsecured creditors. It is figured that the property will have to bring more than $10,000 before the unsecured creditors will get anything. For these reasons it was suggested that all further attempts to sell be deferred until early Spring. At that time conditions may be better and there is a possibility that the property may then bring more money. In the meantime the unsecured creditors have nothing to lose by waiting. It looks like a case of loss anyway with a reasonable possibility that a Spring sale might be best. Just what action the referee will take on these suggestions was not stated at the meeting.

In the primary election on Sept. 11 Peter Reinberg received the Democratic nomination for reelection to his present position of president of the board of Cook County Commissioners, a position he has held with honor for several terms. He is at the head of the affairs of Cook county, which embraces Chicago and numerous suburban towns of importance.

The Miller Floral Co., Farmington, Utah, opened its retail store in Salt Lake City Saturday, Robt. Newcomb a former popular Chicagoan is manager. His friends and business associates here sent telegrams of congratulation.

The sale at auction of the Anton Then greenhouse stock and equipment, which includes auto delivery trucks and a touring car is scheduled for Sept. 17 at 10.30 a.m.

P. W. Peterson, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet states that the company will close a part of its greenhouses at the end of the 'Mum season to conserve fuel. Mr. Peterson registered for the new draft Sept. 12.

Tom Sullivan, of Sullivan Bros., proprietors of the Woodlawn Flower Shop, 871 E. 63d st., is at Camp Grant. While on a recent furlough he said that he expected to leave for France soon.

Gus Swanson, on Lake st. and Des Plaines River, has his full quota of coal on hand but says that he will burn only 50 per cent. of it, thus obeying the ruling of the Fuel Administration. He will close two of his houses and will build a temporary partition of hot bed sash, using only part of his range till Spring. Mr. Swanson's oldest son, H. G., 25 years old, who helps him in the business, was placed in a deferred class in the last draft, but was notified a few days ago to be prepared for immediate service. A younger son, Geo. P., will celebrate his 21st birthday on Sept. 12, registration day, and will no doubt have to join the Colors.

The Labo Floral Co., Joliet, will close a few of its houses this Winter to conserve fuel. The firm can get all the screenings desired but the expense of building a taller smoke stack and having the boilers overhauled would not justify the use of screenings. Peter Herbach, the superintendent, registered for the new draft on Sept. 12.

The United States Government war exposition closed on the lake front on Sunday. The attendance for the 14 days fell a little short of the 2,000,000 mark. The average daily attendance was 139,686. The average daily attendance at the World's Fair in 1893 was only 117,321. The World's Fair had an advance fund of $20,000,000, the war exposition paid its own expenses and turned all the profits over to Uncle Sam. The exposition brought to the city many in the trade from the surrounding towns and flowers were freely worn by the lady attendants and visitors.

Philadelphia

Improved Market

Sept. 17.—The market shows improvement the past few days, as one wholesaler aptly remarked, "It had a little pep." Dahlias are not in quite as heavy supply as anticipated, so are clearing nicely. The best Asters are over. Roses are in good supply in all varieties and grades with a heavy influx of American Beauty. New crop Carnations are increasing with slight takings. The early Chrysanthemums are hanging fire. Easter Lilies are taking well with a full supply. Orchids are increasing slowly with diminishing prices. Gladioli are poor and the supply is on the wane.

Notes

The new draft law is making inroads into the trade. Benjamin Gibbs, who has been with Eugene Bernheimer for years, has gone into a war essential business. The Leo Niessen Co. is filling its gaps with women, likewise the Robert Craig Co. and numerous other concerns.

John Cox lately with the S. S. Pennock Co. is now in Co. 10, 3d Battalion, 153 Depot Brigade, Camp Dix, N. J.

S. S. Pennock has returned from a pleasant stay of four week in New England.

Eugene Bernheimer had an order from one of the department stores this week that included 50,000 Roses, besides Asters and other flowers.

J. Otto Thilow of the Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is on his vacation.

Clarence U. Liggit is calling on the growers through the State.

Stephen Mortensen of Southampton is sending in to the S. S. Pennock Co. some of the finest blooms we have seen so far of the new Rose Columbia.

M. J. Callahan has added a new Dodge car to his delivery fleet.

The Robert Craig Co. is cutting the first of their Chrysanthemums.

The Leo Niessen Co. is featuring Dahlias in quantity.

The Water Cooled Culm Burning Grate Co. of Collingswood, N. J., has an ingenious grate that can be installed under any boiler for burning culm, coal dust or screenings. The grate is water cooled to prevent warping or melting due to the intense heat generated by a blower injected into an air chamber that lies underneath the grate. Back firing and pre-explosion due to unburned gasses in the air chamber is overcome by ball bearings being placed in the air ducts of the grate. H. F. Morris who operates several greenhouses in Collingswood has been using this style of grate for several years with great success. He states he is buying screenings and coal dust from the local coal yard at less than a dollar a ton.

San Francisco, Cal.

A. J. Oliver, trustee, acting for the Pacific Florists' Supply Company, bankrupt, states that he expects to complete the inventory before Sept. 15; and immediately begin to dispose of the assets of the company, probably not as a whole but in small lots.

C. C. Morse & Co. supplied the plants and installed the exhibit which the United States Government made at the State fair in Sacramento, for the purpose of popularizing the War Garden movement. The display represented a country home, surrounded at close radius with ornamental plants, and in the distance with a varied vegetable garden that embraced a wide range of subjects. A miniature system of irrigation completed the display.

The writer is advised that the Albany Nursery of Albany, Ore., has recently taken the necessary legal steps to have the capital stock of the company decreased from $25,000 to $5000. The change being made not because of any falling off in business, but in the interest of economy in taxes.

The recent action of the Oakland City Council in prohibiting the use of water on lawns and ornamental flower gardens has very seriously affected the local nursery trade, not only of Oakland but also of San Francisco. Several nurserymen have stated to the writer that it resulted in a sharp decrease in their sales; one in particular stating that he believes the decrease amounts to 75 per cent. However, as this is being written, the first rains of the season are making their appearance, and are apparently wide-spread. Old Californians state that these are nothing more than the annual equinoxial rains, confined to the period ten days before and ten days after Sept. 21.

Pacific Coast Horticultural Society

The September meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held on the 7th instant, at Red Men's Hall. Owing to the absence of several of the members who had gone to the State Fair at Sacramento, the attendance was not large. The exhibits of the evening included Nephrolepis-Norwood by H. Plath, Cattleya carmencita by J. Carbone, Ceanothus Gloire de Versailles by E. James. The judges of the evening's exhibits were Messrs. C. Abraham, John Gill and E. Holmes.

The new service flag of the society, being made by Miss Gladys Plath, will have eight stars. We are proud of our contribution to Uncle Sam.

The Lapsation committee of the P. C. H. S. will apply the scissors to the names of those who have not paid their dues for the past year. Members who have joined the Colors do not have to pay dues during the war.

John Gill of the E. Gill Nurseries will continue as a member of the Draft Exemption Board at Berkeley, an office that he has held for more than a year.

RALEIGH, N. C.—The Raleigh Floral Co. has been purchased by Miss Ethel Haynes and Mrs. J. H. Weathers. This firm was formerly operated by E. M. Hall, who has taken up ministerial work.

The work or fight order has created a stir in the ranks of the florists. Some have been advised to change their occupation and others told to hold on to their job. The best solution is to wait until called, which the Government will surely do if in need.

A. Herbert, of Rasch & Herbert Co., is at St. Vincent's Hospital recovering from an operation. He expects to be on the job again in about three weeks.

Wm. C. Wood writes that Honolulu is wonderful when it comes to flowers. He states that Crimson Bird's Nest ferns and our Whitmani and Boston grow wonderfully outdoors.

Kai Jenson, of Kelso, drove to the city last week in his car. Business is of the usual Summer volume with him since he has no war materials to sell.

The Martin & Forbes Co. is showing an exhibit of the cups offered by the Salem fair to the floral exhibitors.

J. G. Bacher and the writer had the pleasure of climbing Mt. St. Helens last Labor Day.

Usually with the coming of shorter days business is on the increase. The first week in September looked promising, but the second week spilled the beans. Weather has been exceptionally warm and sultry and no one has much ambition. Registration Day and the new Liberty Loan will leave conditions unsettled for a time. What really is lacking is funeral work. Every shop is filled with stock of all kinds and the quality is excellent but the weather makes short work of it. Roses are especially plentiful and the loss therein probably heavier than some other kinds of stock as one day will finish them. The first Golden Glow 'Mums have made their appearance but are not wanted yet, although in the way of variety they attract attention. The new crop of Carnations is coming to bloom at present and is somewhat in over supply owing to the fine supply of Asters.

Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday evening with T. E. Imus presiding. There was a good attendance. The subject of the evening was advertising and there was a general discussion.

Alfred Finck who has had charge of and done excellent landscape work at Natatorium Park for the past eight years has given up his position. He has bought a ranch of considerable size and will try farming for a change.

Emily, the only daughter of Supt. of Parks John W. Duncan died on Aug. 30, at the age of 17. She had been ill only three weeks. At the funeral, which was held at the house, the floral tributes were very numerous. They came from many friends of the family and members of the trade. The Florists' Club sent a casket cover of Roses and Lilies which was an excellent work of art.

G. A. Root of the Bureau of Plant Industry, dept. of Agri. has been making a survey of White Pines, Currants and Gooseberries recently shipped into this district with a view to keeping track of the White Pine rust. So far he has been unable to detect any signs of it.

Prof. J. G. Jack of the Arnold Arboretum spent several days in town, looking up native trees and shrubs through this locality. He spent two days with Supt. of Parks John W. Duncan, who tried to locate as many species as possible for him.

Paris Green and Airplanes

For some time there was a threatened shortage of the highly important insecticide, Paris green. The reason for this was that the supply of acetic acid, heretofore considered indispensable to the manufacture of Paris green was taken over some months ago for the manufacture of the waterproofing mixture used for waterproofing airplane wings. To remedy this deficiency a trade conference was called by the U. S. Food Administration and the War Industries Board in cooperation, with the result that a large yeast manufacturer agreed to furnish vinegar (which contains about 10 per cent. of acetic acid) to the makers of Paris green, to take the place of the acetic acid which had been diverted to airplane making. Therefore the normal supply of Paris green is assured. The Dept. of Agri. advises, however, that in many cases lead arsenate and calcium arsenate, which are cheaper (especially the latter) make satisfactory substitutes as insecticide.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

WANTED—To purchase or lease, a range of glass in N. Y. City or nearby. Address
W. Rehm, 308 West 23rd st., New York

Fort Wayne, Ind.

There has been considerable improvement in the demand, particularly during the latter part of the week, and a better quality of stock is coming into the market than for some time. The weather has been dark and cloudy, 5in. of rain having fallen within the past fortnight, and flowers are opening up slowly. Carnations have a tendency to be sleepy, on account of the lack of sunshine. Funeral work has made heavy inroads on the supply.

Red Cross Auction

The Red Cross auction held Sept. 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 took thousands of blooms, which were donated by the local florists. Plants and ferns and handsome baskets of flowers were also given by the patriotic florists of this city to this very worthy cause, $40,000 being realized for the Red Cross fund.

The Flick Floral Co. donated $100 worth of flowers to the auction, including 1000 Roses.

Baskets of cut flowers, Aster plants, and ferns were donated by Ed. Wenninghoff.

A handsome basket of flowers given by the Freese Floral Co., brought $23. This firm also gave several hundred Roses each day of the auction.

The Lanternier florists, besides donating flowers also contributed to the entertainment fund. Miss Ruth Lanternier have a number of classical dances at the auction.

The New Haven Floral Co. contributed several hundred Roses and Carnations each day to the auction, besides selling many Roses to local retailers at cost, to be donated to the same cause.

The firm is remodeling several of its greenhouses, and has built one new house, 232 ft. long for growing blooming plants. This firm plans to grow vegetable plants for the Winter and Spring, as soon as the 'Mum season is over. The crop of Columbia Roses is very large. Herman Leitz, of this firm was among those who had to register in the new 18-45 draft on Sept. 12.

A number of florists donated cut flowers and plants during the large Liberty Gardens' Fair which was held in this city on Sept. 5, 6 and 7. The proceeds went to the Red Cross.

News of the Soldiers

Lieut. William J. Vesey, Jr. and Mrs. Vesey have arrived in this city from Long Island, N. Y. Lieut. Vesey will spend a short furlough of a few days here with his family, before leaving for an Eastern port, from which he expects to sail very shortly.

George Pandell, formerly of the Fort Wayne Flower Shop, writes from a New York camp that he is awaiting daily the order to sail for overseas service. Mr. Pandell says: "God bless Keegan, (a member of the local draft board) because he put me in Class One. Please give him a Carnation for me. We are expecting to go overseas from this camp at any moment and I am the happiest man in the world. Would not trade my uniform for Calhoun st. and the city of New York." Private Pandell is a member of Company A, 327th Machine Gun Battalion, and was stationed at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O. for a number of months. He was later assigned to the 84th or Lincoln Division.

Private Walter Knecht, writes his parents here from Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., that an epidemic of measles prevents him from coming home on an expected furlough. He is a member of Battery A, and is at present doing office work at the camp.

Private George W. Doswell, who was drafted into the National Army in June, and sent to Camp Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind., has been recently transferred to Camp Sheridan, Ala. He is now with the First Casualty detachment, awaiting the formation of a field artillery unit.

Many of the local craft had to register for the draft on Sept. 12. Among them were Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., R. W. Doswell, John H. Doswell, Ed and Clem Lanternier, Dick Vesey, and Herman Leitz. Henry Freese of the Freese Floral Co. and Ed. Wenninghoff have already registered under the first draft law, but have not yet been inducted into service.

The Doswell Floral Co. has had a number of decorations recently, among them a large decoration at Robison Park for Old Soldiers' Day, Sunday, Sept. 8.

F. J. Knecht & Co. report an excellent demand, with not enough stock to satisfy it. The firm has practically all its Winter coal in, having almost 600 tons, or 11 cars in its bins. However the labor problem is assuming alarming proportions.

Miss S. L. Nelson, secretary of W. J. & M. S. Vesey has gone to Northern lakes, on a two-weeks' vacation.

The representatives of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill., and Geo. Wittbold & Co., Chicago, called on the trade. D. B.

Does It Seem That While You Carry The Big Load of Business The Other Fellow Runs Away With All The Profits?

EVEN if it is so, there is no use looking so glum about it.

Perhaps there is a help.

Mayhap, we can be that help.

Help, in the form of our Coal Eater Detective.

He's our heating expert, who has been with us for over a quarter of a century.

You may know him as the Trouble Man. That was his name before the war jacked up the prices of coal, and added to the burdens of the growers.

He's not looking for trouble now.

He is "detecting" it.

After detecting it, then he tells you how to overcome it, and get on the sunny side of the street.

He detects it, by going over your heating system with a fine tooth comb, and dragging out the coal-eaters.

Not the easy-as-falling-off-a-log kind of coal-eaters; like the wrong boiler; or the right boiler, that's too small.

None of those things. But the things you never suspected were digging into your coal pile; and making you everlastingly dig into your pockets.

So, to get back to that load you said you were carrying; who knows, maybe part of it is due to your heating system?

There's one way to know.

Send for our Coal Eater Detective.

It may cost you a dollar or two.

But it's not what it may cost that interests you now. It's what it will save you next winter that counts.

The American Dahlia Society

Fourth Annual Meeting and Exhibition a Great Success

New York, September 24, 25 and 26

The annual meeting was called to order by President Vincent at 3 o'clock, Tuesday, Sept. 24. Mr. Vincent, in his opening remarks, pointed out the great need there was for flowers at this time. He urged members to wear flowers in their buttonholes and encourage their use whenever possible. He referred to the work he had done at the Walter Reed Construction Hospital at Washington in planting flowers there, and said that the doctors at the hospital were convinced of the curative value of flowers for sick and wounded soldiers. He urged the carrying out of the slogan "Say It with Flowers," and especially with Dahlias, when the latter were in bloom. His address follows:

President Richard Vincent's Address

By the kind hand of Providence we meet here again in our annual session and, while the year has had its trials and strenuous ones, it is my pleasure as president to have the privilege of welcoming you here at this our fourth annual meeting. The secretary's report will tell you of our continued success, the interest being taken in the society, and a fairly good increase in membership. The treasurer reports our finances in good condition so, with your help and assistance, we may look forward to continued prosperity.

This year has not been without its lessons, both in the cultivation of the old and new varieties, and also in the uses to which the Dahlia flower can be put, and we want the slogan of our mother society, the S. A. F. and O. H. kept up—"Say it With Flowers," and Dahlia flowers whenever in season, as the Dahlia has come to be regarded as a flower of quality when grown to its fullest perfection, and we know that it will always repay for all the care and attention that can possibly be given it.

The Late J. Harrison Dick

Much has been said and written regarding our loss through the death of our beloved secretary, J. Harrison Dick. He came into it just at the time when an able hand was needed to steer our enterprise. Although not strong physically, and burdened with other duties, he consented through friendship and love of the work, to help and assist the American Dahlia Society in its efforts to make good. The sympathy of our society and others has been expressed to his widow and child, and it is our earnest wish that they may never lack for friends.

It has been suggested and sanctioned by our executive committee, and I sincerely hope it will be carried out, that the best new Dahlia of 1918 origin, if agreeable to the introducer when selected by the judges, be named after our late secretary as an honorable recognition of his worth and work for horticulture, and my sincere hope is that it will be a good commercial variety that will perpetuate his name for years to come.

Our present secretary, Jasper R. Lewis, has ably filled the position to the satisfaction of all concerned. He has handled successfully the many difficult and different matters left in his hands and, no matter who you may elect as your presiding officer for the coming year, I certainly would like to see Mr. Lewis retained, as I know he is trustworthy and competent to fill the position.

The California and Other Societies

To our California members and friends we owe a debt of gratitude hard to express as they have been of great assistance to us both in membership and cooperation. As we do not all live on the Pacific Coast, but in other sections where conditions are not adapted to growing Dahlias as they can, we cannot help but envy our friends living in a climate that gives them such a wonderful, long growing season. Our earnest desire is that their society may continue to thrive and their splendid seedlings always be worthy of the high praise they are now receiving everywhere.

The Toronto (Canada) society is surging along and every year shows increasing interest. Culture and observation will show the varieties best adapted to their northern climate. We wish them success and are willing to help them in any way possible, and we thank them for the silver and bronze medals their society offered us this season. To the various garden clubs and like organizations we extend our deepest desire for the success and cooperation, and anything that the officers of our society can do, either as judges or in any way for the promotion and love of the flower and growing of same, will be done. The New Haven and Boston Horticultural societies had exhibits fully up to the standards of any former exhibit, and the vegetables shown at the same time made both exhibits useful and educational.

Flowers and their Mission

A great deal has been written and said about the flowers being non-essential and superfluous since our entry into the world war. Most of these articles are by writers who have never understood the full mission of flowers to our homes or hospitals, where our loved ones are lying sick and wounded. Great Britain and other countries have advocated the growing and use of flowers for the above purposes, and we think that American flower lovers and growers are advocating these flower shows at this time believing that with all the cruelty of war something is needed to brighten life and make it more like living, and many sore hearts are finding solace and quiet recreation in their gardens, more than they can in any other way.

Let the cultivation of flowers go on; do your bit, read of them, plant them, grow them, show them, and get others interested in a like work. Something has also been said about using the land for flowers that might be used for food purposes. That might be true if land was scarce, but in this wonderful country of ours there are yet millions of acres of land uncultivated, enough to spare to grow all the vegetables all the world might need; why then begrudge a small portion of the land or time for the flower garden?

American Institute

We are greatly indebted to the American Institute, its officers and their worthy secretary, Mr. Eagleston, for their kindness and cooperation in every way possible towards making this exhibition the grand success it is this year and in the past years that we have exhibited here under their auspices, and I believe that I express the sentiments of every member of the Dahlia Society when I say that in this period of our history we are more than thankful for their kind help, and our earnest wish is that they may never tire of well doing in having these wonderful shows which are undoubtedly beneficial to mankind. I am also indebted to our executive committee and others for their kind assistance throughout the past year.

Final

I am proud to be your presiding officer again this year. Let us come together during this meeting to the material benefit of ourselves and all mankind, so that when we leave this wonderful city we may return home rejoicing in the knowledge gained, the friendships renewed and the new ones made, which will cement us in stronger bonds to the end of our lives.

Generosity of thought and action is an attitude of the florist, because we live close to Nature, and no body of men and women anywhere stands more ready to extend a helping hand to a brother or sister in trouble. We become more broad minded as we mingle with the world, more united for progress and the general distribution of our discoveries in order that our fellow tradesman may be benefitted.

Let us strive to increase the life of flowers universally, not only for our own selfish or money making purposes, but for the elevation of mankind. Neither should we confine our efforts to our country but let us make use of them freely whenever we can extend our cult from country to country the world over, in the endeavor to bring the peace and good will which will ultimately reign throughout the world and bring us into one brotherhood of communion and fellowship.

Secretary J. R. Lewis then read his report as follows:

Secretary's Report

This report is for the period from April 11, 1918, to date. Following the loss of the society's secretary, J. Harrison Dick, a close personal friend of mine the executive committee appointed me secretary for the remainder of the year. I have been glad to bridge the gap, first in memory of my good friend, and secondly to help President Vincent, whom I have known for a number of years.

Owing to the sudden death of Mr. Dick, it has been difficult to take up the burden as efficiently as it might have been done under happier circumstances. Your present secretary has, therefore, done his best to keep up with the more important work of his office and, with this apology, passes on to his formal report.

The various meetings of the executive committee have been duly reported in the bulletin of the society. Joseph J. Lane, a former secretary of the society, and a member of the executive committee, on account of entrance into military service last May, announced his retirement from office, and the committee at that time adopted a resolution to keep on the active list all members who entered the U. S. military service, remitting their dues for the period of the war.

The Membership Prize

The silver cup, donated by Richard Appel of White Plains, N. Y., to be awarded to the member who secured the greatest number of new members, has been easily won by George L. Stillman of Westerly, R. I. who, from April 1 to date, has sent in the names of sixteen new members, with many others before that date. Mr. Stillman showed much interest in this work and it is to be regretted that some of our other members did not set him a faster pace. Other members also secured additional applications, President Vincent having the next greatest number after Mr. Stillman.

The Bulletin

An issue of the bulletin was published for March, but was considerably delayed in its appearance for the reason already given. The number of advertisements in that issue showed the amount of work Mr. Dick had done on behalf of this society; in fact, the March edition was at least self-supporting. Another bulletin, issued early in September, was not so satisfactory from the point of financial support.

At the May meeting of the executive committee it was voted to publish another bulletin in November, to contain a full report of this annual meeting and exhibition. I. S. Hendrickson suggested the advisability of issuing the bulletin every second month during 1919. This would give advertisers a definite arrangement and plan for their advertising, and would also permit the dissemination of more cultural information about our flower. As a national society we should certainly publish all the news and educational matter obtainable that is of value to Dahlia growers, but to make this possible greater support must be given the bulletin financially. Even if it has to be issued at a loss for each number, as the official organ of the society it should be continued, bettered and enlarged in scope. Your secretary considers the bulletin the strongest link between the members. Through it the society can render great service to present members and continue to attract new ones. Its value cannot be emphasized too strongly.

Membership

The present muster of the society is a little short of three hundred, but in addition to its numerical strength an encouraging feature is the fact that since your present secretary has had charge of the membership list not one member has asked to be dropped, whereas each week brings new members into the fold. I would recommend that some membership campaign be undertaken for the ensuing year, with a competent committee in charge.

Mrs. Charles H. Stout of Short Hills, N. J., has again kindly offered to donate a silver cup for the 1919 exhibition, and on behalf of the society the secretary has accepted.

The various reports were adopted unanimously. The treasurer's report showed that the club was in healthy financial condition. Geo. L. Stillman of Westerly, R. I. was awarded the silver cup for obtaining the greatest number of new members, his total being about 30, the second largest number being credited to Pres. Vincent. A letter of resignation from Jos. J. Lane was read, Mr. Lane now being in the Army. The club decided that all members with the Colors be retained on the lists during the war without payment of further dues. Owing to the fact that Prof. Hall, on account of continued illness, was unable to conduct the Dahlia trial grounds at Geneva, N. Y. it was decided to accept the offer of Prof. Geo. W. Fraser to conduct a trial grounds at the Agri. Exp. Sta. at Storrs, Conn.

The changes in the by-laws, relating to the change in the fiscal year and the matter of dues and life membership, previously passed by the executive committee, were adopted by the society. Alfred H. Langjahr, a well known New York florist, at 55 W. 26th st., was elected on the executive committee to take the place of Mr. Lane, and Jasper R. Lewis was unanimously elected to continue in office as secretary. The complete roster of the new officers is as follows.

War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

Why Not Make Your Catalog As Effective as Possible?

Catalogs cost money to print and money to mail—why not make each one a 100 per cent selling force?

If a prospective buyer gets two or more catalogs, the one that is best written and arranged, best illustrated, nine times out of ten will prove the best salesman.

A few good color plates wisely distributed through black and white pages, add little to the total cost yet multiply a catalog's effectiveness many times.

Just a touch of human interest introduced into your text by a man who knows people as well as you know seeds and plants will make your book more readable and convincing.

We are prepared to supply everything from text revision to mailing.

Our complete library of illustrations is at your disposal. Our artists are ready to illustrate and our engravers to make plates. Our printing plant is perfectly equipped.

We truly feel that any seedsman or nurseryman can intensify the power of his catalog if he lets us work with him.

We will be glad to send a competent man to see you and explain the service we render. It is not expensive.

The WEEK'S WORK

Conducted by FRITZ BAHR

Buddleia Variabilis Magnifica

Buddleia variabilis magnifica, one of the most beautiful outdoor plants, is best propagated now from cuttings. The little plants can be overwintered in a cool house. Shift and pinch several times during the Spring months and you will have fine flowering stock for next Summer. With us every once in a while we have the old plants freeze out and sometimes the ones most exposed stand the winter better than those extra well protected. A good way to do is to lift a few specimens and plant them in a coldframe where with sash protection they are sure to come through all right.

Pentstemon

Pentstemons, like the Buddleias, are not nearly enough grown and appreciated by the average florist. While the Buddleia belongs to the shrubs the Pentstemons are perennials, but in many places not hardy. Go West far enough and you can see them in flower all the Summer through, retaining their dark green foliage as well, but in the East frame protection is necessary. One can make cuttings now from the young shoots of low and grow the plants along with the small Buddleias. Another way is to sow seed in October to get flowering plants for next Summer. If you have to purchase seed get the best. Pentstemon Torrinioides Sensation will give you some excellent, large flowers of a great variety of colors.

Boltonias

While the Boltonias resemble the native, small, hardy Aster and the individual flowers are not very showy, when the flower heads are cut with 3ft. to 4ft. long stems you couldn't ask for anything more showy for decorating. Both the white and the pink sorts are perfectly hardy and will grow in almost any soil and location. The present is a good time to take up and divide the old plants, but freshly transplanted stock should be properly protected in order to overwinter.

Salvia uliginosa

Salvia uliginosa, a hardy species, is very much like Salvia azurea only of a heavier growth and somewhat larger flowers. With us it is in full bloom in late September and is a most desirable cut flower. All we have in blue outdoors are a few Delphiniums and this Salvia. In spite of the fact that last Winter was very severe this Salvia came through in perfect shape without any protection. Where is there a florist who hasn't all kinds of use for such a fine cut flower in the Fall and one which requires so little attention? A vase full with a few Boltonias makes an attractive window decoration. The flowers in water will last for days. Grow from seed sown during February or March.

Coreopsis lanceolata grandiflora

Fine for Spring Forcing

Have you ever tried to bring Coreopsis to flower under glass during April and early May? If you have field grown plants now lift a batch before too late and either pot up into 5's or heel into a coldframe. By next February you may have part of a bench to spare on which the Coreopsis may be planted out. Don't have them over 40 deg. during March and 50 deg. later on. Plant rather close on the bench. The flowers under glass are larger and longer stemmed than outdoor ones. Every retail grower can dispose of quantities of them during Spring. Yellow flowers of the Daisy type always sell.

Disbudding 'Mums

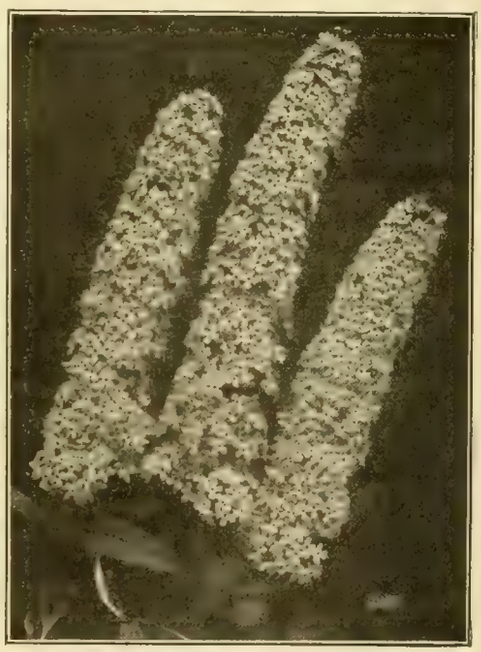
No matter what variety of Chrysanthemums you grow, whether early or late, single stem, bush plants, double or single flowers, when you get to the disbudding or to the selecting of the buds which are to produce the flowers, always start in at the top of the plants and work down for the reason that if by chance you should injure or break off the bud which was to be kept you have others farther down to draw from. This will not be possible if you start at the bottom and come up. Accidents are likely to happen to the best of gardeners. To start on top and wait too long before you get at it, to allow a half dozen buds to grow on a single stem plant, with 3in. to 4in. long stems, is wrong. The work of disbudding should be started when the buds are just large enough to get a hold of them. While you are at it remove also every bit of other unnecessary growth along the stem and any growth which may appear at the base of the plants. The object of growing single stem flowers is to obtain as large and perfect shaped blossoms as possible. To do that every bit of strength in the plant should go toward it. When a plant is permitted to make a lot of suckers at the bottom or a lot of side shoots it is at the expense of the flower.

Early Outdoor 'Mums

Don't fail to place a temporary frame over the outdoor, early flowering Chrysanthemums. A light frost, or two of them, won't hurt the plants in the least, but it doesn't do the flowers any good. What does far more damage is a rainy week just when the flowers start to open up. With sashes over the plants you may avoid this. In many localities after a spell of cold or rainy weather during October a week or two of warm, sunny days is the rule. It is then that one appreciates the outdoor 'Mums. If you want to sell the flowers they have to be perfect. This is not so important with the plants in the hardy border.

Avoid Late Watering Indoor 'Mums

With the plants set with buds or getting ready for them and no more foliage to be expected care should be used in maintaining a rather dry atmosphere in the houses over night. This will help to keep the foliage in good shape. While mildew is sure to appear when watering late in the afternoon is kept up, followed by cool nights and no fire, a hot, dry house will ruin the best plants in a short time, but a cool, dry one over night will not only keep mildew away but help greatly to develop perfect flowers. Do watering early in the morning so by night every leaf will be dry. When the thermometer outdoors goes near 40 put on a little heat in the houses but don't forget to give a crack of air along with it.



Buddleia variabilis magniffca

Pansies

Don't neglect the little Pansy plants. It doesn't do them any good to remain crowded. When you transplant them where they are to remain over Winter plant in straight rows. It will be easier to keep them clean that way. Often before they are sold in Spring weeds appear. These must be removed. It is well to plant the later sown stock or such as is small in frames so as to be able to protect the plants with sashes over Winter. The larger plants don't need sash, but a little light covering for these toward the end of December won't hurt.

Pyrethrum Roseum

If you neglected to sow seed of Pyrethrum roseum or what you did sow didn't come up well, the old plants may now be divided. If transplanted about 6in. apart they will make nice stock by next Spring and flower better than the old undivided plants. Seed sown now in a coldframe and the plants left undisturbed over Winter will also give good results, but only a small portion of them will flower next Spring. A better way is to wait with more sowing until next year outdoors.

Canterbury Bells

By potting up Canterbury Bells now and carrying them along in a coldframe until January, after which they should go to a Violet house and later on in a temperature of 43 to 50, you can get the plants or a good percentage into flower for next Easter. With the Campanulas it is the same as with Hydrangeas if potbound plants can be had they will flower earlier than those freshly potted during Midwinter. I am sure no one will have trouble to dispose of these beautiful plants next Easter, but even if they don't all come in they will sell as well later on.

Culture of Spanish Iris

Will you kindly answer the following:

1. Is the Spanish Iris hardy enough to be planted outdoors just like the Tulip, and left outdoors to flower in the Spring?

2. If not entirely hardy, can they be boxed up and left outdoors with protection, and brought in as needed during Winter the same as other bulbs?

3. Please state any further pointers on handling Spanish Iris in either of the above described manners.—S.K., N. Y.

—The following, taken from "Bailey's Cyclopedia of Horticulture," will answer the inquirer's first question:

"Planted out in early Fall, the so-called Spanish Irises make an early start and produce leaves which are persistent during the Winter and seldom injured there. In May and June they broaden out, and are then surmounted by very bright, distinct and charming flowers. They probably do best in spots inclining to moisture. The bulbs make offsets rapidly, and should often be divided and replanted."

In answer to question 2 and 3 we will say that the boxes of bulbs, which should be planted as soon as received in Autumn, should have protection of a coldframe, or be covered with several inches of straw or meadow hay or litter, if placed outside. The boxes of bulbs are usually brought into the greenhouse for forcing from January till Spring, as many at a time as may be necessary to obtain a succession of blooms. J. H. S.

War-Time Banquets

There is no place at this time of war economy for unnecessary convention entertainment, for elaborate banquets, or for the family and salesmen's junkets, says the U. S. Food Administration. Conventions should be all business, real business, participated in solely by those representatives of member firms having the power to decide and act, with all extraneous side lights or high lights eliminated.

If entertainment is sought, it is always in the power of the individual attendant upon such gatherings to secure the variety of pleasure he prefers, but there is no necessity for, and, in fact, there is a distinct reason why there should be no elaborate banquets, with large expenditures for many varieties of food and the accompanying beverages. This was proved conclusively at conventions of large associations held last Summer and Fall, when many of the usual pre-war banquet concomitants were omitted without loss.

In response to a recent inquiry concerning banquets the Food Administration stated:

"The Food Administration wants the American people to eat wisely and well and without waste. Our people ought to eat in such a way as to maintain their strength and efficiency and with due regard always to the demands on our food resources in winning the war.

"To most Americans that means three good meals a day. So far as food alone is concerned, it makes no difference whether one of these meals is called a banquet instead of a dinner, so long as it does not transgress any of the requirements that loyal Americans should keep in mind.

A telegraphic despatch from the Seeds- men's War Service, Washington, D. C., vises us that "Seeds have been placed Class three on the War Preference t. except flower seeds."

European Notes

The staff of life is uppermost in our oughts and efforts at present. We are ankful to report that South of the rent the harvest has been safely gath- ed in and that on the whole it has been ully abundant, and the condition per- ct. The dry atmospheric conditions hich exist at present have had a ripen- g effect upon Carrot and Parsnip ops, and a considerable quantity of ed has been harvested already in good ndition. A decided drop in the price both these articles may reasonably be pected, especially for the latter. It is pity that Parsnip seed is so tricky in le matter of germination. Many heart- rnings have resulted from this during le past two or three years.

Next to Radish, which is always more less troublesome, the crops causing ost anxiety just now are Mangel Wurzel and the later plantations of ble Beet. The long drought caused he main seed stems of these crops to ry up prematurely, but the rains in ugust have caused the plants to sprout ain, and already they have developed a owd of slender shoots which are full f undersized seed. As there is no pos- ibility of these shoots attaining matur- ty we shall be compelled to reap the ain crop before it is fully ripe. This eans considerable reduction in the eight and value of the crop. As the creage standing both in France and reat Britain is limited the high prices f last season for these articles will be ully maintained. The half sugar varie- ies of Mangel are especially short, and e demand is consequently brisk.

The latest threshings of Cabbages and ther Brassicas in Northern Europe are ully up to estimates, farther South the rops are not so satisfactory. Onion as been badly affected by the mildew ut in many cases the seed appears to ave been formed before it was attacked. s a result of their experiences during he past two years Onion growers will nsist upon being supplied with home rown seed next year.

New York Seed Trade

Up to this time, Tuesday, Sept. 24, there have been no further arrivals of French or Dutch bulbs. Cablegrams re- ceived by several bulb importers in this city state that the French bulbs were expected to leave Marseilles, and that Dutch bulbs are now afloat. Some im- porters of French bulbs venture the opinion that a French steamer will bring the bulk of the crop of French bulbs which they are advised are safely stored on the piers at Marseilles awaiting steamer.

The retail seed stores are doing very little business. The demand is confined mostly to seed Rye and Wheat and field grass seed. There is some demand for lawn grass seed, but it is not as large as it usually is at this season of the year.

Some American seed growers are ask- ing seedsmen who have contract orders placed with them to give them, upon re- ceipt of invoice and bill of lading, trade acceptances, which the seed growers can place in their banks to their credit. The reason given by the growers for request- ing acceptances is that many of the local banks have discounted notes to the limit, but that acceptances can be passed through a Federal Reserve bank by the local bank without any difficulty what- soever, acceptances being looked upon practically as cash.

Lilium longiflorum bulbs, said to be grown in the Azores, are noted at some of the seed stores.

Chicago Seed Trade

Dealers are daily expecting advice as to shipments of Holland and French bulbs that have been on the way some time. The steamship companies and for- warders on the other side are not per- mitted to give either the sailing date or the name of the boat on which the bulbs are in transit. This adds to the per- plexity of the situation. It is a plain case of waiting to see what each day may bring forth.

Some houses are relying mainly on se- curing their supply of Fall bulbs from California. It is not reasonable to expect that shipments are on the way by fast (?) freight and should reach Chicago inside of 12 days from date of shipment. Judging from the time consumed in get- ting Calla bulbs to this market from California. It is not reasonable to expect them to come through so quickly. Some shipments of Callas were in transit 35 to 40 days. No California Dutch bulbs have reached this market up to Sept. 21.

Vaughan's Seed Store continues to move large lots of Callas and Freesias. In the retail store shrubbery and Peonies are in good demand. Bert Chad- wick, superintendent of the retail de- partment, states that the demand for this class of stock is well up to the normal of other seasons.

C. O. Wilcox of the W. W. Barnard Co. came in from a trip last Saturday. He reports the Michigan Bean crop all threshed under favorable circumstances.

Winterson's Seed Store is mailing its Fall price list of bulbs, perennials and shrubbery. The caption of this list is "The Flowers that Bloom in the Spring." In these times of business unrest Mana- ger Degnan is to be complimented on his optimistic views of what another season will bring forth.

According to cable advice to Vaughan's Seed Store, northern grown Lilium can- didum bulbs are afloat. The company's Dutch bulbs are daily expected at New York. Demand for even medium sized Paperwhites is excellent. The frost has held of the Gladioli at both Vaughan's farms, and the crop is developing well, rains having been sufficient. The help problem in harvesting has been solved.

No one seems to know what the freight will be on foreign grown Dutch bulbs. Some estimates are made of 300 per cent. increase based on a freight cost last year of $3.50 a case, or $10.50 a case this year.

The Everett R. Peacock Co., seeds- men on Milwaukee ave., in the Jefferson Park neighborhood, has completed a new warehouse for the storage of Onion sets. The formal opening Sept. 7 was well represented by farmers and truck grow- ers of the county. Speaking by promi- nent men connected with the industry in the county, an orchestra and special entertainers added interest to the occa- sion.

Miss Grace Chester, daughter of H. H. Chester, the well-known Onion set broker, has left Chicago with her father to visit the East. She will be the guest of Shipbuilder Hurley, and remain to christen the next new ship launched.

Onions Save Soldiers' Lives

During the coming Summer (Dec. to May) we are going to ask our readers to grow larger quantities of Onions! The object of the request is to increase the quantities of this vegetable, so that more may be available to send to the troops in East Africa and other hot, trying climates.

A journalist friend, who called on us a few days ago when home on a few weeks' sick leave, told us that nothing under God's sun was of so much bene- fit to sick men. He is in the Medical Corps, and he says that nothing would have such a stimulant effect as an Onion, in fact he vows that he has seen an Onion save a man's life, on more than one occasion.

Dried Cabbage, he tells us, eats more or less like pieces of boiled paper—Carrots are better, but not to be compared with an Onion. The Onion can be sent up fresh, i.e., it need not be dried or dehydrated. It is alive, and it gives life! We feel sure readers will welcome any suggestion whereby they may help to alleviate—if only in a small way—the hardships of our fighting men. They want Onions, and the first step to getting Onions to them is to have the bulbs to send.—South African Gardening and Country Life.

Outer Skin of Tulip Bulbs

I have a quantity Darwin Tulip bulbs. In digging last June and in storing, curing and sorting, the outside, dark-colored skin has been worn off. Many of the bulbs now show white. Has the loss of the outside cover in any way lessened the value of the bulbs? If planted now will they bloom equally well with the bulbs that still retain the outside covering?—W. G. B., N. Y.

—The loss of so much of the outer tunic or skin of the Tulip as came off in handling these while digging, curing and storing, will not, we believe, injure them for planting. In fact some planters of Tulips are accustomed to remove from the Tulip bulbs, at the time of planting as much of the outer tunic as comes off easily. J. H. S.

Bumper Harvests

Despite widespread drought, the country's crops as a whole promise an abundant food supply of all kinds, according to a survey made by the Committee on Statistics and Standards of the Federal Chamber of Commerce.

The Corn crop promises to be larger than the average. The yield of Spring and Winter Wheat will be about 925,000,000 bushels, or the second largest crop ever harvested in the United States. Oats, Rye and Barley promise well. Potatoes will be plentiful although the yield will be smaller than that of last year. Beans, fruit and garden truck show an increase as compared with the yield of last year. Rice will be about the same as the last crop. Sugar Beets show a slight increase. Cattle promise well, and there is a general increase in poultry and swine.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

The Proposed Official Bulletin

Under an order emanating from the War Industries Board the society will not be allowed to establish any publication during the period of the war. The chief of the Pulp and Paper Section, Thomas E. Donnelley, states as follows, in reply to a letter addressed to him concerning the bulletin which the society, at the St. Louis convention, directed should be published to serve as the official organ of our organization:

"This section of the War Industries Board has ruled that no new publication may be established during the period of the war. It would be admittedly unfair for us to request established publishers to cut their consumption of paper for the various publications and permit a new publication to be published unless it were definitely shown to be a war necessity. We must ask you, therefore, to give up your project of publishing a society organ during the period of the war."

National Publicity Campaign

It has been arranged that our magazine advertising for the season now opening shall begin with a page, in two colors, in the November Metropolitan, which will be on sale everywhere on Oct. 14. This page will feature Chrysanthemums particularly, and it is expected will stimulate a demand for these flowers, which is highly to be desired, in view of the tremendous supply in sight. When, at the opening of the year, florists began to realize that the fuel consumption for the next season was to be restricted, many reasoned that Chrysanthemums would be the best crop to close with in houses that must assuredly go out of operation until the fuel situation should become less acute, consequently we are confronted with the problem of moving an unprecedented crop. Hence our committees decided to give special publicity to this product.

A plan covering eight other advertisements in various magazines, featuring largely Thanksgiving and Christmas, and including a full page Christmas advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, is practically settled upon, and will be put into operation, the funds at the disposal of the committees determining of course the extent to which the plan is to be followed.

And here we may say again that the committees are still short of the amount urgently required to enable them to obtain fully the objects of the campaign. There are hundreds of florists who have as yet contributed nothing to our fund, and yet are reaping some of the benefits arising from our work. Step by step the details of our campaign have been described in our trade papers, at meetings of our trade bodies, and in other ways; therefore it can hardly be imagined that anyone is not fully acquainted with our objects. There is no holding back on the part of the committees. Every penny coming in is invested in publicity work, nothing is wasted, and we are actually getting also publicity that money could not buy. But our efforts must not be intermittent, they must be constant. That is why we are appealing to those who have not subscribed to help us to complete our fund, and thus benefit the trade the country over.

Our promotion bureau has arranged for a further supply of the handsome glass signs carrying our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," but owing to the increase in cost we have been obliged to advance the price to $2 each, which price barely covers the actual expense of sign and delivery charges. This sign is a business bringer, and properly displayed silently conveys a message which, in these times, is most suggestive.

To enable florists who use newspaper space for their announcements to make direct connection with our magazine advertising, our promotion bureau has in course of preparation a series of electrotypes featuring the national advertisements and requiring only the insertion of a local florist's own name and address. Proofs of these will shortly be available.

The use of our "stickers," transfer signs, and slides for use in moving picture houses, should now be seasonable, and any florist who has not received particulars of same is invited to write us

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

Department of Plant Registration

Public notice is hereby given that F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., and Orlando, Fla., submits for registration the new Asparagus here mentioned:

Asparagus Fletcheri (densifolius). A variation (seedling) of Asparagus Sprengeri. It varies in the shorter, more compact and much heavier foliage, four sprays being equal to twelve of Sprengeri. It is especially seen to be an improvement when used as a foundation for sprays, and as a basket plant. It has been tested for five years and proved to come true from seed.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Vegetable Crops for Forcing

Spinach Growing under glass—Digging and trimming Chicory roots—Asparagus digging.

Growing Spinach Under Glass

Spinach has long been grown extensively as an outdoor crop, but only in recent years has it been grown under glass on a commercial scale. The profits to be derived from it will of course depend upon the market, and whether or not Spinach is well known to the consumers. In one section where Spinach has been grown in greenhouses for several years, it has been regarded as profitable as Lettuce under average conditions. It certainly deserves the attention of growers who are looking for a good cool crop, if they have a good market for it.

The soil should be rather light and fertile, such as required for Lettuce. The usual method of starting the crop is to sow the seed where the crop is to mature. While outdoor Spinach is often sown broadcast outdoors, my experience has been that it is better to sow the seed in rows when the crop is grown under glass.

From the planting tests which students in vegetable gardening at the Maryland State College have conducted, it appears that the rows should be 8in. to 10in. apart for New Zealand and Victoria and other large leaved varieties. More tests of this nature will be conducted to determine the best planting distances. The plants may stand 4in. to 8in. apart in the row, the latter distance being better for New Zealand. This variety is very good for greenhouse crops since several cuttings of the leaves may be taken if the central bud or root system is not injured. The soil should have good drainage so the surface will dry off somewhat in a short time after the crop is watered.

Since the seed germinates rather slowly it is a good plan to soak it before planting. Other modifications of this plan may be used in which the seed is mixed with moist sand and kept in a warm room for several days until it begins to sprout.

Although the seed is usually sown where the crop is to mature, there is no reason why the plants may not be started in flats or beds similar to Lettuce and transplanted later to the benches or beds. This will be an advantage in case a grower desires to have Spinach follow a crop which now occupies the space. By starting the plants this way only a part of the time needed to grow the crop will be required on the benches or beds where the crop will mature. This means more cash crops a year.

To insure rapid growth which is essential to high quality, there should be plenty of moisture and plant food in the soil. Applications of nitrate of soda or liquid manure may be given in case the crop is not growing rapidly enough. Spinach should have full sunlight and must not be shaded.

Dig Witloof Chicory Roots

Witloof Chicory roots intended for forcing should be dug before the ground freezes. If this is neglected too long they will be dug with difficulty. They may be removed easily by running a plow down both sides of the row to throw the earth away, and then raising the roots with a spade. As much as possible avoid breaking the roots. Haul them to the place where they will be stored until used. The leaves should be cut off 2in. to 3in. above the top of the root so as not to injure the central bud. The place for storage should be cool enough to keep the roots dormant until they are forced.

Dig Asparagus Roots for Forcing

The Asparagus roots intended for forcing should be dug before the ground freezes. The plow may be used to run down both sides of the row to throw back the soil before they are dug by hand. Since the root system is branched considerably the plow should be kept 6in. or 7in. away from the row to prevent injury of the crowns and roots. A little more care in digging by hand is needed for Asparagus than for Witloof Chicory, since it is desirable to secure the maximum amount of plant food for a good yield of the forced product. A few roots are always broken in digging.

The roots should be stored immediately after digging, in a cool place where they will remain dormant until they are used for forcing. The roots must not be exposed to wind or air which causes them to dry out. To keep them moist in storage, a little moist soil should be thrown over them. Any soil naturally adhering to the roots is allowed to remain on them.

Reports seem to show that a good rain, as good local florists and all those interested in growing have business seems to hold up very well now that the rains and cooler weather are on hand, the chances are that it will be better.

Mr. Ewing advises that Kerr the Florist did well during the week. A big funeral early in the week, followed by the Sterling wedding, both called for a large supply of flowers. A big banquet on Wednesday was given by the officers of the aviation field at the Rice Hotel. Kerr furnished the elaborate decorations. The tables were arranged in the shape of an airplane with a floral propeller 12ft. long at the head. In addition a few real airplanes, decorated with flowers, were hung in the banquet hall. As the decorations made a striking effect, Mr. Kerr had photographs taken and they are being developed. The R. C. Kerr Co. is now cutting some Columbia Roses, the new rose pink Rose and is cutting them with stems 18in. to 20in.

Mr. Howard of the Bering Greenhouses is glad of the rain, as he has a lot of shrubbery in the open. He is putting out Asters, which he will sell in pots and as cut flowers.

I believe it would be a good idea for nurseries to prepare for a big business in shrubbery after the war. When we finally win and the boys come home, many improvements will be made in parks and private grounds, and the demand for shrubbery will likely be great. Our men will come home with new ideas gained from seeing the ways in which parks and private grounds are kept in England, France and Italy, and they will likely wish to rest on their laurels in beautiful gardens. C. L. B.

The Walnut Hill Floral Co., Harrodsburg, Ky., has been incorporated; capital $2500; incorporators Glover Kyle, C. D. Thompson and Lou Bonta.

Washington, D. C.

The first Chrysanthemums have reached this market. Quality is not good. The White October Frost offered sold well because of their earliness. They are needed, for Asters are off the market. Gladioli have gone, and a shortage of Dahlias is expected. Practically all Dahlias that come move quickly.

With the general business boom in Washington, retailers get good prices. These are expected to advance more than in past years, because with the coal restrictions there will be fewer flowers and because the cost of production and sale have increased greatly. But people, says one retailer, are willing to pay for good quality stock so the increased returns should balance the lessened volume of business.

Roses have improved greatly with cool weather. Some Russells last week brought $15 a hundred. They sold up well, as did Hadleys at $6 to $10. Good Ophelias brought about $4. These are the leading Roses at this time, although some good Wards and other varieties are offered.

J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the Washington Floral Co., has received word that two of his three brothers have entered a French hospital. These young fighters are the sons of the late Mr. Hetherington, many years with Robert Craig & Co., in Philadelphia. Horace D. Hetherington has been gassed, it is not known how seriously. Frank W. Hetherington has been crippled with rheumatism because he was compelled to stand for many hours up to his waist in water, assisting to fight off an enemy attack. The family is further represented by William M. Hetherington, who although participating in actual combat, has thus far escaped harm.

Miss Nellie Toogood, formerly in charge of the bookkeeping and cashier's department of the Washington Floral Co., is now a private in the United States Marine Corps. She will serve, however, as Pte. (Mrs.) Gertrude H., wife of Pte. Lowen, of the Medical Corps, United States Army.

Z. D. Blackistone is appointing a committee of florists to assist the Liberty Loan committee of the District of Columbia in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. As president of the Florist Club of Washington he has been asked to exert every effort to help make the coming campaign a success. The city florists are to be informed how they can assist through incorporating Liberty Loan advertising in their own announcements in the daily press and elsewhere and through window display. The club itself will seek to make a record for subscriptions from its members.

Among the visitors of the past week were C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York; F. J. Michell, of Michell & Co., Philadelphia; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; Joseph J. Goudy, of Philadelphia and Fred H. Clasen, of St. Louis, Mo.

Miss Nellie Brueninger, chief of the bookeeping department for Gude Bros. Co., has been spending a three weeks' vacation at Atlantic City. Mrs. Roy Dove, a sister of Miss Brueninger, with Mr. Dove and their daughter, Miss Shirley Dove, are visiting her, coming from Conifer, Col.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club is scheduled for Tuesday evening, Oct. 1. Matters of importance to the local trade are to be taken up. Plans will be made for the Liberty Loan campaign among the florists, and there will be a discussion of matters to do with the new registration under the 18 to 45 law. Members are to be asked for their views as to how best to overcome the drain made upon the trade here.

Commodore John Wescott, of Barnegat Bay, N. J., last week had as his guests Wm. F. Gude, of Gude Bros. Co.; Superintendent George W. Hess, of the United States Botanic Gardens; Judge Downy of the Court of Claims, and Mr. Gude's two sons, Ernest and Granville.

Remedy for Poison Ivy

As regards poison ivy, this is the worst place on earth for it; it is everywhere. We have had the best success with the following remedy: Bicarbonate of soda and peroxide of hydrogen; mix as a thin wash. In severe cases make a poultice. In latter case give dose of Epsom salts.—W. H. C. in Rural New Yorker.

Middle Atlantic States

Lancaster, Pa.

Funeral work and still more funeral work keeps the retail trade busy. Aside from this very little is doing. After the outdoor flowers are gone there will be a little more demand as the quantity of outdoor flowers used in Lancaster is wonderful, for while consumption is reduced some of these users will buy from the florist.

Mrs. Geo. Goldbach apparently is the only florist in the city featuring Dahlias. Her window certainly was an advertisement for Dahlias and Gladioli.

H. A. Schroyer had some of the early Chrysanthemums but was not over well pleased with their keeping quality. He is a constant patron of the telephone between Philadelphia and Lancaster as he is not growing much and cooperation between the stores hardly exists.

Mrs. Spera, who has charge of the B. F. Barr store (until P. K. Murphy gets back from the battle front, somewhere in France), is fortunate in having the variety of flowers she has to draw on for window decoration. Her windows are both attractive and different. She reports business as very good but does not know where she would be without the large amount of funeral work.

Walter Hammond has lost one man, Jean D. Martin, now at the front in France. He is losing the man who took Jean's place, but is not worrying as it is up to us all to do the best we can these war times. He will simply work a bit harder himself until the place is filled by someone else. He is not pessimistic nor is he optimistic along business lines, but says he seems to be getting his share of the work and doesn't expect to have abnormal business.

Several of our growers planted Tobacco as a side line or possibly in some cases to make up what they lose on their greenhouses (see report of club meeting). They are now busy getting this Tobacco housed before frost. To get the best results from Tobacco is not as complicated a matter as to get the best results out of Carnations but it takes work and knowledge along with it and then there is good big money in it.

Rudolph Nagle is cutting some early Chrysanthemums. He is about the only grower this season who is making this flower a feature although many are planted in smaller lots through the county.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr spent several days at the War Worker's Council in Philadelphia, arriving home just in time to attend the meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Florists' Club to whose members she gave a short talk on food matters brought up at the Philadelphia meeting.

Walter Mott was in Lancaster the past week in the interests of Benjamin Hammond. Mr. Price of the S. S. Pennock Co. was busy for a few days writing up orders for his house.

Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n

The meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n was held on Thursday, Sept. 19, at the home of Willis B. Girvin of Leola, Pa., with a goodly attendance of members and with S. S. Pennock of Philadelphia and James Brown of Coatsville as visitors. A letter inviting the club to make its annual visit to the Vincent Dahlia farms was read, but owing to labor and other conditions it was deemed best to omit this trip as a club affair this season. Letters were also read from T. J. Nolan and Wm. K. Murphy, the latter being in active service in France.

The program for the evening was a discussion opened by B. F. Barr with a paper entitled "How to Make Both Ends Meet." (See wide measure columns.) The paper was discussed by various members. Harry Rohrer said we certainly should watch our expenses closer than most of us do and that we should take advantage of every possible side line that we can work in so that the end of the season may find us with a margin of profit.

Mr. Barr said his remarks applied to greenhouses only, that all stock from the greenhouses was sold to his store and it was up to the store to show a profit over these prices. The prices charged the store are based on cost records at the greenhouses.

Mr. Pennock said that curtailment of shipments in times of a glut will help the market if it can be carried out so each grower may share his part of the burden. He also said that on account of many florists intending to run their places this Fall until 'Mums are over, the Fall will probably find a rather over supplied market. As many of these places would then close down he believes the season will average up well. He fully agreed with Mr. Barr and others that florists should keep more records of cost and returns, instead of depending on the bank account to show whether or not they have made money. Speaking of the business in general he said it is anything but a non-essential, that the French people consider the use of flowers right now as more important than ever before and that the French Government recognizes the importance of flowers as a means of keeping up the spirits and the morale of its people.

Fred Ritchy said he saw a piece in the Ladies' Home Journal advising people not to buy flowers but put that money into Liberty bonds or War Savings Stamps. He cannot understand why this business should be singled out for such articles when there are other things much less needed than flowers.

Mr. Barr further said that while his remarks apply principally to his own establishment, he has looked up the advertisements in the trade papers and finds that there has not been an increase of 5 per cent. in the wholesale prices of stock advertised in 1918 over those of 1916. This he said is not enough as the increased cost of production is over 40 per cent.

The number of failures in this line of business was brought out, but this does not help our standing as a business either with our bankers or the Government. The only way to avoid this is to keep accounts so that we know where we are losing money.

After a vote of thanks to the host, Mr. Girvin, the meeting adjourned to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms the third Thursday of October.

The Ladies' Auxiliary had a meeting at the same time and place with a 98 per cent. attendance so we can expect some doings the coming Winter. After the meetings home grown Apples, Peaches, Plums and Grapes were served. Their appearance and quality demonstrated that Leola is a good fruit producing section.

Previous to the meeting an inspection was made of the greenhouses where Carnations are the principal feature with only three varieties in evidence. Matchless, Supreme and Mrs. C. W. Ward. Three houses of Roses are being grown and have proved a profitable investment. Mr. Girvin is especially impressed with the new Columbia. He has one house that will be run cold until Spring; in this he has planted Kaiserine and Killarney. He also has several houses planted to 'Mums that will be mulched and the houses run cool for the balance of the season. In addition to the greenhouses there is a model Lancaster county farm with its varied line of products all paying better right now than the greenhouse product. Twenty acres of Tobacco are being cut and stored for curing.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The week ending Sept. 21 was one of the queerest of the year. It started off like midseason form but by Saturday the stores were loaded with flowers and nothing selling. Asters are almost over for this season and what are received are mostly the small and short stem grades. They show the effects of the weather and are not as clean as we like. Fancy New Jersey Dahlias now coming to this market find ready sale at good prices. All varieties are of good color and size, the finest seen in this city for some time. We only hope the frost will stay away long enough to have a long season, for no flowers are now as popular as Dahlias. The shades are beautiful and any retail store can make a wonderful display while they are in season. American Beauty Roses had a fair demand early in the week but not since Wednesday. The short grades cleaned up well but specials were a drug on the market. The wholesale houses were loaded with specials on Saturday and were compelled to move them at reduced prices. Carnations now on the market find ready sale as the buyers are glad to get something new, especially at this time of the year. Lilies are coming in limited supply and clean up well each day at $15 per 100. Plenty of short stemmed Roses are sold, mostly to the street men. Long stemmed Roses are in demand and bring good prices. Russell and Ophelia are the best seen. Lots of asparagus. Greens are still coming in large quantities. The supply houses are busy shipping Fall goods as dealers are getting their stocks now, not taking any chances on express congestion later.

City Water Injurious to Plant Life?

I noticed in the issue of THE EXCHANGE for Aug. 17, page 259 a query regarding the possible injury to plants through the use of city water that has been treated with hypochlorite of lime.

The proportions used are very small as only three or four parts of chlorine to a million parts of water are required. This is the general practice and the city water of New Brunswick, N. J., has been so treated for about six years, during which time I have noticed no damage to plants. Some people have claimed to have tasted the chlorine, but you can judge that this is absurd and merely psychological.

What are Liliums?

Are Liliums such as Candidum and Tigrinum perennials or can they be shown in the class of six perennials? J. F., Conn.

The question is not clear. If it relates to botanical classification the answer is that Liliums are hardy, herbaceous perennials. If it refers to classification for exhibition the rules governing the show must be followed. If the rules do not specifically place Liliums the botanical definition should decide.

Growing Lily Bulbs

I have a large quantity of loose scales of L. candidum, many of them already starting to form bulblets. How may I handle them so as to get bulbs of blooming sizes? M. L. McL., Mich.

Lilies are readily propagated by bulb scales. A. C. Hottes, in his book, "Commercial Plant Propagation" (for sale at this office), says that with rare and unusual species there is still an advantage in this method but that propagation by seeds is preferable for ordinary species like the Easter Lily. L. candidum is one of the easy species to handle by the scale method. The scales are treated like cuttings and are placed in benches of sand or sandy loam at a temperature between 45 and 50 deg. The seed method is also fully described in the book mentioned, and still more fully in a lengthy article in THE EXCHANGE of July 20, 1918.

Rental Problem

A man is renting a number of greenhouses for a length of time under a contract to pay a certain sum of money each year. Now that the Government allows him but half of his coal and he is compelled to close down half his place, can he be made to pay the full amount of the rent this coming Winter?—C. P., Conn.

—As the tenant has signed a contract stipulating to pay a certain sum of money per annum for the rent of the property we do not see that he has any loophole to escape from due payment of the full amount of the rent agreed upon, as the present conditions do not come within the scope of any law which permits cancellation thereof, nor have we even been reduced to the point, so quickly touched in the European countries, where moratoriums had to be declared almost immediately after the commencement of the war.

Reliable Information Concerning California

IT is a joy, a delight, to live in California. The state is so large and the climates so varied that it will be wisdom on the part of people who intend to make a home within its borders, to ask some one who knows, before locating permanently. I have lived in the state 21 years, have traveled over it extensively, and know its soils and climates. I am not in the real estate business.

PRICES ADVERTISED ARE FOR THE TRADE ONLY

Worcester, Mass.

Owing to considerable rain the past week outdoor flowers have shortened greatly. Although greenhouse blooms are rather scarce as yet, the growers who have an early cut of Carnations and 'Mums are finding a ready market and are realizing fair prices. The demand is good. The retailer is already beginning to feel the loss of Asters and Gladioli for working up. If present weather conditions continue all local outdoor flowers of the above will be cleaned up in a week or so.

At the Dahlia show of the Worcester County Hort. Society, on the 19th, Dahlias were conspicuous for quality and variety. Members demonstrated their ability to produce choice blooms ahead of schedule calls. Flowers in big variety, including late Roses and Lilies, of remarkable quality and beauty, were shown. Mrs. Herbert E. White of Shrewsbury, who entered flowers in every call on the schedule, had a fine exhibit of Celosia which attracted considerable attention. This flower will be one of the features of next Thursday's show.

In a recent report given out by Leonard C. Midgley of the Worcester County Farm Bureau, it is estimated that the acreage in Worcester war gardens is 2500 to 3000 acres, divided as follows: 2200 acres in home gardens, 100 acres in community and 300 acres in factory gardens. This is unquestionably a conservative estimate. Computing the value of the products at the conservative return of $300 an acre gives the grand total of $750,000, which Worcester people of their patriotism have added to the wealth of the country and helped thereby to win the war.

Among Those Who Carry On

Word has been received that Pte. James Schouler is now at a base hospital at Lakewood, N. J. He is well known as a grower, and for years has been connected with large places in Worcester County and city. Just before his enlisting he was employed on the private cester county and city. Just before his bury. He is reported as going over the top three times and was badly wounded and gassed.

Harry Randall has added a new Ford delivery car to his delivery system.

Local wholesale prices predominating the past week were as follows: Roses in fair supply $2 to $12 per 100; Carnations, showing improvement both in quality and quantity, $1 to $2; 'Mums of Golden Glow and October Frost varieties $1 to $3 per doz.; Gladioli $1 to $3 per 100; Easter Lilies $10; Asters, rather poor, 50c. to $1.50. The wholesaler is also finding a good call for potted ferns, palms, rubbers and small table ferns. T. L. M.

Providence, R. I.

The trade in Providence had a very satisfactory week. The call for funeral work was above normal and the sales of house plants are increasing as the public return from Summer places. Instead of a surplus as has been the case for a long time the market was on the short side the greater part of the week. Short Carnations sold readily at $3 per 100. J. C. L.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.—John S. Drabble, formerly of Drabble Bros., but more recently in the optical business, has accepted a position in that line at Hartford, Conn.

Did Not Borrow to Buy Bonds

The Federal Reserve Bulletin says that one of the most encouraging and gratifying features of the Third Liberty Loan is that apparently there has been little use of bank accommodations for the purchase of the bonds. It estimates that probably more than 80 per cent. of the bonds are already fully paid for.

The financial statements of the various Federal reserve banks indicate, according to the bulletin, that not much borrowing from the banks was done by the subscribers to the third loan. They either paid cash or bought on the installment plan.

This eases a great deal the burden of the banks, upon whose shoulders rests the financing of the business and industry of the country.

New Hardy Hybrid Privet

We have been advised that a new California Privet one of some 2000 seedlings has resulted from hybridizing California Privet as a seed parent with L. Ibota. The object sought, was to create if possible, a hedge plant resembling California Privet, with its many ideal hedge plant qualities, and gaining at the same time greater resistance to cold, the one great drawback to California Privet, over a great area.

These hybrid seedlings are said to have proved an interesting lot. Seeds were planted some eight years ago. From the start, the seedlings have shown a great range of variation of habit of growth, form, fruiting, color and shape of foliage. Unflinching rogueing of all but the most promising and distinct forms, from year to year reduced the lot to some fifty individuals last year. Some in the meantime have grown to be fifteen feet high and correspondingly bushy. Some of these resemble California Privet to a marked degree. Others representing the other extreme, have in the meantime made hardly a foot of growth. Some are upright, others resemble the Regel Privet in habit. Many have very glossy foliage, with, in some instances, beautiful golden sunshine tintings to the new growth.

Several horticultural experts who have been watching these hybrid Privets from year to year, claim that there are among them forms of the highest ornamental value, not only as hedge plants, but for general group planting. The extreme cold of the Winter of 1917-18 certainly gave the hardiness test a thorough tryout. It was with the keenest interest that we awaited Spring growth to determine if among these hybrids might be some partaking of hardiness of L. Ibota. To our delight many wintered perfectly to the very tips under conditions and in the same exposure that killed California to the ground. Some among them proved even less hardy than California Privet, and were promptly destroyed. Notably among them were three that had been from the start extremely vigorous, upright and of glossy foliage. One of these together with some 52 year old cutting plants of it under varying exposures appears to be perfectly hardy, at least as hardy as L. Ibota.

Should this special hybrid Privet be eventually introduced it should have an extended range of usefulness as a hedge plant.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Greater activity marked the retail market last week than since June. Cold weather had a stimulating effect upon trade. The demand for flowers for social functions was good, and there was an almost unprecedented amount of funeral work. Plant trade was very lively, particularly in ferns, but supply was inadequate. Weather has been dark and rainy, and production has been reduced to a minimum. A light frost last week did but slight damage, but the supply of Asters and Gladioli has been decreasing daily, though the quantity holds up very well. Carnations have lengthened considerably in stem, but are decidedly on the short side, many of the growers having benched their stock late this year, on account of the labor scarcity. Some excellent long-stemmed Russells are coming in. Columbia, the new Rose, is proving a fine producer. Dahlias are of splendid quality. Cattleyas continue to come in, increased numbers, and help out considerably. Greenhouse Snapdragons are coming on well. Early Chrysanthemums are in slightly increased supply, and the demand is improved. October Frost and some Golden Glow appeared last week. Good minature Roses find an excellent call, especially Baby Doll, and Cecil Brunner. Fall Cosmos have a good sale. Lilium Harrisii and L. Auratum are all too few to meet the demand. Growers are busy moving their out-door stock under glass whenever possible, as heavier frosts are predicted for the near future.

Greenhouse Heating

A booklet of 52 pages, containing a reprint of four prize essays on the subject, which passed through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE several years ago, with comments by John McArthur, heating engineer for Hitchings & Co. There is also included a collection of answers to pertinent questions on greenhouse heating.

The problem of greenhouse heating is a vital one in the face of the 50% fuel restriction order, and all growers desiring information upon the choice of a boiler, the installing of a proper amount of piping, both as to the quantity and the proper placing of it, the stoking or feeding of the furnace and the general management of the heating apparatus should be in possession of a copy of this valuable little pamphlet.

from their greenhouses at New Haven, Ind.

Miss Clara B. Flick, who has been spending a month with her niece, Mrs. Mildred Flick-Buchanan, and other relatives, of this city, has returned to the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, O.

Ed. Wenninghoff reports that the sale of flowers, donated by Fort Wayne florists to the Red Cross auction a fortnight ago, netted $1000. Ambassador Gerard was one of the speakers during the auction.

The store force of A. J. Lanternier, was "on the job" all day Sunday getting out funeral work, mostly large designs and bakets.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey are experiencing brisk demand for out-of-town patrons. They report the supply not nearly sufficient. Many varieties of orchids in their six houses are in bloom, or show promise of a splendid crop this Fall. D. B.

Kenosha, Wis.

Louis Turner, Jr., of Louis Turner & Sons, is with the Wisconsin Signal Service Corps and is at present in France. Walter Turner, a younger brother, has also joined the Colors to serve in the mechanical department. He is at present at the Sweeney Auto School in Kansas City, Mo., and will join the auto field service when suitable proficiency is attained. In the meantime the business of the store is well managed by Miss Kathleen Turner and a coterie of lady assistants. Mr. Turner, Sr., attends to the greenhouses.

Henry Meyer, who has been conducting a small range on High st., complains seriously of the want of help, two sons associated with him in business being now in the Army. His eldest, Frank E., is in France; Henry, Jr., is at Key West, Fla. A younger son below draft age is his only assistant as he cannot afford to pay for greenhouse labor the wages workers receive in the large city manufacturing plants.

Peter N. Obertin spends most of his time at Racine in the Asylum ave. greenhouses which he acquired about two years ago. He still makes his home in Kenosha and motors back and forth. Mrs. Obertin, who has charge of the store during his absence, reports a satisfactory trade with many inquiries for Fall stock. J. M.

St. Paul, Minn.

With the early frost and nearly everything cleaned up outside a spurt in the trade is noticeable. Retailers are getting into Fall swing. Chrysanthemums especially Golden Glow and Early Frost have realized good prices and been good fillers in. The last of the Asters are in sight and already there is a demand for Roses and Carnations. The latter are exceptionally long stemmed for the time of year. Violets will be on hand this week. Several of the local growers are shutting down until February. Krinke & Sons are dismantling their houses, giving up business entirely. Christenson on Dale st. will run until Christmas and will then shut down half the amount of glass. Merriam Park contemplates full speed until Christmas after which very low temperatures will be used for the remainder of the Winter. It would appear that those who are able to operate even at half strength will be amply repaid owing to the fact that express shipments from outside will not be dependable, especially in cold weather. Even at this early date there is considerable delay in getting stock through. Mazy of Minneapolis reports a better Summer trade than usual. His greenhouses are in fine condition as to stock. Considerable inquiries are noted regarding outside planting. Those who are able will push forward the work the remaining few weeks of the season, thereby helping eliminate the rush next Spring. The help question is growing more serious daily. Every grower in the Twin Cities is affected, some being eight and ten men short. Many of the trade are making their own deliveries. The attitude of the trade in general is conspicuous by the good nature exhibited in making the best of these inconveniences. E. C. T.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

The True Spirit of Planting

Edwin Matthews reviews the motives that have prompted people to plant trees for the improvement of real estate, for fruit, and for timber; then makes a strong plea for the planting of trees to commemorate family, community and national events mentioning suitable species. His ideas should have a special appeal at the present time

There is always a reason (or there should be) governing every planting that is done. The man who reforests large tracts of land does so with the thought of some day reaping a profit from the lumber eventually produced. The idea uppermost in the mind of the real estate promoter when he plants to embellish a property is the added cash value such planting will mean to him in the sale of the house and ground. Both motives governing these plantings are essentially selfish, yet the very accomplishment of such work is highly commendable.

There is still another kind of planter not commonly found in these days of desperate hurry, who takes no thought of the future or immediate gains for himself, but who plants for posterity. To take of the best material at hand and plant irrespective of whether we will reap the benefit or not is displaying the true spirit of planting.

We have in mind still another phase of planting, one which has been done in the past by only the rare few, but which if rightly fostered will, we believe, become a nation-wide movement. We refer to the planting of trees in honor of some person or event. The war is making history so fast for this nation that in a little while there won't be a family or individual but will have some close personal ties woven into that history. What a splendid thing it would be if as individuals we would plant trees in honor of some one in the ranks of democracy, or to commemorate an event which is some particular interest for us. How much better is a living thing of beauty to mark that event or honor that person than some cold shaft of marble or tablet of metal!

We highly prize a piece of furniture that has a history, but how much more in later years would we value a beautiful, living reality of those days when knighthood was in flower. Many of us will have read, just recently, of the death of one of these knights, whose extreme bravery in action brought the end too soon to one whose appreciation and deep regard for trees brought forth from his pen these lines:

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree;
A tree whose hungry mouth is fresh
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in Summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

These lines from an American poet and soldier, Sergeant Joyce Kilmer, who gave his life for his country and ideals, is well worthy to be immortalized by the planting not of a single tree but by many an avenue of trees.

Let the choice be based on longevity as well as beauty. We can think of nothing better or more fitting than the Scarlet Oak, which possesses these and other good qualities.

It is up to the nurseryman and florist to emulate and foster this thought of planting honor trees in every village, town and city throughout the country. Surely it is not a question of space or money, for a glance at many of our city streets proclaims to us abundant opportunity for tree planting. Many a waste space or corner would accommodate a group or a single tree, and add much to both beauty and comfort of the situation.

In the best kept towns and villages, too, there is still room for many of the better class of trees. How often it happens that many prominent positions are taken up by undesirable cumberers of the ground like the greedy and caterpillar infested Carolina Poplar, planted years before by someone whose only thought was quick effect, or whose knowledge of trees was so scant it was a Poplar or nothing. In these days such trees should not be tolerated, but should give place to those of better kinds, such as Norway Maple, Sugar Maple, Oriental Plane, European Linden, Crimean Linden, Oaks and Sweet Gum.

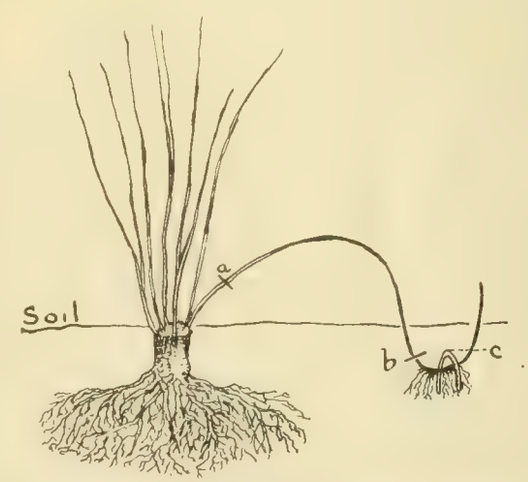
The Maidenhair Fern tree, whose cleanliness alone must win for it a place among first class street trees, is one of the few trees that in this age of insect pestilence and fungous blight has held itself unspotted. The beautiful avenue of these Ginkgos at our national capital is indeed a rare picture. Wisely planted many years ago, it now presents a noble sight to all tree lovers. Perhaps a hundred years from now it may be looked upon as "The tree that made Washington, D. C. famous."

The time for tree planting will soon be here, and every florist and nurseryman should push the idea that "one service tree in the ground is better than a service flag in the window," though for that matter we may have both. Above all things, however, the choice of the tree must be made wisely. Let us choose our trees as we would our friends, those that we would wish to have stay with us.

Hydrangea Paniculata Grandiflora Propagation

Hydrangeas can rightfully be called ornamental shrubs. Nothing is more suitable as a covering for the base of a porch than some of these plants. Of course this applies only during the growing season as in the Winter it is not much of an ornament. As a specimen plant on the lawn it may not be excelled, as it blossoms profusely with large trusses of blooms. To obtain these large blooms it is necessary to cut out all weak and thin branches in the Spring, and at the same time cut back severely the strong, healthy branches, leaving from two to four eyes on each branch.

Until about nine or ten years ago practically all Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora plants were grown from layers. Since that time the grafting of Hydrangeas has been universally adopted by the nurserymen in Boskoop, Holland, as being far better than any other way of producing them. It has very many advantages above layering.



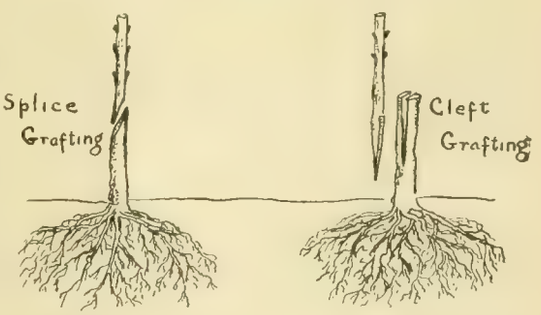
Layering Hydrangeas

(a) Where the shoot is cut off when the young plants are taken up.
(b) Shows the point where the piece of shoot is cut off to make the young plants ready for planting.
(c) Willow branch holding layered branch in the soil.

When layering is intended to be done, very strong plants should be selected for parents. Fall is the best time to set these parent plants, at such a distance apart that there is plenty of room all around them for layering purposes. The soil is to be prepared first by digging in a good quantity of well rotted manure. The plants must be planted deeply so that in Spring, when the branches are cut back to within several inches of the ground, several eyes are just below and above the surface of the soil. Every one of these eyes will soon commence to grow into a straight, strong shoot. The following Spring the shoots are layered.

Layering consists in bending over a shoot very carefully and burying part of it several inches below the soil in such a way that the end of the shoot remains out of the soil for about 6in., standing up straight. The buried part of the shoot is kept in its position by employing a Willow branch, or part of it, bent double. This must necessarily be dried Willow, made pliable by soaking it in water for some time, or else it will take root.

The first year usually three-fourths of the shoots are layered; the remaining shoots are cut back severely, leaving about six eyes to each. If all the shoots were layered there would hardly be any shoots to layer the following Spring. This, however, is necessary only the first Spring, as in another year plenty of shoots will grow, because then the young plants are removed from the parent plants. The shoot on which the young plant grew is then cut back severely, leaving about six eyes. When the young plants are removed it is advisable to dig a considerable quantity of manure all around the parent plants.



Illustrating method of Splice and Cleft Grafting

It always must be considered that to obtain strong shoots on the parent plants and to promote the forming of young roots in the shortest amount of time on the layers, very fertile soil is the biggest or main essential. It is well to feed the plants every Spring regularly. If well taken care of, these parent plants will last for a great number of years, giving more and stronger layers every year.

The forming of the roots on the part bent in the soil is explained as follows: To obtain the roots in one place, it is necessary to bend the shoots as much as possible, without breaking them. By doing this, the cambium, which is the growing tissue just underneath the bark of the branch, is injured and cracked considerably. Those injuries are quickly healed over by a new layer of cambium or callus, and consequently roots form on this callus.

I will relate a little experience we had in layering Hydrangeas. In the Spring we had planted a number imported from Holland. They made a strong growth, and in the latter part of July, after heavy showers, while the soil was thoroughly damp, we layered many of them. The part buried in the soil was first stripped of the leaves. We thought no more about them until about five or six weeks after. Then we were extremely surprised to discover that practically all of them had a nice bunch of roots. During this period we had considerable damp weather, so we ascribed it to this cause that roots formed so readily.

Peat Society Meets

While The Exchange is on the press the American Peat Society is holding its annual meeting in New York. As Peat is used as a source of ammonia and of humus as well as a coal substitute, it is a material which is attracting considerable interest and is taking rank as a highly valuable agricultural asset. We hope the present meeting will evolve points of interest to our readers.

More About Potash

In an address at the Grand Central Palace, New York, Charles H. Herty, chairman of the advisory committee of the Chemical exposition, declared that the chemical industry has become as free of Germany in potash supplies as in coal tar derivatives. Before the war, about 230,000 tons of potash were imported annually from Germany. In the last year there was a production of 50,000 tons from the brines of Nebraska, from Searles Lake, Cal., from the alunite beds of Utah, from kelps of seaweed along the Pacific Coast and from the precipitation of cement mill dust. More may be had from the silicate of the green sands of New Jersey and from the Cartersville slates of Georgia. The dust of blast furnaces alone is calculated to produce from 200,000 to 300,000 tons a year.

Be More than an "Also Ran"

When normal business conditions return how many florists will be like the snail in the fable! "I am here," he said, "but I see someone has been here before me."

Business will not always be so shorthanded, the opportunity and advantages and inducements of today will not always be so abundant. The best, and the second best will have been seized before trade stabilizes again. Nothing will then be left but "the leavings." So now, not tomorrow, is the time to grasp these best ones firmly and hang on. It is up to each man to do his utmost to solve his problems, to "carry on," and not only keep going but prepare for the good time coming. Those who start in or conduct business know that nothing counts so much as experience. It is not so generally realized that experience gained during times of stress is of extra value when the pressure is relieved. Here then is an extra incentive to grit one's teeth and do the very best he can; otherwise he will scarcely be even among the "also rans."

Delays in the Mail

If your current issue of The Florists' Exchange does not reach you on time, we ask the exercise of a little patience on your part; your copy will reach you in due course. The Post Office Department is, without doubt, doing the best it can for the publishers, but delays are unavoidable due to the strain on its organization in these war-times.

Florists and the Fourth Liberty Loan

That the florists will buy just as liberally of the new loan as they did of its predecessors goes without saying. To make their buying cumulative, so that all their combined purchases throughout the country can be segregated and placed to their credit as a body, it is suggested that, where they buy locally and not through a florists' club, they ask to have their purchase credited as florists to the club nearest to them, and at the same time notify that club of their action. Or, if that is not possible, notify John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, 1170 Broadway, N. Y.

This is an advisable procedure and we strongly urge that it be followed. The knowledge of the total amount of purchases of bonds by florists is likely to prove of the highest value to the trade as a whole, several times over, before the close of the war, for the simple reason that if we want favors from the Government (as coal, for instance) we stand a far better chance of obtaining them if it can be shown that, under our limitations, we have purchased to the best of our financial ability.

Insure with Liberty Bonds

Florists, you insure your buildings against fire, hail, and tornadoes. You pay premiums for which your only tangible return is a piece of paper—until fire, hail or a tornado destroys your property. Then the company back of the "paper" pays you partly for your loss.

Today you are called upon to prevent loss by insuring your business. The United States of America is the "company" that will write the policy. Unlike every other insurance company it requests only a loan, not a premium. It will go the insurance companies one better by paying interest on all you loan it. Thus you will both insure your business and make money upon your investment.

That is the purely selfish way to look at the matter. Of far more importance is it to remember that the civilization for which the United States stands is at stake—then put your shoulder to the wheel and push. Justice has been defied and might made lord over right. Are you individually going to stand for it? The question, then, is not what you may make out of the predicament in which the world is placed, but to how great a limit you can contribute for all the blessings of peace and righteousness.

The Fourth Liberty Loan Drive, which starts today, would not have been inaugurated had it not been necessary to have stupendous sums of ready cash to pay for the prodigious weight of munitions and material which must be used to crush Prussian power and reestablish the reign of law and order in the world.

Invest and lend to the limit.

An International Memorial Day

A Memorial Day for all the Allies was recently proposed by Dr. Fort Newton of Iowa, speaking at City Temple, London. It is suggested that after the war a day should be set apart, holy and tender, on which the free nations who fought together might unite in religious service and in laying flowers on the graves of the men who died that the world might be free.

Our own American Memorial Day is already well observed and as its establishment came about through the Civil War and the day is kept in memory of the fallen heroes and those deceased since that war, it would seem as though this day with its sacred memories could well be accepted as their own by the European nations who are our Allies. The season as to the forwardness of plant life in all these countries would be much the same as with us, some a little more advanced, others a little more retarded, but all sufficiently obtainable to permit the use of outdoor flowers if required.

It is not too early in the day to discuss the question; in fact the observance could well be put into effect next May if a consensus of opinion taken by authorities in countries overseas would agree with this proposition.

It is a matter which the executive officers of our own Society of American Florists could well take up with o Federal authorities and horticultural societies in t allied countries. This would serve to bring the matter the attention of the people at large and, without doub if our Allies expressed a willingness to adopt our day, the the matter could be considered as settled.

The observance of an inter-allied Memorial Day shoul not, however, detract from any other forms of memori services now being held by individual communities, nc with the very beautiful practice which is likely to preva of holding church or house services on the anniversar of the loss sustained by a family.

Plant Exclusion June 1, 1919

In another column will be found a letter from the Federa Horticultural Board at Washington which, while no making the actual statement that the restrictions men tioned are to go into effect at the date stated, seem t convey the sense that they will take effect on and afte June 1, 1919 unless arguments of the strongest characte can be brought to bear between now and the stated tim against the proposed quarantine. Our readers should b familiar with the facts of the hearing at Washington, Ma 28, before the Federal Horticultural Board, as we gav considerable attention to the meeting at that time. T our knowledge nothing has taken place since, until th report we now publish, dated at Washington Aug. 29 but not received by Mr. Rolker until Sept. 17.

As no plants of any kind worth mentioning are bein imported at this time, nor have been imported for at leas two years back, no appreciable change in the situation i likely to be noticeable until after the close of the war When that time arrives, however, the trade will discove that the country has no supplies on hand of plants whic have hitherto taken an active part in the commerce o the florist and nurseryman. We will have no Azaleas o Rhododendrons, Araucarias, Bay Trees, Hollies, Ericas Acacias, Conifers, Buxus, or any of the plants hithert imported in large quantities and on which the florist of this country have depended for much of their stock in trade in the way of decorative plants.

The opposition to the enforcement of the proposed re striction, or plant exclusion, has been, on the whole, s unnoticeable as compared with the interests threatenec that undoubtedly the Federal Horticultural Board feels that it has good warrant for putting the restriction into effect without further delay; considering, on the other hand, that in so doing it is putting an end to the likelihood of the further importation into this country of plant diseases which these importations are alleged to have caused.

New Phosphatic Fertilizer

In view of the attention being paid to increased production and the relation of fertilizers to agriculture it is interesting to note in the Weekly Bulletin of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce that a new fertilizer called tetraphosphate being manufactured in Italy, according to technical experts is equal if not superior to superphosphates, which contain the same amount of phosphoric acid, and which costs considerably more to produce.

"Tetra," as it is known in commerce, was invented by Prof. Stoppani of Bologna, in 1914. The process was patented and purchased by an Italian company, which has undertaken to exploit it both in Italy and abroad. Considerable progress has been made in the industry in Italy, notwithstanding the difficulties in obtaining phosphate rock and reactive agents. Seven of the eleven plants are in operation, are administered by the Italian Agricultural Syndicate. Production amounts to 500,000 quintals (approximately 25,000 tons) a year a supply which, it is stated, is far from meeting the demands of Italian farmers. Four new plants are in process of construction.

Another plant now being worked near Luxor on the Nile, produces 200,000 quintals (10,000 tons) a year, and a similar plant is being erected at Kaseir on the Red Sea, where after the war it is hoped to manufacture not less than 2,000,000 quintals (100,000 tons) a year. The rock found in these districts is very rich, viz, 60 per cent. and 70 per cent., respectively.

Method of Manufacture—Advantage Over Superphosphates

The fertilizer is manufactured very simply. In a specially constructed furnace the phosphate-rock powder is roasted for several hours at 1,100 to 1,500 degs. Farenheit together with a reactive agent composed of calcium, sodium, magnesium carbonate, and a small proportion of sodium sulphate. After leaving the furnace the product is hydrated by cold phosphoric acid and for practical use is mixed with sand or dry earth.

From experiments undertaken by a special commission appointed by the Italian Minister of Agriculture the use of this new fertilizer on Wheat, Rice, Potatoes, Oats, Beans and Clover, has given favorable returns. Its fertilizing quality has been pronounced equal and sometimes superior to "super," over which it is claimed to have the following principal advantages:

1. Freedom from causticity, acidity and deterioration. 2. Simple and less costly manufacture. The cost of a plant to manufacture, for example, 100,000 quintals (500,000 tons) of "super" by the acid process, with lead at the present price of 1 franc per kilo would be approximately 1,000,000 ($200,000) francs, as compared with 150,000 ($30,000) francs for a "tetra" installation of the same power and output. 3. Its allowance of the utilization of low-percentage natural phosphate. The manager of the Italian company considers a mineral containing 30 per cent. of "anidrica fosforica" a low-percentage mineral, would yield, it is stated, 14 to 16 units of phosphoric acid.

The superintendent of the agricultural school at Rennes recently sent by the French Government to Italy to make investigations and carry on experiments with this fertilizer, has reported favorably on his findings.

Shrubbery Sales After the War

Our Houston, Tex. correspondent brings out a highly important point this week when he says "it would be a good idea for nurseries to prepare for a big business in shrubbery after the war." He is certainly correct when he draws his conclusion from the fact that, "Our men will come back home with new ideas gained from seeing the ways in which parks and private grounds are kept in England, France and Italy." Letters reaching THE EXCHANGE office indicate that "Our Florists Soldiers" have their eyes open and are filling up with ideas that will have a marked effect upon the taste which they will display after their return. This development of good taste will be fully as marked among other soldiers upon whom florists, nurserymen, landscape gardeners and others depend for the embellishment of home grounds, estates and parks. Hence, the advisibility of preparing for peace while there is yet time.

Flowers and Publicity

How many florists are using our slogan, "Say It with Flowers" and getting maximum results? The many uses to which it can be put is astonishing, as it lends itself to everything. For instance, this simple message in newspapers, "For her birthday, 'Say It with Flowers,'" your name and address underneath, or "For the anniversary 'Say It with Flowers,'" name and address of the advertiser. The hundred and one uses it can be put to makes our slogan an invaluable asset to those florists who continually use it.

We find advertising specialties, such as calendars, blotters, pencils, etc., also fitted for the adoption of the slogan; all these help. Another fine method of employing it is for florists generally to cooperate in their own cities and towns in raising a fund for their own use, simply advertising, "Say It with Flowers," no name being used; the repeated use of the slogan on billboards, car cards or newspapers would have an unusual effect in the sale of more flowers. It would be an ideal way of advertising and would create widespread publicity on account of its simpleness of character but high minded ideal.

Try it out whenever possible and watch the results.

HENRY PENN, Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

A friend of mine came post haste to me after spending a day at a famous (English) agricultural experimental establishment to relate that he had seen a student cutting Wheat with a pair of scissors from a square yard of ground. Having cut and laid aside the Corn, the student got down on his stomach and carefully counted each stump of straw left on the stubble and entered the total in a book. My friend asked me to explain why the student worked on his stomach at the stubble instead of sitting down comfortably to count the "ears" he had cut. I had to confess that I am not sufficiently scientific to know, but we are coming toward these heights of knowledge when we have instituted our very own station for scientific research, plant breeding and all that. My word; what a time there must be in store for us. We shall all be wishing we were boys again to reap the benefits of really sound scientific training, even including the correct method of "getting down" to work. How nice it will be, too, to handle only varieties of plants and crops that have been well bred in nice aristocratic environment instead of in the coarse vulgar atmosphere of the common garden and farm. I can almost already weave a romance of the greater and higher life of the coming horticulturist.—ONLOOKER in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

Eminent financial authorities estimate that the nations of the world will be indebted to the United States when the war ends, if such happy event should occur in 1919, to the tune of $9,000,000,000. The Latest Stile

A maiden coy and a tall, slim boy
Sat cooing on a stile,
The boy's lip wore a slight mustache,
The girl's lip wore a smile.

"I love you," quoth the boy and stroked
That faint and downy line,
"And I," the siren softly sighed,
"Would dye it were it mine."

He left that maiden like a flash,
A minute to a mile.
Ah! trifle not with youth's mustache,
When sitting on a stile.

It was quite too bad that Miss Sobeit Neverwed, was unfortunately omitted in the invitations to the golden wedding celebration across the street. In revenge she sent out invitations to her—"Tenth annual decision never to marry." A great host of would-be suitors came and, as in former days, they all brought flowers. While acting her part as host, the question was politely put to her: "Pray will you not admit us to the line of psychology you have persistently adopted in declining ten times in ten years to choose a husband?" "Choose a what?" she asked, vigorously; "why should I?" I've a parrot that can out-cuss any of you, a dog that snarls and growls about the place, and a tom cat that stays out all night, so there you are, all the qualities of a modern husband right here at home, while I still enjoy my freedom and have no responsibility."*

All Tongues "Say it with Flowers"

A party of gentlemen in the diplomatic service, anticipating the coming peace-table conference, entered into a rehearsal of their views, and the question was raised as to the language or form of expression in which terms should be formulated. Each expressed his views in writing. The Frenchman wrote impulsively: "Dites avec les fleurs." The Italian, with a sense of art in his nature, wrote: "Dillo con fiore." Then the Spaniard, quite in sympathy with the others: "Degalo con floris." The Belgian, deciding to represent Esperanto: "Diru kun floroyn." The Japanese, with views of Cherry blossoms wrote cabalistic signs, which meant that he agreed with the others. The American said: "I find though we have different languages, we have all expressed the same idea, so I join you most heartily in your different versions of "Say it with flowers." "Is there a language we have omitted?" was asked. "Yes," came the reply, "however, after four years' vacation away from home, they're now with backs to us, hoofing it toward the Rhine, but we may consider their opinion entirely irrelevant, and what they might say would not be said with flowers."*

Rose Canker and Its Control

Rose canker is a serious disease of greenhouse Roses first described in 1917. Though it was known in America long before that it escaped general notice largely because of its obscure symptoms. Its ravages were formerly assigned to other causes or left unexplained. After certain Rose growers called attention to their losses covering at least four years, the Massachusetts Agri. Exp. Station undertook an investigation in cooperation with the pathologist of the American Rose Society, L. M. Massey, who had already begun work upon the disease. A successful method of control has been evolved and presented in the Mass. Bulletin, No. 183, from which the following condensed conclusions are quoted:

1. Carefully inspect the Rose house to see if canker is present. If not, employ every means to prevent its entering—bring in as few Roses as possible from other houses; examine carefully every plant brought in; reject any with suspicious dead areas in the bark.

2. If it is present on the Roses the only hope lies in starting new plants from clean cuttings in clean soil, and guarding against infection at every step in the plant's development. It cannot be eradicated from infected plants.

3. Dip the cuttings in Bordeaux mixture.

4. Sterilize the pots by dipping for ten minutes or longer in boiling water.

5. Sterilize the potting soil and the cutting bench soil by steaming to a temperature of over 120 deg. for ten minutes or more. Suspected manure should be treated in the same way.

6. Use raised benches, not ground beds.

7. Remove old soil if diseased Roses have been grown in it, and soak the benches thoroughly with (1) formaldehyde at the rate of 1 pint to 25 gallons, or (2) boiling water.

8. Sterilize the bench soil by one of these two methods. If formaldehyde is used, apply at the rate of 2 gals. to the cubic foot. If boiling water is used, apply until every part of the soil is heated above 120 degs.

9. Use a different set of tools in the clean house, or sterilize all tools bringing them in.

10. Keep the walks in all houses covered with lime.

New York Florists' Club and the Fourth Liberty Loan

Between 30 and 40 members of the New York Florists' Club responded on Monday night to President Schenck's call for a special meeting to get under way an organized effort by florists of Greater New York for the coming Fourth Liberty Loan drive.

Secretary John Young read letters urging support of the Loan to the limit of one's resources from Benjamin Strong, of the Federal Reserve Bank, and Mr. Parker, of the advisory committee for the trade section. Mr. Anthony, one of the large force of Four-Minute men specially appointed to help the drive, said that a much closer tab this time will be kept by the Government on those who will and those who will not support the Loan. The speaker, in an optimistic strain, mentioned that the 50 per cent. coal restriction, although serious, put the florist trade in the class of splitting 50-50 with the Government, a position far preferable to other industries which have been called upon to give their all.

G. W. Allen, of the bond advisory committee, working under Mr. Parker, was introduced as the man who will be on hand every afternoon during the drive to cooperate to the fullest. Mr. Allen, who will take up quarters in the office of the secretary, at 1170 Broadway, has promised some worth while publicity for the trade during the campaign.

On a question by J. G. Esler it was made clear that the club will receive credit for all subscriptions reported to it, irrespective of where payment for the bond is made. Is was specially asked that this phase be brought to the notice of all out-of-town members subscribing their home boroughs, as the necessity of registering a substantial support of the Loan on the part of the trade is apparent, while the benefit to the industry from such action will be immeasurable.

Secretary John Young announced President Schenck's selection of a committee to undertake the work, as follows:

On the suggestion of J. A. Manda, President Schenck promised to take under consideration the advisability of strengthening the committee already named by the appointment of several members conveniently located to take care of the trade in the outlying districts.

The Campaign Under Way in Chicago

The Chicago Cook County florists and allied trades have organized for the Fourth Liberty Loan. The selling forces in the coming drive will be concentrated into two main organizations: The business men's squadron, which will cover all lines of industries, and the Ward or District organization, which will sell the bonds from house to house in the residential sections.

Our industry has been assigned to the "Rainbow" or Trades Division, and will be known as Division 19-B, the florist's trade being the second most important industry in this division. This is an excellent plan, as it will enable all florists and allied trades interests, employers as well as employees, to subscribe for the new bonds through our own trade organization.

The city of Chicago and suburbs, including entire Cook County, will be divided into districts. The Fourth Liberty Loan campaign will be carried on under the direction of an executive committee consisting of the chairman and vice-chairman of our trade, and the captain of each district. A representative will also be appointed for each wholesale establishment and allied trades concern. Headquarters of the trade will be established at the wholesale house of E. C. Amling Co., 175 N. Wabash ave., Chicago.

The following organization will conduct the work in this campaign:

F. Lautenschlager, chairman; George Weinhoeber, vice-president; Miss Pederson, secretary.

Chicago Loop District: August Lange, captain, Miss Jean Raske, John Mangel and George Weinhoeber.

Chicago North Side District: Wm. Weinhoeber, captain, Mrs. Clody, Alfred Fisher, Fred Meyer, Mrs. W. T. Hillmar and Alfred Marine.

Chicago South Side District: Arthur Weatherwax, captain; William LaGratta, Charles Samuelson, William J. Smyth and George Walther.

Chicago West Side District: George Asmus, captain, C. Frauenfelder, C. B. La Mar, Miss Anna G. Sawyer, R. E. Schiller, Chas. S. Stewart, Chas. Fisk and Joe Sikuta.

Chicago Greek Florists: John Mangel, captain, Andrew Chrones.

Chicago North West Side District: Paul Klingsporn, captain, W. B. Wallace, Miss O. A. Tonner, J. E. Pollworth and Samuel Pearce.

Chicago-Rogers Park District (Growers only): Nic. Wietor, captain.

Chicago South West Side District, including Morgan Park, Blue Island, Roseland and Washington Heights: C. W. Johnson, captain, L. Lau and H. B. Kirkpatrick.

Evanston District, including Niles Center, Grosse Point, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka and Glencoe: George C. Wieland, captain, Fred Stielow, Albert Lies, Joseph Schloss, M. Anglesburg and Frank Felke.

Park Ridge and Niles, (Ill.) District: Edward Meuret, captain.

Desplaines and Mount Prospect District: Harry Blewitt, captain, John Prickett.

Oak Park River Forest and Forest Park District: A. H. Schneider, captain.

Maywood District, including Melrose Park and Hillside: Paul Weiss, captain, Henry Wehrmann and Ernst Amling.

Morton Grove District: August Poehlmann, captain, Eric Passek.

Chicago Wholesale Florists and Allied Trades: Michael Barker, Alfred Dietsch, Chas. W. Erne, Joe Foerster, Jas. B. Foley, Miss Martha Genterberg, N. S. Griffith, Fred Noerber, Frank Johnson, Olaf Johnson, H. B. Kennicott, Paul Kroeschell, John Kruchten, R. E. Kurowski, Miss Marguerite McNulty, W. J. Miller, A. Miller, Miss Barbara Ott, A. T. Pyfer, Phillip Schupp, Geo. F. Sykes, Miss O. A. Tonner, Lloyd Vaughn, C. L. Washburn, Allie Zech.

Everyone is urged to buy all the bonds he can during the first week of the campaign. Your committee assures you that nothing will be left undone to secure the full quota assigned to our trade.

A specially designed Honor Flag will be awarded to each trades committee that secures its quota, and a star will be awarded for each additional 25 per cent. of the quota secured.

Help your trade! Give it every support to make the proper showing! BUY BONDS TO YOUR UTMOST!

FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN—FLORISTS' TRADES COMMITTEE.
F. LAUTENSCHLAGER, Chairman.

Annual Meeting American Dahlia Society

were Jas. Duthie, William Turner, Peter Duff, Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, Geo. Hale and Geo. Clark. The dinner was a simple but enjoyable one, being conducted strictly according to Mr. Hoover's wishes in the way of food conservation. Pres. Vincent made a few bright remarks, but otherwise there was no speech-making. Besides the judges the following members were present: President Vincent, Arthur Herrington, William Eagleson, secretary of the Board of Managers of the American Institute, W. C. Richards, show manager, Harbeck Mills, Jr., R. J. Leonard, R. E. J. Doherty, Peter Wylie, Mr. James, Geo. L. Stillman, Secretary Jasper R. Lewis, and Mr. and Mrs. Rooney. The trade press was represented by J. Austin Shaw, A. F. Faulkner and G. I. Stodola.

Dahlia Society Awards

The judges were as follows:

For the American Institute—Jas. Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Wm. Turner, Oceanic, N. J.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.

For the American Dahlia Society—Prof. Fraser, Storrs, Conn.; Geo. Hale, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Jack Clarke, H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Exhibition

The fourth annual show of the American Dahlia Society, held for the third time jointly with that of the American Institute, opened in the Engineering Building, 25 West 39th st., N. Y., on Tuesday night of this week and continued through until the close of Thursday evening, Sept. 26.

Many Dahlia Blooms Shown

The number of blooms shown in the approximately 300 entries (about 60 classes) for Dahlias named in the premium list was surprisingly and gratifyingly large, for what was lacking in the number of exhibitors was made up in the number of blooms which each exhibitor staged.

The Show Section no Longer in the Ascendant

In our observation of the exhibits we were more strongly than ever before impressed with the fact that in the Dahlia show of the present time, the "Show" section is no longer in the majority, being overshadowed by those in the decorative, cactus and peony-flowered sections. Furthermore, it is noted that collarettes and singles are shown in increasing numbers, and the pretty little pompons are coming back, also that there is a sprinkling of hybrid decoratives and double ball shaped and fancy, and duplex types, which are on the borderland between the other sections, seen in the shows.

Commercial Exhibitors

N. Harold Cottam & Sons, Wappingers Falls, N. Y. were large exhibitors and prize winners in nearly a score of classes, including that for finest display of Dahlias for which they received the silver medal offered by the Amer. Dahlia Society. Their display of Dahlias of "any and all types" covering 50 sq. ft. arranged for effect was excellent in both quality of blooms and arrangement. Equally meritorious were their exhibits of collarettes, pompons, cactus, singles and shows.

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I. staged a group, for exhibition only, embracing 300 blooms in the several classes, 100 of these being of his own origin. In this group were several of Mr. Stillman's "Fighting Ten" namely, Gen. Pershing, a scarlet cactus; Gen. Haig, decorative, Gen. Joffre, yellow decorative; Gen. Maurice, scarlet peony-flowered; Gen. Cordova, yellow peony-flowered; Gen. Bell, a pure white peony-flowered. Mr. Stillman also exhibited in competition in several other classes, showing both well known standard varieties and many of his own origin, among the latter Geo. L. Stillman, a carmine colored cactus, and Millionaire, a lavender-pink decorative. Mr. Stillman showed a freak Dahlia, named "Siamese Twins," a red show, about one-third of which bears double faced blooms, arranged back to back.

John R. Rooney, New Bedford, Mass., staged a table of exquisitely beautiful blooms, both short and long stems, of his peomy-flowered Dahlia Mrs. Frederick Grinnell. The general color effect of this fragrant Dahlia is rose pink.

J. N. Failor, Richmond Hill, N. Y., showed a group of 50 varieties embracing blooms of several classes. This group was carefully staged, the name of each flower being easily seen; the flowers were of excellent quality.

C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn. was a considerable exhibitor in the peony-flowered, collarette, decorative, hybrid show cactus and pompon classes, winning prizes in all of them.

Leonard & Weber, Trenton, N. J. staged an effective group in the general display any and all types, arranged for effect class, and was among the prize winners.

Lester B. Linsley, West Haven, Conn. showed pompons in the 100 blooms class, and eight varieties of unnamed seedlings winning a first prize for the latter.

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y. staged 100 blooms of single Dahlias in the class for commercial growers only, winning prizes in several groups.

W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass. won first prize for 100 flowers in the cactus section, open to commercial growers only, with a beautiful display, amd was a winner in several other classes for commercial growers.

Alfred E. Doty, New Haven, Conn. was an exhibitor and winner in the open to all class in the decorative, cactus, and hybrid show sections.

John Lewis Childs, Inc., Floral Park and Flowerfield, L. I. won the first prize for 25 blooms of pink cactus Dahlias with the variety Attraction; also showed about 50 varieties of Gladioli, winning first in the class for best 25 vars., three spikes each.

John H. Slocombe, New Haven, Conn. was first with a fine collection of 25 varieties in at least three types.

Gurdon R. Scrivener, Hartford, Conn. won the first prize for the "best basket or hamper decoration of cactus dahlia" given by H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia; also the gold medal of the Dahlia Society of California for most meritorious exhibit in the show, with a basket of exquisite blooms of cactus Dahlia in variety. He also captured the silver cup for best vase of ball-shaped double Dahlias given by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia. Mr. Scrivener also showed a vase of the beautiful variety Glory of New Haven, arranged for effect.

There was noted also a vase of remarkably fine blooms of Rene Cayeux, on long stems, shown apparently for exhibition only by Frederick Etter, Harrison, N. Y., and a vase of white show Dahlias, grown under glass, beautifully arranged with foliage, exhibitor's name not given.

Richard Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co. of White Marsh, Md., staged a splendid collection of decorative Dahlias, which was awarded a special prize.

The seedling Dahlias, exhibited for a certificate were interesting. F. P. Quimby, White Plains, N. Y. showed a yellow, and two pink, decoratives, Nos. 500, 600 and 700, and a red peony-flowered seedling of 1918. W. Will, Katonah, N. Y., showed a basket of a white decorative seedling, beautifully arranged with Pteris ferns, Asparagus and Clematis. Minnie Douglas Foster, Sayville, N. Y., exhibited a pink duplex seedling, named Greycote. L. B. Linsley, West Haven, Conn. staged a pink peony-flowered seedling, No. 607, and Herman Rheinflush, Mamaroneck, N. Y., a pink peony-flowered seedling No. 10, and a Geisha colored peony-flowered seedling No. 8. The award of certificates for seedling Dahlias will be announced later.

Non-Commercial Exhibits

There were also many meritorious exhibits in the classes for private gardeners and amateurs, among the winners in these being John Harding, gdr., Greens Farms, Conn.; C. F. Cartledge, gdr., Locust Valley, N. Y.; George Ferguson, gdr., Manhasset, N.Y., who staged a group of wonderfully beautiful fancy leaved Caladiums; Miss Sarah Wakeman, Southport, Conn., the largest exhibitor in the amateur class. The silver cup offered by Stumpp & Walter Co., New York City was won by W. C. Noonan, who also captured the silver cup given by W. Atlee Burpee & Co. for the best vase of modern cactus Dahlias, 12 flowers not less than four vars.

Further Dahlia Show Notes in Next Issue

Since the Dahlia show opened Tuesday evening, and we go to press Wednesday noon, giving us only a limited amount of time for careful observation of this show, we may have failed to mention some displays of merit staged by other exhibitors. If so, these will be given due attention in our next issue, in which also we hope to make some mention of the more notable varieties of Dahlias in the several sections exhibited.

Exhibits of Other Flowers

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., staged for exhibition only, vases of fine blooms of the new Roses Columbia and Premier, and of hybrid Delphiniums. He was awarded a silver medal for Premier. Mr. Totty also staged, for exhibition only some handsome specimens of Dahlia Mrs. J. Green.

Vegetables and Fruits

There were large and meritorious displays of vegetables made by Robt. Jones, gdr., Glen Cove, N. Y.; George Ferguson, gdr.; Charles H. Rice, gdr., Seabright, N.Y., and F. S. Wheeler, gdr., Rye, N. Y.

There was only a small display of fruits, but a good showing for this season. The exhibitors and winners were N. Harold, Cottam & Sons, and W. P. Masten, Pleasant Valley, N. Y., both showing Apples, Pears and Grapes.

John Scheepers, Inc., staged for exhibition only his new great everblooming red Raspberry, La France, showing both the large berries in a receptacle and also on the very sturdy canes with their large foliage. This exhibit attracted much deserved attention.

The United States Department of Agriculture has announced that Dr. R. A. Pearson has resigned as Assistant Secretary of Agriculture so he may resume his duties as president of the Iowa State College of Agriculture. He will be succeeded by G. I. Christie of Indiana whose nomination was sent to the Senate last week.

Dr. William J. Spillman, who for 17 years has been connected with the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, most of the time as head of the Bureau of Farm Management, has accepted associate editorship of The Farm Journal of Philadelphia, Pa.

Exclusion of Plant Importations

An important hearing was held between members of the trade and the Federal Horticultural Board, at Washington, May 28 last, in the endeavor to obtain a mitigation of the proposed ruling to practically shut out all plant importations, whether of so-called florists' stock, nursery stock, or fruit trees.

No further action was taken at that time.

Since then a protest was lodged by a committee of the New York Florists' Club, of which Winfred Rolker was chairman, against the proposed restrictions, as well as by a number of other florists' clubs and associations.

Chairman Rolker is now in receipt of the following acknowledgment, which makes it plainly evident that the Federal Horticultural Board has practically overruled all protests, and the regulations now proposed go into effect June 1, 1919.

After that date no Azaleas, Rhododendrons, Palms, Araucarias, Bay Trees, Hollies, Ericas, Acacias, Conifers, Buxus, etc. may be imported for commercial purposes if these regulations prevail.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
Federal Horticultural Board,
Washington, D. C.

August 29, 1918.

Dear Sir:

The experts of this department have given careful consideration to the restrictions which should be placed on the importation of nursery stocks, plants, and seeds into the United States as a result of the hearing of May 28, 1918. It is proposed to make these restrictions effective on and after June 1, 1919. The proposed quarantine will exclude all plants and plant products for propagation from all foreign countries, except as provided for in the regulations issued under the quarantine. For your information, and for any suggestions which you may care to make, I am sending you a copy of the tentative regulations governing the importations of such nursery stock, plants and seeds into the United States. In the provisional recommendations of the Bureau of Plant Industry, submitted as a tentative program of action in connection with the notice of hearing, it was provided that some four groups of plants, normally imported with earth about the roots, should be prohibited entry at future dates, in the case of three of these groups beginning July 1, 1919. The regulations as now drafted eliminate these groups altogether. Except as to the group (Azalea, etc.) for which a longer period was suggested, this is not a wide variation from the tentative program, inasmuch as the regulations now proposed do not go into effect until June 1, 1919. Furthermore, under existing war conditions and the action of the War Trade Board, importations of plants of all of these groups will be greatly limited if not stopped for the period of the duration of the war.

Regulation 2 provides for the unrestricted entry of two groups of plants, namely (1) fruits, vegetables, cereals, and other plant products imported for food purposes; and (2) field, vegetable and flower seeds.

Regulation 3 provides, under compliance with the conditions of the subsequent regulations, for the importation of five groups of plants as follows:

(1) Lily bulbs, Lily of the Valley, Narcissus, Hyacinths, Tulips, and Crocus, free from balls of soil or earth.
(2) Fruit stocks, seedlings, cuttings, scions, and buds of fruits for reproduction purposes.
(3) Rose stocks for reproduction purposes, including Manetti, Multiflora, Briar Rose, and Rosa Rugosa.
(4) Nuts, including palm seeds, for oil or reproduction purposes.
(5) Seeds of fruit, forest, ornamental, and shade trees, seeds of deciduous and evergreen ornamental shrubs, and seeds of hardy perennial plants.

These groups of plants and seeds under regulations 2 and 3 include the plants and seeds which were represented as essential to the floriculture and horticulture of this country, namely, the field, vegetable, and flower seeds, and fruit stocks, cuttings, scions, etc., and Rose stocks for reproduction purposes.

The subsequent regulations, prescribing conditions of entry of the groups of plants enumerated in regulation 3, are based very largely on regulations hitherto enforced governing the entry of nursery stock. Provision has been made, however, in regulation 10 for the disinfection of plants offered for entry should, in the judgment of this Board and the inspectors of the Department of Agriculture, such disinfection be necessary.

The Board will be glad to have your association give careful consideration to these regulations and, if it seems desirable, a conference can be arranged for a discussion of these regulations. It is the wish of the Board to meet any reasonable objections which can be presented, and which will not involve a material increase of risk of entry of new plant pests.

The quarantine will provide for the importation, through the agency of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, of plants and seeds for experimental or scientific purposes, and by this means it will be possible to import novelties or other plants and seeds for which special need can be shown. This does not mean, however, that the Department will undertake commercial importations for private firms.

Yours very truly,
C. L. MARLATT
Chairman of Board.

Addressed to W. Rolker, New York City, as chairman New York Florists' Club's Committee on drafting protest against exclusion of plants.

When Tempted to Complain

In considering business conditions as they exist with us today we are sometimes tempted to bemoan our hard lot—volunteering and drafting of our trained men, shortage of coal, "non-essential" rulings and other difficulties. Let us contrast these conditions with those in France, Belgium and Great Britain, if we can imagine them. To help us in forming our pictures let us glance at England through the eyes of Mr. Val. Fisher, a member of the London Chamber of Commerce, who, in a recent address, made these statements:

Bear in mind that one-half of all the men in England between the ages of 18 and 51 are in Military or Naval service. That means one-third of our entire male population from the infants in the cradle to the extremely old, also bear in mind that 5,000,000 British women who never worked before have voluntarily gone to work to fill the places of men at the front. Hundreds of our women are working in factories making TNT, a work that ruins the hair and turns the skin yellow—thus sacrificing their beauty for the rest of their lives for the sake of Britain and freedom. We have only one business in England and that is to win the war. We are all concentrated on that one thing, even to the boys and girls.

Hydrangea Grafting

Growing of Hydrangeas by grafting is far simpler than layering. Grafting consists in uniting a root and a piece of branch of the variety, by the splice or the cleft method. Splice grafting is extremely simple. Root and cion are severed with a long diagonal cut, and the two parts are tied together with a cotton thread. In case the root is larger than the cion, it is advisable to keep one side of the cion even with the root. If the root is much too large for the cion, cleft grafting is preferred.

Cleft grafting consists in splitting a root after it has been cut off square and inserting a cion, cut wedge shaped, and of equal size. After insertion the cion is tied with cotton thread. It is not necessary to place the grafts in a greenhouse to unite. They may be placed in coldframes early in Spring.

During the shipping season in Fall or Spring healthy roots may be collected from the plants to be shipped. These roots may be kept in moist peat for months. The cion must be made of the lowest part of the branches. The grafts may be placed in the soil in bunches of three, very close to each other, and the point of union covered with soil. Whole roots may be used, but it is economical and better handling if each root is cut in two or three pieces, in which case two or three grafts can be made. In a comparatively short time the plants are ready to be planted in the field.

The advantages of grafted stock can readily be seen. Growth is much stronger and healthier than when plants are produced by layering. Considerable work is attached to layering, while grafting may be done in slack times. It gives practically 100 per cent. results.

As Hydrangeas flower in August, before the growth of the plant is mature it is advisable to strip all flowers off the plants in the nurseries, thus giving all the nourishment necessary to the development of branches to make them sturdy.

A disease of Hydrangeas appears in the root system. It is a rot producing fungus. On high grounds it seldom develops, but in wet soil it attacks and spreads rapidly. When collecting roots for grafting it is advisable to examine each carefully, so as not to collect any diseased ones.

Syracuse State Fair, September, 1918

A general view of the exhibits. Note the State service flag at the rear of the hall. This had 62 stars, representing the number of counties in the State. The flag was 11ft x 18ft. It contained 60,000 blue Immortelles, and 10,000 white Cape flowers; 100 sq. ft. of Ruscus were used in the border. The flag was designed and executed by Prof. D. Lumsden, Ithaca, N. Y., supt. of the horticultural department of the fair.

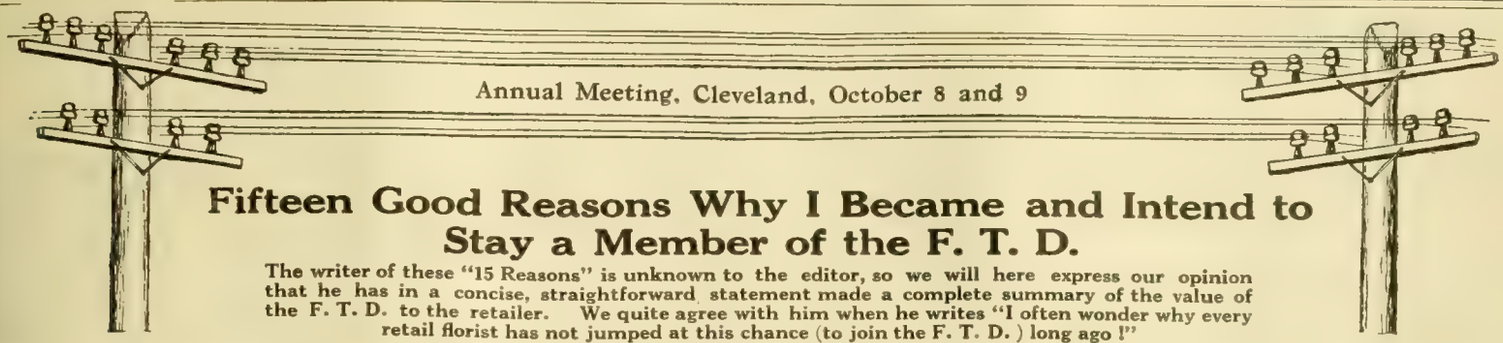
One of the best things done for the retailer by THE EXCHANGE was the getting up of an "ALBUM OF FLORAL DESIGNS" for Agencies, and the "DESIGN BOOK DE LUXE" for counter trade. Most every retailer invests in one or other and keeps on buying. If you are not acquainted with these Business Getters ask us for further particulars.



Annual Meeting, Cleveland, October 8 and 9

Fifteen Good Reasons Why I Became and Intend to Stay a Member of the F. T. D.

The writer of these "15 Reasons" is unknown to the editor, so we will here express our opinion that he has in a concise, straightforward statement made a complete summary of the value of the F. T. D. to the retailer. We quite agree with him when he writes "I often wonder why every retail florist has not jumped at this chance (to join the F. T. D.) long ago!"

1. Because this is the only organization that keeps my name before its membership constantly.
2. Because by my being a member of the F. T. D. I establish a credit with all the rest of the members. This means that when I send an order to an F. T. D. member I know it is going to be filled as well as if I had filled it in my own store.
3. Because when I get an order from an F. T. D. member I know that his credit is good and I can go right ahead and fill his order; the payment of same being guaranteed by the F. T. D. organization.
4. Because it has become of great value to me to be able to tell my patrons that I am connected with the best and most live retailers all around the United States and Canada and, at a moment's notice, am able to tell my patron who is going to fill his order in a certain section of the world.

A Hearty Invitation

Albert Pochelon, Secretary of the F. T. D., on behalf of that organization, extends a hearty invitation to be present at its Cleveland meeting, to be held October 8 and 9, in the Hollenden Hotel, to every retail florist in the land.

The meetings are full of snap and vim from the word "Go," and this meeting offers a florist his best opportunity to get acquainted with his fellows and imbibe some of the optimistic atmosphere which, even in these days, keeps them keyed up to concert pitch.

5. Because I can advertise to the public something it does not know in regard to our profession, and am enabled by these means to send a great many orders from here. This naturally sets to thinking the retailers who fill these orders, and, when they work up an order for my territory they send it to me just for the sake of reciprocity.
6. Because I knew by my becoming a member and helping to work on the field of out-of-town business I would help myself—at the same time helping others.
7. Because I knew when I joined the F. T. D. and filled orders for its members I would get my money and get it promptly and had to do the same thing in return.
8. Because I believed in this organization as being of the best benefit for a retail florist, not alone from receiving out-of-town orders, but for the sake of getting valuable information and education in the retail florist business.
9. Because the methods, by-laws, rules and constitution of this organization, backed by a guarantee fund, are of a great valuable fundamental construction which can never again be sidetracked, and which will grow larger and better from year to year.
10. Because I could see and reason for myself that it is not money and dues that this organization would need as much as actual cooperation. In other words, the more efforts, not monetary, I can put in this organization the more valuable it will become to me; while at the same time, I am doing a good turn for a friend of mine in the same line of business.

11. BECAUSE I knew that the public would soon learn to appreciate the out-of-town service, and appreciation shown by a customer is the best advertisement a flower shop can get.
12. BECAUSE the F. T. D. organization does not tell its members alone that I am the F. T. D. member of my home town but it does tell and give every member the names of towns, villages, etc., within my reach that I can give service to, and I am furnished with a book telling me where to send a certain order in a place where there are no florists or no good, reliable F. T. D. members.
13. BECAUSE in connection with the F. T. D. I have also become a member of the Society of American Florists which society is of the greatest help to the retail florists through its national advertising campaign and the holding of national flower shows.
14. BECAUSE the F. T. D. organization and its entire membership are advertising and stimulating the sale of flowers, whether it is in their home town or not.
15. BECAUSE there are hundreds of incidents that I could illustrate which have become of direct benefit to my profession, and I can safely say that the amount I pay to the F. T. D. annually is the best business investment I ever made in my life. I often wonder why every retail florist has not jumped at this chance long ago! They must either be blind, shortsighted, narrow-minded or suspicious. For the last there can be no reason as every cent of money that I have put in the F. T. D. is accounted for, and the small annual dues that I have paid I am sure have been spent very cautiously and only for the benefit of myself and my profession.

I cannot help but recommend every retail florist who is honest, reliable, and whose credit is good, to join the F. T. D., not just for the sake of being a member, but join to work with the organization for the organization; by doing so you will work for your own interest more so than you realize.

A SINCERE F. T. D. MEMBER.

Wants Samples of Retailer Advertising

Do not forget that both those who are going and those who are not going to the F. T. D. meeting are requested to send all advertising material used by retailers in the past to H. P. Knoble, 1836 West 25th st., Cleveland, O., without delay, for exhibition at the meeting there Oct. 8 and 9. To leaflets, circulars, cards and other printed matter, do not fail to add some newspaper clippings showing your own advertising, or any suggestions whatsoever that relate to that particular line. Mr. Knoble asks for these contributions to be made as early as possible, for the reason that they will take considerable time to arrange. Due to mail delays these should be posted with special delivery stamps.

Having seen similar exhibits in other lines of business, we know how effective and informative these displays are, and so would enjoin on all who can possibly contribute to do so, and without delay.

F. T. D. Window Dressing

At our F. T. D. meeting in Detroit in 1917 Sam Seligman genially called "Sprinkle Proof Sam," originated the idea of giving a reward for window decorations demonstrating to the public to the best advantage the service rendered by the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. This prize was open to all retailers in the town where our F. T. D. meeting is to be held, and great good came out of this display at the different flower shows in Detroit. The idea worked out so well that the Kennicott Bros. Co. of Chicago offered $100 in cash for the best window, Chas H. Grakelow of Philadelphia offered a silver loving cup for the second, and Sam Seligman's $25 was to be for the third best.

This seems very encouraging and I am sure that the Cleveland florists, and not the F. T. D. members alone, but all retail florists, have something worth while going after.

The F. T D. Questionnaire

"Hats off" to whoever is responsible for the questionnaire sent out by the F. T. D. Association.

The information thus obtained should furnish much valuable material for discussion at Cleveland, October 8 and 9.

The 28 questions touch on much which is vital to the welfare of the association and, if we may reverse their order, and reply to the last question first, "How do you feel after filling out this questionnaire?" we would reply that the series of questions asked makes clearly evident the fact that this aggressive organization is in the hands of those who are not resting on past laurels, but who are continually on the move to secure larger benefits for their members.

Among the striking questions we note: "Shall firms not in the retail business (but closely associated with our trade) be allowed to join and work with us and what shall be their annual dues?" "What shall be the annual dues for members in foreign countries?" in which is incorporated the opinion that it is hardly fair to ask such members to join the S. A. F., support the guarantee fund, and join and pay annual dues to the F. T. D., which is followed up with the question as to "What would be a fair amount for all retail florists in various towns in England, France and Italy?" Question 5, if given a favorable decision, would eliminate a factor which, at times, has been regarded as interfering with the growth of the membership list. This reads: "What do you think of a plan whereby we can pay, perhaps, the lump sum of $1000 for our entire membership annually from the F. T. D. treasury to the S. A. F., and in this manner make all F. T. D. members S. A. F. members automatically?"

An appreciation of what the S. A. F. publicity campaign has done for the members of the F. T. D., is shown in the following question: "What shall be the sum annually turned over from the F. T. D. toward the S. A. F. publicity fund?"

Question No. 10, in which the members are asked as to the number of orders sent out and received during one year's business, should bring to light some surprises which should furnish food for thought to those retailers who have not as yet linked up with the F. T. D.

Question 19 wants to know whether the member has done his bit for the association. It reads: "Are you taking any interest in the F. D. T. aside from your own personal gain, and in what direction?"

We imagine that friend Pochelon wrote question No. 22, a foot note to which reads: "Next time you write a hasty or sarcastic letter, wait a day or two before mailing it." The popular secretary believes that in nine cases out of ten such letters would never be posted.

It is earnestly hoped that all F. T. D. members will give this questionnaire fullest consideration. To reply to each question to the best of one's ability would be the next best thing to attending the meeting at Cleveland. Do it now, but as well go to Cleveland, if at all possible. Both moves have inestimable value for retailers everywhere.

C. L.

Questionnaires being the fashion of the day, there is no reason why F. T. D. members who received one direct from their own organization should not be at pains to answer to the best of their ability the twenty-eight questions therein propounded. Their replies, grouped and analyzed, will enable the Association's officers to come to a more intimate understanding of the steps necessary to be taken to insure further and mutual welfare.

Some of these questions are of considerable importance.

For instance, Number 5, wherein it is asked—"What do you think of a plan whereby we can pay perhaps the lump sum of $1000 for our entire membership annually from the F. T. D. treasury to the S. A. F. and, in this manner, make all F. T. D. members automatically members of the S. A. F.?" Some twenty years ago we advocated the adoption of a system whereby on the payment of so much per capita all the members of clubs and horticultural associations generally would become automatically members of the S. A. F. Our desire was to assist in creating one great central horticultural society, the mass influence of which would be felt whenever matters of national importance came up, as they have of late so frequently. It will be readily understood that a consolidated body of ten thousand would be looked upon by law makers and others as of vastly more importance than one of two thousand. Since that time, however, the conferring of a directorship on every club having a membership of one hundred in the S. A. F. has been adopted—which is good for the large clubs but rather discriminatory against the smaller clubs.

Our own answer to No. 5 would be "Let well enough alone." The S. A. F. is doing big work for all the trade and, again, the $3 a year per individual paid into its treasury is none too great to recompense it for the services it is rendering to the general cause; really the members of the F. T. D. should be more interested in the special publicity campaign work of the S. A. F. than the growers or others who make up the majority of its membership.

Why not get acquainted with the money-making Floral Design Books issued by The Florists' Exchange? A post card request will bring you complete descriptive circular about them.

In No. 22 is asked, "Do you ever receive or write sarcastic or hasty letters to brother florists?" It advises the next time one has written such a letter, not to mail it but to hold it for a day or two and then re-read it, after which, in nine cases out of ten, it will be torn up and thrown into the waste basket. Every business man is bound to receive occasionally letters probing deeply, which hurt, and which are generally written on a spur of the moment and often without cause. If such are answered in like spirit, then an impasse is created and mutual ill will ensues, lasting indefinitely on both sides. We will confess that under provocation we have written many letters containing adjectives and expressions the reverse of friendly, but it has been our invariable rule to act as advised in No. 22, with the result that very few indeed of the letters so written have ever gotten beyond the desk; another, couched in more moderate language, has been written to take its place. The business point involved is simply that if you use force to fight force, the impact is likely to shatter all possibilities for future reconciliation or future mutual business. After a lengthy experience, with all kinds of characters I can truthfully say that the milder letter is always the better, notwithstanding the provocation, for, all said and done, the men who write spitfire letters are to be pitied rather than condemned. Fortunately, the percentage is not a heavy one; better than a reply in kind is to maintain a dignified silence.

No. 24, "Are you hitching your advertising and publicity in your locality to the S. A. F. publicity campaign and using the slogan 'Say it with Flowers' with every chance you can get?" No retailer should allow a day to pass by without using this slogan in an effective way to make it count—on signs in the shop, over the counter, in his advertising on his wagons: Everywhere, "Say it with Flowers" should be conspicuous.

No. 25. Asking if you are making it known in every possible direction that you can make deliveries of flowers through any other one of six hundred fellow retailers all over the United States and Canada, requires similar advice to No. 24. You can take it from an advertising expert that there can be no overdoing in the advertising for either one or the other. The mottoes and the preachments would bear repetition millions upon millions of times and even at that two-thirds of the people of the country would still remain in ignorance. The heaviest and most continuous advertising that has been done by any specialist in any direction has never yet reached the knowledge of fifty per cent. of our population. A. T. D.

The Undertaker and the Florist

I do not know just how it can be done, this cutting out of the undertaker. Many people at the time of a death ask him to recommend a good florist and naturally the undertaker will try to land the job "for a friend." There are some florists who have no friend who is an undertaker; they have to put up the commission proposition, as the florist is just as hungry for the "coin" as the average undertaker.

What we are trying to get at is a modern method of getting business without having to use "lubrications" to do it. The average person at the time of a death in the family does not think of flowers but has to be reminded of them. Now I know for a fact that the average undertaker does not want anything to do with flowers. Why? Well, it means an extra man to take care of the flowers, an extra carriage and extra expense for the family, and goodness knows they have enough expense, without loading them up with extras.

If the florist had his innings before the undertaker, why there would be nothing said. But there is always someone, who wants to "start something." The whole point is to know just how to handle the matter of flowers. If you send a book around just as soon as a death happens, you are listed as a "crape puller" by the florists. There are plenty of people nowadays who like to have a florist call on them at a time of bereavement, as it saves time, the trouble of "dressing up" to go downtown, etc. Then there are others who would not give a florist a "look in."

The undertaker as a rule has more to say in regard to the added expense of taking care of the flowers sent to a funeral than we in the trade have any idea of. As a rule, if the members of the family do not think they can stand the expense of an elaborate funeral someone has to suffer and generally it is the "poor florist." The undertaker has enough to do without taking care of a lot of flowers, which often come in at just the last moment before the services, and many times he does not get credit for what he does.

I am in a section of the city where there are five undertakers and some years ago I was located with an undertaker, that is I had business in connection with him. So I know something about the subject. There has been some talk in the trade papers about how to overcome the "kindly omit flowers" evil. In connection with this I will say that at this time, when the florist's business is having a hard time of it the least said about the undertaker the better. If you do not want to give a commission, why that is your business.

I am a florist and my family has been in the florist business for some generations. I love flowers for their own sake, apart from the money to be made from them and I don't like to see the florist abused. I do not want to part with my coin any better than my friend from New Jersey, but this is a time when you must use "uncommon sense," and the less you have to say about the undertaker the better, for he is the fellow who can help you at this time.

Your correspondent wants to know where he can get 20 per cent. Well, if he will write to Secretary Pochelon at Detroit, Mich., and join the F. T. D. Mr. Pochelon will put him "wise" as to how to make 20 per cent. without having to work very hard for it.

In regard to that famous "$10 pillow with the words 'Mary Ann' on it," I will say that the florist who furnishes this pillow is rated in Dun's and Bradstreet's as good for any amount and pays his bills promptly. There is a firm in Massachusetts and several in other places that pay 33 per cent.

This practice of paying commission to the undertaker has been going on for something like 50 years and I think that in these days, when everything is more or less uncertain, it is a bad time to get after the undertaker, for he can turn much business your way, or turn you down flat. I am going to do as I have always done heretofore; if I have to pay a commission to an undertaker I will do so. I do not mean that I would be satisfied to do this always, but at least till after the war; then if some of the "up-to-date florists" want to cut out the undertaker, I am with them. I am not speaking from what I have read in the trade papers or from what somebody else has told me, but from my own experience of 30 years as a florist and from my personal knowledge and experience of the undertaker, and the plan I suggest I believe is for the best good of the trade at this time.

Hartford, Conn. G. G. McClunie.

Another Slogan

The Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Iowa have adopted the slogan "Say It with a Basket of Flowers." One form in which it is being used is on a rubber stamp; in a long rectangular space is shown, on either side, a basket of flowers enclosed in a circle, with the wording between the two circles.

Flowers to Cheer Our Wounded Heroes

Reports from the Y. W. C. A. in France state that the Blue Triangle workers who are located in the Y. W. C. A. huts for nurses are cheering the wounded and ill soldiers in the hospitals there by distributing among them Roses, Snapdragons, Larkspurs, Foxgloves, Gladioli and other blooms. These are contributed by the owners of gardens in the neighborhood of the hospitals. The soldiers are said to ask eagerly for the flowers and are evidently delighted to receive them.

It might be as well for store employees to avoid the use of the words "clerk" and "florist" when asked to state their occupation. Decorators and designers may not be more essential, but they have been less talked about.—A Chicago Contemporary.

—Would there not be renewed danger here? The camouflage corps is in great need of skilled designers we hear. Might not these men be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire?

The Market

Roses are fairly plentiful and meet with a good market. Carnations are in fair supply and are proving good property. Dahlias have become plentiful and recents in this line include many choice offerings. Asters are still plentiful, but the season is nearing the end. Some excellent Gladioli may be had. Other offerings include Chrysanthemums and Cosmos.

Glimpses of Business Men

Robert Warren Hardesty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hardesty, was killed last Saturday when an automobile in which he was riding was hit by an L. & N. train. Mr. and Mrs. Hardesty have the sympathy of their friends in their bereavement.

C. E. Critchell has been getting excellent Boston fern and Adiantum plants from Wm. Shafer who has taken over the Hoffmeister Floral Co. greenhouses. Burglars entered Mr. Critchell's place last Friday night and stole some ribbons.

Ed Bossemeyer has advanced to Co. A in the U. S. military training work.

Mr. Cox, representing the Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.; J. R. Goldman, Middletown, Ohio, and Mrs. G. W. Frisch, Dayton, Ohio, were among last week's visitors.

The Market

Flowers are scarce in the local market. A week of cool weather with one or two frosts has pretty nearly cut off the supply of Asters and Gladioli. Chrysanthemums are just beginning to make their appearance, being shipped in, however. Local Roses are still rather short. Outside markets must be depended upon for the supply of the better grades. This supply is adequate and brings rather stiff prices for the time of year. Following are the current wholesale prices: Killarney, 4c. to 10c.; Hoosier, 6c. to 20c.; Russell, 6c. to 20c.; Ophelia, 4c. to 10c.; Shawyer, 5c. to 15c.; American Beauty, $3 to $5 per doz.; Carnations, short, 4c.; Asters, $2 to $4 per 100; Gladioli, $2 to $6.

The retail stores have enjoyed an unusually busy week owing to heavy demand for funeral flowers. This item continues to be the mainstay of the business, although several stores report booking orders for wedding decorations for the near future. The sale of house plants has been given impetus by the approach of Fall weather. This is putting new life into the trade. Altogether things look favorable for the coming season.

Club Meeting

A regular meeting of the Detroit Florists Club, held at the Statler Hotel, on Tuesday, Sept. 10, was the first meeting under the new president, J. F. Sullivan. Things started with a bang. After a few preliminary remarks he reflected upon the necessity of making the club a successful one in view of the coming S. A. F. and O. H. convention to be held in Detroit in 1919. This he said could be brought about only by faithful attendance at the meetings and the cooperation of members of various committees in the tasks set before them. His remarks met with enthusiastic applause. He promised interesting meetings with talks by men of prominence on subjects vitally important to the trade. For the October meeting he announced Mr. Gammage of London, Ont., as the speaker.

Harry Balsley in a short address brought up many interesting reminiscences. Chas. Plumb explained the bulb situation to the retailers. The greatly increased cost on the other side, he said, together with cost of freight, duty and short credits will make bulb flowers highly unprofitable this year. He estimated that a 6in. pan, which ordinarily sells at retail for 75c. to $1.25, will this year have to bring $2.50.

In the discussion of the coal situation it was questioned if the privilege of using screenings above the 50 per cent. allowance of coal, as granted in Indiana and Illinois might not be acquired for Michigan. A committee was appointed to investigate. The following were unanimously elected to membership. Chas. Vodica, Chas. Gibson, Walter Cooke and George Street.

painstaking work on the part of the children. Ferns and other plants donated by various members of the club served as prizes. Detroit florists deeply appreciate the work and results attained by Mr. Gude of Washington in his late interview with Gen. Crowder in regard to florists being exempt from the work or fight rule. A resolution drawn in acknowledgment of this will be mailed to Mr. Gude shortly. A strong appeal was made by Mr. Pochelon for florists to close their shops on Sundays.

Detroit florists have observed the gasless Sunday rule by refusing to make deliveries with their cars on this day. Mr. Pochelon believes this would be an opportune time to bring about Sunday closing. His appeal met with much favorable comment. Final action was postponed to the next meeting.

A party of local florists recently visited the various greenhouses of the Mt. Clemens growers. Among those visited were Fred Breitmeyer, Robt. Klagge, Arthur Van Beversluys and Aug. Von Boeselager. H. C. F.

Denver, Col.

With the return of cool Autumn weather a more steady increase in business is noted in the flower stores. There is a larger call for cut flowers, blooming plants and Boston ferns. Several October weddings are being booked already. The large and small wedding decorations are missed by all. Most of the decorations these days are pulled off in one's store or window. However, this keeps one in practice. Asters are about a thing of the past. Gladioli and Dahlias are still to be had. Roses are coming in better every day and are selling up fairly well. Carnations are beginning to come in larger quantities, the flowers having better size and the stems getting longer.

In the Spot Light

C. R. Root of the Colorado Seed Co. was much pleased, having just received word from New York that the Dutch bulbs had arrived. This firm disposes of a large quantity of these bulbs every Fall.

Elitch Gardens Co. has a house of fine Begonias, the color being exceptionally good. It is cutting a fair quantity of Easter Lilies. The plants in the Rose and Carnation houses look strong, clean and healthy. Some of the early 'Mums are showing color. Paul Howard says the demand for good stock is greater than the supply. The out of town business was very good in September.

H. G. MacLellan of the Ove Gnatt Co. opened up at the Brown Palace Hotel with a fine line of florists' supplies, baskets, Christmas goods and decorative stock. He is on his way to the Coast. He reports business very good so far, and is glad to say that Denver treated him O. K.

The City Floral Co. has added a new leanto house, 16 x 100, which will be used for pot plants. The Poinsettia plants have never been better at this time of year. Mr. Lamerman states he can never grow enough to supply the demand.

Conrad Lengenfelder has his houses all planted and his stock looks healthy. He is growing a large variety of Roses this season—Columbia, Rose-Marie, Double Ophelia, Francis Scott Key, Mock, Mrs. Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia and Hadley; also five houses of Carnations. He is trying three benches of Tomatoes this season as an experiment. If he has good success in this venture he will go at it stronger next year.

S. R. Lundy is back at the store again after spending a week in Salt Lake City.

O. H. Frank, resident representative for the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has opened an office and show room in the Charles Building. C. F. E.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—By the recently probated will of the late John White, florist of this city, the bulk of the estate, consisting largely of real estate and having an estimated value of about $40,000, goes to his widow.

Wholesale Market and News of the City

The Market

Sept. 24.—There is little change from last week's conditions in the wholesale cut flower market. Arrivals are not over large, and the demand is moderate. American Beauty and hybrid tea Roses are both in fair supply and are meeting with a moderate demand. Am. Beauty of special grade are selling at from 8c. to 25c. each, and other grades at corresponding prices. The best grades now arriving of the hybrid teas are selling all the way from 2c. to 3c. each for the Killarney varieties up to about 10c. for the preferred newer varieties.

Carnations are in fair supply and are meeting with a little better demand, as the offerings of Asters grow less. The best blooms are selling for about $1.50 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are in much larger supply, and prices have declined from last week's quotations to 25c. to 50c. each, with only a moderate demand. White Lilies are temporarily in short supply and on Monday sold for $10 per 100; rubrums at $2 to $5 per 100. Lily of the Valley is very scarce and is selling at about $10 per 100 for the best grade.

As regards Summer and Autumn flowers, Asters are in decidedly shorter supply and the best are realizing from $1.50 to $3 per 100; Gladioli, too, are passing out of the market, but Dahlias, Cosmos and Eupatoriums are coming in, not in large, but in a slowly increasing supply. A little Delphinium and a considerable supply of Tritoma are seen. Of the indoor grown Autumn flowers there is a moderate supply of 'Mums of only medium quality, some of the best realizing about $3 per doz.

Outdoor grown greens are now dominant, especially boughs of Oak foliage, ferns and sprays of Asparagus.

Liberty Loan Meeting

There was a special meeting of the Florists' Club held on Monday night of this week, called to appoint committees on the sale of the Fourth Liberty Loan bonds. A full report will be found in this issue.

At the Oct. 14 meeting of the club, Edward L. Farrington, of Weymouth Heights, Mass., will give an illustrated lecture on "The Arnold Arboretum, the World's Greatest Tree Museum." Mr. Farrington will go through the Arboretum from end to end, showing pictures of the different groups of trees and shrubs as they are found along the way.

Posters were up in several parts of the city on Monday emanating from the National League for Woman's Service appointing Tuesday, Sept. 24, for the sale of boutonnières by the young ladies of the league, who "tagged" each man, asking him to wear a flower. The proceeds of the sale are to help along the financial drive being made by the league. Mrs. J. Clark Curtin, president of the league had charge of this sale, and it was reported that she had marshaled hundreds of young women, many of them society "buds," to help promote the good work.

The American Dahlia Society held its fourth annual show in the Engineering Building, 25 W. 39th st., this week. The show opened Tuesday night and closed Thursday night. A report will be found in this issue.

P. Welch, Boston, Mass., was a caller in the wholesale district this week.

Mrs. Ernest Asmus, who was critically injured in an automobile accident last week (see p. 465), at latest accounts, as we go to press, is reported as absolutely without change from the condition then noted.

News has reached C. B. Weathered, of this city, of the death of his son, C. B. Weathered, Jr., in action in France, at the passage of the river Ourcq, on July 31, which date commemorated the young man's 24th birthday. Mr. Weathered, who has long been a familiar figure in local trade circles, has the deep sympathy of his many friends.

George Patrick Buckley, who died suddenly at his residence, 1275 Atlantic ave., Brooklyn, aged 70 years, was in his day a noted gardener and florist. For years his place on Fulton st. was known as the Crystal Palace, named after the London institution of that name, where, as a boy, he cultivated flowers used in Queen Victoria's palace. He leaves a son and a daughter.

Horticultural Society of New York

The Horticultural Society of New York held a Dahlia show at the Museum building, Bronx Park, on Sept. 21 and 22. The show was somewhat smaller than usual because of the poor season for Dahlias, but blooms of excellent quality were exhibited. The trade exhibitors were C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Alfred E. Doty, New Haven, Conn. and Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y. who divided the awards in the commercial classes. Mr. Alling took first for the largest collection and Mills & Co. three firsts, several seconds and thirds. There were also good exhibits by amateurs.

Horticultural Courses at Columbia

The courses in agriculture offered by Columbia University beginning Sept. 26 included flower culture, tree fruits, introduction to agriculture, soils and fertilizers, field crops, agronomy, and research in soil management. From Oct. 15 to Nov. 23 a special course in poultry will be given All these classes are open to the public without entrance examination and previous education. Each session continues 15 weeks. Classes meet usually twice a week, some in the evening. For full information address the secretary of Columbia University, New York City.

Sept. 24.—The demand for flowers is so large there aren't enough to fill orders. It has been necessary to get flowers from other large cities. So many deaths have occurred from influenza and pneumonia that there is an unprecedented call for all kinds of indoor and outdoor flowers.

A fair quantity of American Beauty Roses comes from out of town and is cleaned up quickly at prices ranging from $6 to $9 a doz. Hybrid tea Roses are in moderate supply at advanced prices, $4 to $12 a hundred. Carnation are steadily increasing. Quality is not very high but they are eagerly sought at $3 to $6 a hundred. Lilies are scarce at 12c. to 16c. and some at 20c. each. Gladioli are not plentiful and are selling well at 95c. a doz. Asters are of poor grade but sell quickly at 3c. to 6c. each. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and are now realizing $1.50 to $2.50 a doz. Dahlias sell well but the heavy rains spoiled them. Late perennial Sunflowers. Heleniums. Pyrethrum uliginosum and all kinds of outdoor flowers are flowers, Heleniums, Pyrethrum uliginotum are moderately plentiful and selling well.

Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston

The regular monthly meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club was held at Horticultural Hall on Sept. 17. The picnic committee made a favorable report. Resolutions on the deaths of George Barker and Carl Denayere were read. Two additional deaths were reported, John Lally and Alexander Lister, and the following were appointed to draw up resolutions: Peter Miller, W. N. Craig, John Ness, Richard Calvert, Duncan Finlayson, and Wm. C. Rust. Though it was the first meeting of the season attendance was good. The at-

Another was a paper by W. N. Craig, "What Can Gardeners and Florists Do to Help Win the War." A lengthy discussion followed, in which Fred E. Palmer, James Wheeler, James Methven, Robert Cameron, William Downs and A. P. Calder took part. There was an interesting and well grown exhibit of Onions from Thomas W. Little of Clifton, Mass. The varieties exhibited were Danvers Yellow Globe, Southport Red Globe, Southport Yellow Globe, Cranston's Excelsior, and Ailsa Craig. It was awarded a cultural certificate of merit. Frederick Cave exhibited St. Regis Raspberry. It was voted to hold a vegetable exhibition at the October meeting and to continue it for two days. The State Board of Agriculture has offered to give money for some prizes. The service flag of the club has ten new stars added, making in all now 37 members with the Colors.

His friends are grieved to learn that John W. Duncan has lost his only daughter Emily, who died of Bright's disease, on Aug. 30, after an illness of only three weeks.

A severe epidemic of Spanish influenza started in Boston about two weeks ago, first among sailors and radio men. Now there are hundreds of cases in the city. Many deaths have occurred. I have never seen the retail stores as busy as they are now. Many have to work all night the orders for funeral work are so heavy. There are not enough flowers coming in to supply the demand. Many wholesale houses are getting supplies from New York and Philadelphia. Penn the Florist supplied practically all the elaborate funeral pieces sent to the funeral of Prof. Jens I. Wassengard of Harvard University and advisor of the Siamese King. Wreaths were sent by the King of Siam, to which was attached the Siamese flag; the Queen of Siam; members of the foreign legations; the legation officers at Washington, and the Siamese students. All the wreaths were elaborate and expensive and were made from foliage. This week Penn has a big decoration of Chrysanthemums and Gladioli at Symphony Hall for the Real Estate Association.

Spokes in the Hub

At Thomas F. Galvin's Park st. store they are wonderfully busy with funeral work. They had a number of orders for the funeral of Postmaster Murray of Boston.

Henry M. Robinson Co. is unusually busy and although stock is short with the increased demand they have a knack of procuring flowers when it is practically impossible to get them in the market.

At Welch Bros they have been so busy during the past week that they had to work up to midnight and all day Sunday to fill orders. R. C.

Chicago, Ill.

For the first time in weeks the market has snap and vim. Conditions in all lines have improved. The shipping trade keeps wholesalers moving rapidly to get stock for their orders. Local retail circles are also active, not so much with funeral work as with social functions. The supply of stock is about enough with nothing to spare. There is no over supply of anything. Stock in general is of better quality due to cooler weather. With the large supply of poor quality Summer stock out of the way, prices in all lines show tendency to advance. The wholesalers and growers believe a good season is at hand. With the amount of glass taken down and the closing of houses on all the large places it means a much shorter supply of stock and better prices. Dealers believe there will not be as much stock to handle but the amount of business in dollars and cents will be well up to if not ahead of the records of former seasons.

American Beauty Roses are in limited supply but what there are sell daily at list prices. In other varieties the supply is moderate. Quality is good with an absence of low grade and open stock. Prices range from $3 to $10 a hundred with Russell and Columbia bringing much higher prices. Gladioli are gradually falling off and the demand is also on the decline, at $2 to $4 a hundred. Buyers' thoughts turn to other, more seasonable stock now that the frosts have brought Autumn styles. Asters are approaching the end of their season, not as many poor ones as formerly. The tall late branching varieties in pink, purple and white are about all the market affords. Prices range from $2 to $4 a hundred for medium and good stock.

Easter Lilies, while not in large supply, are just about enough for the demand. Valley is limited with an increasing demand. Orchids are remarkably scarce; what few there are command highest prices.

Chrysanthemums of all the early varieties are to be had in quantity; the supply is gradually on the increase. Prices range from $1.50 to $4 a doz. Calendula is a noticeable feature on the market. In its color during Summer it held sway but with the arrival of so many yellow 'Mums, sales are on the decline. The first Violets have begun to come in. They are chiefly home grown and of the single varieties. So far, they have not been in much demand. The supply of greens is sufficient for all market requirements.

All preparations are made for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign under the direction of an executive committee, of which Fred Lautenschlager is chairman. Committees have been appointed for every section of the city, as well as for every branch of the florist, nursery and allied trades. When the whistles blow on the morning of the 28th the trade will begin active operations. It is safe to say that the showing will be a credit to all connected with our industry.

The sale of the Anton Then greenhouse stock was one of the principal features of the past week's transactions. This property was recently sold to Wm. Langhout who was later forced into bankruptcy by a Holland bulb firm which he formerly represented here. The plants and all working appliances were sold at auction on Tuesday by order of the United States District Court. Most prices received were low. Boston ferns in 4in. to 10in. pots, about 1500 in all, sold for 10c. each. Cyclamens in 6in. pots, excellent stock, about 3300 in all, went for 11¼c. each. Six hundred pot grown Lilies with about a 4in. growth went for $5 for the lot. Fifteen thousand Freesias well started in flats went very low. Forty-five hundred Cyclamen seedlings sold for $30. To add a finishing touch to the sale 200 tons of coal went for $300. The sum of $3200 was realized from the sale. This will be applied to the creditors of Wm. Langhout. The greenhouses and real estate reverts back to Anton Then who is now advertising the property for rent or sale. More florists were present at the sale than had ever assembled at the Chicago Florists' Club picnics.

George Schumer, son of Peter Schumer, a well-known Carnation grower of Evanston, also a member of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is the first wounded soldier connected with the florist trade to reach this section from France. The local papers at Evanston gave his return much publicity. At present he is at Camp Stewart, Va., where he is recovering from shrapnel wounds. His friends hope for his speedy recovery.

Racine, Wis.

Many changes in the trade have occurred in Racine during the past two years. The Flower Shop conducted by Henry Benz and Roy Auckenbach is now in the hands of its owner Joseph Rehl, whose sister, Miss Rehl, is manager under his direction. They enjoy a large portion of the trade, being popular with a wide circle of friends who spend their money freely for whatever they desire. Roy Auckenbach and Henry Benz are in the Army and from latest reports are now with the Expeditionary forces in France.

Mrs. T. J. Hinchliffe., who has been identified with the trade for many years, having conducted a small store on Wisconsin st., retired from business about Aug. 1, and has disposed of all stock to the Racine Floral Co.

Clark Adams, who conducted a greenhouse and florist business on Washington ave., is no longer identified with the city trade, having entered another line of business. The property which consists of one large house was taken over on Sept. 19 by Christ. Saaby. It is a good stand being close to the Mound Cemetery. While many Wisconsin cemeteries have greenhouses to grow bedding plants to ornament the grounds the laws of the State prohibit all cemetery companies to grow plants or cut flowers for profit.

W. S. Jackson, proprietor of the Lake Shore Greenhouses, who sustained serious loss a year ago by a hurricane, has never rebuilt. The remaining houses have all been taken down and he is at present employed in one of the Chicago seed stores.

The North Side Greenhouses, conducted up to two years ago by John Bourgaise, a report of whose suicide at that time appeared in THE EXCHANGE, have also been torn down. The property is in the hands of a real estate agent, and arrangements are under way to erect several flat buildings thereon.

M. B. Lassen continues in business at 942 Washington ave., where he has established a good trade in the outer section of the city.

Rudolph A. Brux, who over a year ago built three houses at Green and Gould sts., is well pleased with the success achieved so far. He grows Chrysanthemums, Carnations and a line of potted and bedding plants. J. M.

Saving and Serving

By economizing in consumption and with the resultant saving purchasing the Government's war securities the American citizen performs a double duty. The citizen and the Government cannot use the same labor and material; if the citizen uses it, the material and labor cannot be used by the Government. If the citizen economizes in consumption, so much material and labor and transportation space is left free for Government uses. And when the saving effected is lent to the Government more money is thus placed at the disposal of the Government.

The more the people save the more money, labor and materials are left for the winning of the war, the greater and more complete the support given to our fighting men.

Philadelphia

Business has been quiet for the past week with a medium supply of flowers. The supply of Dahlias is not as heavy as usual for this time of year and so far the demand readily absorbs the supply. Asters are on the wane. Carnations are coming in more freely and are commencing to take the place of Asters. In Roses the market is liberally supplied in all grades and colors including American Beauty. The appearance of Columbia, the new pink Rose, has made a favorable impression, and it is predicted will fill the place of Killarney. Chrysanthemums are still confined to the two colors yellow and white. The demand is light. Lilies remain in ample supply with a demand that absorbs. Cattleya orchids are increasing; prices have declined. There are still some Gladioli. Cosmos is in free supply. Calendulas and Delphiniums in limited supply are to be had. There is a sufficient supply of all greens.

The Fourth Liberty Loan drive is now on. This is the first time that the florist trade has been officially listed by the National Liberty Loan campaign. A committee has been appointed, Arthur A. Niessen, chairman, to solicit subscriptions among the florists. Every florist in this district is requested to hold his subscription until one of the committeemen calls upon him or reaches him by letter. The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club takes place Tuesday evening, Oct. 1. There will be election of officers and a talk on "War Times Among the Florists," by J. Otto Thilow.

The Autumn exhibition of the Lansdowne Flower Show Ass'n will be held in the Twentieth Century Club Auditorium, Lansdowne, on Saturday, Oct. 5, from 4 until 10 p.m. Samuel S. Pennock is president of the association. Among the judges will be Mrs. J. Drew-Bear, Frederick J. Michell, J. Otto Thilow, Casper Pennock and Dr. Robert Huey.

The writer noticed among the novelties displayed at Wm. J. Baker's besides Delphiniums and Calendulas bunches of white veined Ivy leaves done up in bundles similar to Galax. For the finer grade of work it is far superior to Galax.

Talk of the Town

John Westcott was entertained by friends at Waretown on Sept. 20 and 21. Wm. F. Gude of Washington and John Walker of Youngstown, Ohio, were among those present.

Herman Zimmer plans closing down over half of his glass following the cutting of Chrysanthemums. The help question is more serious with him than the coal.

Michaelson Bros. have had to vacate their store on 52d street; due to the expiration of the lease. A. M. Michaelson is doing his bit in helping Uncle Sam at Hog Island.

John Albrecht of Pencoyd has his allotted quota of coal on hand, and as usual is as optimistic as of yore. He firmly believes in the future of the business.

Benjamin Gibbs after a little taste of the war industry has returned to his first love, the florist business.

The Century Flower Shop has closed for the duration of the war.

Fighting Hun Gas

Every man, woman and child in this country is urgently appealed to by the Gas Defense Division of the Chemical Warfare Service of the U. S. Army, 19 W. 44th st., New York City, to cooperate in furnishing material for making gas masks for combating German poison gas. The efficiency of these masks depends upon the quality of the carbon they contain and the best carbon for the purpose is obtained from charcoal manufactured from Peach stones and similar material, including the following:

Pits of Peaches, Apricots, Prunes, Plums, Olives, Dates and Cherries; also the shells of Walnuts, Hickory and Brazil nuts and Butternuts.

The Gas Defense Division makes these suggestions:

All pits or seeds should be thoroughly dried in ovens or in the sun. This is very important. Pits from Cherries imported in brines from Italy should not be included; only pits from native Cherries can be used. It is suggested that there are large quantities of Walnuts, Hickory nuts and Butternuts which are now not gathered; these could be collected, the meat extracted and the shells sent to the Army.

All the materials previously specified may be sent together, but no material of any other sort whatever should be included. Two hundred Peach pits or seven pounds of nuts will produce enough carbon for one mask. The campaign in each community is in charge of the Red Cross and full information may be obtained from that organization. As every soldier and every Red Cross or other organization worker near the firing line requires a gas mask, the importance of this work of collecting material for the manufacture of these masks can be seen.

In New York City several of the department and other stores have placed large barrels or other receptacles, painted red, white and blue, in front of their stores, in which people may deposit Peach stones and similar material.

Cleveland, O.

The first acute shortage of stock in many months was experienced in this market the latter part of the week ending Sept. 21. The continued rain prevented cutting outdoor stuff, and the absence of sunshine, together with a temperature bordering on frost, greatly reduced indoor cuts. Frost was predicted for the nights of Sept. 20 and 21, but rain fortunately prevented it. The wet, dreary period seems to be over now (Sept. 23) and according to present indications, bright weather will prevail.

Business is brisk and the market clears up early in the day. Receipts of stock are light but will be much heavier by the end of the week. Excepting Gladioli and Asters outdoor stuff is about over for the season. A few Carnations are being offered but not as yet in sufficient quantity to meet the demand. Roses are steadily improving in quality. The best commercial varieties in nice assortment are to be had. Valley is in small and irregular supply. Cattleyas are very scarce, but C. labiata will soon be ready in sufficient quantity to meet the call. Greens are plentiful, although owing to frequent delays in transit the market is occasionally destitute of New England ferns for brief periods.

The Florists' Club and Women

There is a tradition to the effect that women are not eligible to membership in the Florists' Club. This, however, is not borne out by the by-laws, as nothing is said therein upon the matter. On one occasion a prominent woman member of the trade applied for admission, but was rejected, largely on the ground that there had been no women members of the club during the many years since its foundation. But sentiment appears to be changing in favor of the innovation. At the last meeting the consensus of the members present substantially favored the acceptance of women florists, particularly those engaged in business. Obviously, the same standards of eligibility applied to men should apply to women, and any attempt to classify the latter because of condition should meet with a deserved condemnation.

Is the Women Florists' Club Deceased?

So little has been heard of late of the Women Florists' Club, a once potential body, that the belief exists it is dead. Certainly the present lack of vitality is to be deplored as women are taking a more prominent part in the business world than ever before in history. It cannot be that leadership and initiative are wanting; the presence of so many live-wire women florists disprove that. A possible total membership of half a hundred it would seem should provide ample material for permanent organization. Funds are not lacking nor is an excellent meeting place. What is the matter? Perhaps more could be accomplished by a considerable body of business women working harmoniously together in a body than by the efforts of a few, in the Florists' Club, where their influence would rarely be felt.

The F. T. D. Convention

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery meeting, Oct. 8 and 9, coming as it does midway in the Fourth Liberty Loan, will compel florists to do their loan work at the beginning and the end of the campaign. Indications point to an unprecedentedly large gathering of retail florists at this convention. Certainly no florist keenly alive to the needs of his business should fail to attend, because of its educational value.

A meeting of the committee in charge of the convention arrangements was called by Chairman Brown for Sept. 18, when the various sub-committees reported the progress of their plans. Much stress is laid upon the display of individual house publicity as a leading feature of the meeting, as examination and comparison of the various types of advertisements must prove of great value. Specimens of Mrs. Wilson's publicity will be given a prominent place in this display.

The funeral of Mrs. Myron T. Herrick, wife of the former ambassador to France, on Sept. 18, was an event that called forth great quantities of flowers, giving practically every florist in the city more or less business.

Pebbles on the Beach

Karl Ziechmann is now doing Government work as a metallurgical engineer, being located in Pittsburgh, Pa. F. H. Ziechmann is also in the Government service in Washington, D. C.

F. C. W. Brown and Rube Emsley, of the J. M. Gasser Co., made a business trip to Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 19. Mr. Brown's eldest son, Edgar, has enlisted in the Army.

Michael Bloy, of Detroit, Mich., called upon friends in the trade Sept. 17.

John Michelson, of the A. M. Amling Co., Chicago, made his annual trip to the Sixth City Sept. 18.

Trade visitors: R. E. Blackshaw, of the Ove Gnatt Co., Inc., La Porte, Ind.; A. M. Hanson, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Spurts of funeral work were noticeable in all the flower shops. Flowers for the sick room were also in big demand and now and then a wedding, even though it be of military simplicity, is noted on the florists' order books. Good, long stock for cut flower orders is not sufficient for the demand. Early 'Mums are snapped up at $1 to $3 per doz. wholesale; Carnations are taken immediately at $1 to $3 per 100, as are Cosmos at 25c. per bunch. A few rubrum Lilies still remain at $5 to $6 per 100. Giganteum Lilies are very scarce at $12.50 to $15 per 100. The Rose market is in superb condition so far as quality is concerned; Columbia, Russell and Ophelia are certainly a big three when it comes to the Rose line. The best of these sell at $10 to $15 per 100; seconds at $6 to $8 per 100, and shorts $3 to $4 per 100. American Beauty are also fine at $5 to $35 per 100.

Early frosts have cut heavily into the expected big cut of Dahlias. There are a few of them remaining, however, at $2 to $3 per 100. Corsage flowers are in much lighter demand than good, big stock and will no doubt remain so throughout the season because of the scarcity of the few social functions.

Jottings

Ben Feldner of Zanesville, Ohio, is looking after the pottery trade in this vicinity.

Frank Sacks, well known in the florist trade of Indianapolis 15 years ago, has written his friends that he has struck it rich in the oil fields in Oklahoma. We are glad to hear of his good fortune.

Clarence Thomas of the Circle Flower Store expects to take a trip East and attend the Cleveland F. T. D. meeting en route.

Some of the downtown stores used their automobiles last Sunday and others refrained from doing so. It seems a good plan to use store automobiles only for funeral orders and designate them as such by a large sign "For Funeral Deliveries Only."

There has been a noticeable improvement in out-of-town trade. The shortage of flowers has no doubt caused many of the small cities to appeal to the larger trade centers.

'Mums, while heavily planted in this section, will no doubt be scarce throughout the season. This shortage will be brought on by the fact that a number of growers in the smaller towns have gone out of business and have, therefore, turned buyers instead of producers in the 'Mum line.

John Michaelson of the E. C. Amling Co. has been visiting the wholesalers and retailers in Central Indiana.

A number of members of the flower fraternity will be busy with the Liberty Loan campaign and this, together with the general agitation, will no doubt cause a slowing up in all lines of business for some time.

Albert Clampitt has accepted a position as chauffeur with A. Wiegand's Sons Co. in N. Illinois st.

It is generally predicted that Carnations will be the best property they have been for years and an average price of $1.50 per doz. will no doubt be maintained throughout the coming season.

Tomlinson Hall Market is fairly well attended these days and a great amount of stock is sold there at wholesale early in the day. The 'Mum season is about to open there and a much bigger volume of business will be carried on.

I. B.

Portland, Ore.

Although it is already Sept. 19 we are still having hot, dry weather. The only cool part of the day is shortly before sunrise as the nights are generally very warm. Fuel is about all that we can really save as the stock is plentiful and the usual waste accompanies it. The variety of stock is about the same. 'Mums arriving are generally poor and there is little fancy stock in sight. Roses are excellent and plentiful. Carnations are sluggish in demand but the new crop looks well. Gladioli are still with us and most of these are sold. Business generally has lacked pep, and was there not a really busy day intermingled now and then we would hardly know that the Winter season is at our door.

Shows and Meetings

The State Fair opens Sept. 23. Effort has been made to have a larger display in the flower section than ever. Clyde Clancey has spent a great deal of time creating interest among the growers in this section so that in another year substantial prizes will be offered by the State. The Multnomah County fair is also open this week and for once the weather has been fine.

The September meeting of the Floral Society was held with a fair attendance. The annual ladies' night was dispensed with because of war conditions. It was voted that all members called to the Colors be relieved of the payment of dues and continued in good standing until they return. Albert Rahn spoke briefly on what was going on in Spokane, also touched somewhat on the prospects of our business in the near future. John Young, formerly of Young & Lester, was present. The matter of a credit rating was given the once over in order that at some near future date the trade will have a local and shipping credit rating book second to none in the country. E. H. White showed some of his new seedling Dahlias and also some of the new ones from Europe. H. E. Weed, an authority, told how to grow Peonies, what kinds to grow and what not to do. Mr. Bacher having been told by a Swiss tourist that all that is needed to beautify the Columbia is flowers, prepared a paper which has been sent to the authorities, drawing attention to this fact and explaining a good method of procedure. He states that we have an abundance of native flora and if the right steps are taken the plan will surely be a success.

H. Niklas.

PANSIES

PANSY PARK PERFECTION—Is a mixture of more than 50 distinct thoroughbred varieties and sub-varieties of Giant Show and Fancy Pansies some new and not found in any other mixture. It contains a good percentage of red, bronze and brown in many shades and fancy varieties, in a wide range of rich and rare colors and markings, the colors are in the right proportions for the retail trade. I have made the growing of Pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 50 years and have received thousands of testimonials from amateurs and florists in all sections of the country, many of whom say that my Pansies are the best in all respects that they ever had, for example: "The Pansy plants arrived in best possible condition and were strong, sturdy, well rooted. I used to buy the very best seeds and plants possible. Have bought from you for the past 8 years and have never been able to produce anything to equal yours. I have never seen such a variety of colors. C. C. Wonneman, The Florist, Mexico, Mo. I have the largest stock of field-grown plants for the Fall trade in America, and they are the best that my long experience and improved methods can produce. The seeds were sown thinly and evenly broadcast in sandy soil, which causes extra fine roots. Prices; from August sown seed: 1000, $4.50; 5000, $21.50; 10,000, $40.00; 25,000, $98.00. During the first two weeks of September a great improvement was noted in business, probably due to the cool weather. A few more weeks of such weather would make a wonderful improvement in greenhouse stock. Ferns, Vinca Minor, Begonia Chatelaine, Hydrangeas, Cyclamen and P. obconica are moving in large bunches. The retail florists report good business, plenty of cut flowers to work with: Asters, Dahlias, some short stemmed Carnations, Snapdragons and Roses are showing improvement.

Manure Storing Experiments

British experiments by Dr. E. J. Russel and E. H. Richards in handling manure as reported in the Journal of the Agricultural Society have brought out some interesting facts. Losses are at their minimum when the manure is least exposed to the air, for air hastens decomposition and also reduces the quantity of nitrogen and dry matter, especially as the temperature rises toward and above 80 deg. In commenting on methods of storing the authors say:

"Unfortunately, satisfactory results cannot be secured by storage in heaps. No matter how carefully the heaps may be constructed, there is always a loss of nitrogen and never an accumulation of ammonia. Therefore, the ideal method of storage would be the watertight closed tank, to which access of air could be prevented. Needless to say, this method is not always practicable, and when it is not, the next best method must be practiced. If the manures can be kept undisturbed under the beasts, there is less loss than if it is removed regularly and placed in heaps.

"When it must be removed daily, there is nothing for it but to make the heap in the manner best adapted to keep down loss, that is to say, thoroughly compacted; and no less important is it to store the heap under cover. If left exposed to weather, the loss of dry matter is increased by 8 per cent., that of ammonia by anything from 10 to 33 per cent., and also a considerable loss of total nitrogen. Field experiments confirm the conclusion that manure stored under shelter is more valuable than that stored in the open, and show that even a slight shelter is beneficial."

Eliminate The Fuel Wasting Factors
A boiler with bulky soot accumulating surfaces causes enormous fuel losses. Faulty coal wasting boilers that cannot be kept clean and which constantly keep you in trouble can no longer be tolerated.
Meet the high cost and limited supply of fuel with Kroeschell Boilers. These highly effective fuel-saving boilers will make every dollar you spend for fuel do its utmost.

Correcting an Incorrect Rumor About Burnham Boiler Shipments

SOMEONE, somehow, secured the impression that the Government had commandeered so much of our stock of iron, that we had to stop making greenhouse boilers.

Then someone hearing that, straight way told someone else that we had not a single Burnham to sell.

Then someone else told someone else—and the usual thing followed.

Here then, is the truth:

Even if it had been so, that the Government took all our iron for war purposes, it would'nt have made a bit of difference about your getting your boiler.

We made that boiler and hundreds of others, months and months ago.

This year, exactly as every other year, our store house has plenty of boilers, piled up there ready for you florists.

So if you want one, and want it quick, we can ship it just that quick.

Winter Coming and Not Enough Coal—Then What?

I Have Found a Way Out with my Specially Constructed

KEROSENE HEATERS

From February to May last year these KEROSENE HEATERS, placed in my boilers, kept my houses warm.

It is a proven fact that this means of heating is 100% better than any other method. It is quicker, cleaner and, above all, a tremendous time saver.

The

HEID KEROSENE HEATER

Needs no Electric Motor, no Air Pressure. There are no Ashes to Remove and it can be used in Any make Boiler

With a few lbs. of coal you cannot heat water, but with 5 gallons of oil in my KEROSENE HEATER you can.

Are you convinced? Don't forget this:

You know that from now on you will get only 50% of your coal, but you are not limited in buying oil.

When writing give height and width of feeding doors, also height of chimney.

Another Big Factor

The use of THE HEID KEROSENE HEATER will warm up your hot houses in one hour on a rainy day—no half day wait.

You can see this HEATER working successfully for me any time by appointment. I will be pleased to explain everything to you. Information will also be sent through the mail, but call personally, if at all possible.

National Publicity Campaign

One of our Cincinnati friends sent us clipping from a newspaper in that city overing the following item: "We don't eed flowers to win the war," said officials f local draft board No. 3, in refusing to rant exemption to Richard G. Kootz, anager of a floral business. "We can't re flowers at the Germans and win the war, although may be they would prefer flowers to bullets," said Chairman Zimmerman. "We can leave the floral usiness to our crippled heroes when they eturn and to women."

In contrast is the following, clipped rom the report of an address by Miss laude Wetmore, national chairman of he National League for Woman's Service, at an enthusiastic campaign meeting held at the Hotel Biltmore, New ork, on Sept. 18: "We have had a onderful opportunity lately. It was iven us by the florists of the country, 0,000 strong. They gave us the opportunity to be their spokesmen at the bedides of the sick soldiers. They asked s to give to them the message which they were sending and they asked our women o be the ones to transmit that word of ympathy which is so wonderfully expressed and represented by a flower. All ver the country today, the florists of his country are giving, free of expense, housands of flowers to the sick soldiers s they are returning home. To me it is very wonderful and very beautiful hought, and I am sure that it is one of nterest to all of you today."

And this, by Lieut.-Col. E. G. Northington, commandant of the reconstruction hospital, Fort Douglas, Utah, referring to a generous donation of flowers ade to the post hospital by the Miller loral Co., of Farmington: "There is othing so cheerful, so brightening in heir influence upon sick people, as flowrs, and the offer of the Farmington rowers, to supply flowers for the soldiers ho may be confined to beds and wards f the post hospital, is deeply appreciated y Colonel Northington and all members f his staffs of doctors and nurses, as ell as by every patient."

Few among our florists have any idea f the many stupid and ill considered tatements our promotion bureau is called pon to challenge and upset, or the hought of what might be, were we obliged o do without our organized publicity ervice in these times, would be more genral. The public is ready to admit that here is a better use for our flowers right ere at home than to fire them at the nemy, and the more the public sees of ur slogan, "Say It with Flowers," and eads of the work the florists are doing, he less willing will it be to believe that owers can be really considered as nonssential.

Let not anyone think that our publicity work begins and ends with our agazine advertising. Our bureau is alled upon to organize and make effecive much outside assistance which can nly be obtained through ourselves being rganized.

Are you, Mr. Reader, not yet a part f our organization? Have you subcribed to our publicity campaign fund? f you have not, why not? Is there any art of our work which has not been exlained to your satisfaction? The obect of our weekly articles so kindly pubished for us, and for you, by our trade apers is to let you know what we are oing, and we are urgently requesting very florist who has not already subcribed to come forward with his "bit" ow, the time when we most surely need t, if we are to carry out the plans and xtend our usefulness. We are still short f the required amount of money to comlete our 1918 program, but with just a ittle effort on the part of those our work s to benefit, we can go ahead under full ail. Don't be half-hearted; don't be hought a non-essential.

Buffalo, N. Y.

For the past two weeks stock has not been any too plentiful, except for some outdoor flowers, such as Asters, Marigolds, etc. The cloudy, rainy weather of the past ten days shortened up the supply of everything. There is a scarcity of Roses and other indoor flowers.

Prices on Roses and Lilies ruled high. Some choice Russells, Sunbursts, Ophelias and other varieties are in the market in good quality; in fact, they are in their Winter form. The supply of American Beauty is fair and these, too, sold readily at satisfactory prices. Gladioli are not plentiful and those which are received sell quickly. Floral work kept the florists on the jump, as there has been an unusual demand for this line lately.

Boosting the Loan

Buffalo florists are playing a prominent part in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. The following members of the trade have been appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions: W. H. Eiss, Jacob Weise, S. A. Anderson, W. J. Palmer, J. H. Rebstock, Al Reichert, Robert Scott, Edward Werrick, Charles Schoenhut and W. H. Sievers.

The quota of the local florists is $85,000. The committee meets daily at Liberty Loan headquarters, where patriotic speakers keep up the enthusiasm of the workers in the campaign, and Liberty Loan posters are conspicuously displayed in the show windows of all the flower shops, and everything is being done to eclipse the fine showing made by the florists in the last campaign. Employers and employees alike are subscribing and are putting the question: "Have you bought your bond?" to every customer.

Automobile Stolen

Miss Bessie Bellanca, one of the owners of the Colonial Flower Shop, had her automobile stolen recently from in front of the Victoria Theater, this city, where she was doing Red Cross work. She has been using the machine for Red Cross purposes for some time. The car is a Buick roadster, the license number being 480,000. The auto belonged to her brother who is with the Colors.

The weather has been pleasant the past week and business has been good. Perhaps the cool sunshiny days have helped some, but most of the work is funeral designs. No flower is plentiful except short Roses of which there is an abundance. Everything on the market is selling at good prices, not nearly enough to meet the demand. Lilies, arriving in large quantities, clean up well at $15 per 100. The demand for them is exceptionally large as no other tall flower except American Beauty Roses is to be had. Medium grade American Beauty sell best; many specials are left on hand. The top price has been $35 per 100. The demand for Dahlias is large, even more so than other years. The flowers are much larger and in more variety. This city has developed into one of the best Dahlia markets in the country. Dahlias may be used for so many different purposes that no store can be up-to-date without them.

Some very beautiful window displays are seen along with colored foliage plants and ribbons. Asters, Gladioli and other outdoor flowers are almost over for this season. There was at no time this year an over supply of Asters. Gladioli did have a glut period, but present prices obtained make up for any that did not sell earlier in the season. Some new Carnations are very good. The demand is large. The first of the early 'Mums are now coming in. They find ready sale at good prices. Buyers are glad to get something new these days as they are tired of Summer flowers. Greens are in heavy supply with light demand.

At Home and Abroad

R. J. Blackshaw of the Ove Gnatt Co. was a caller on the trade this week.

Mrs. John Paul of Cumberland, Md., also was a visitor.

H. A. Irwin of Monessen, Pa., had a large amount of funeral work the last of the week and had his truck make several trips to town to get stock. When a soldier from Monessen is killed in action Mr. Irwin places a memorial wreath on the service flag which hangs in the center of the city.

Geo. McCallum, who is in training at Great Lakes, Ill., has been confined to the base hospital with pneumonia. The latest news is that he is recovering nicely.

John Dietz, of the John Kiel Co., East Liverpool, Ohio, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife who died suddenly last Saturday.

Geo. Frank left last Sunday for New York to attend the funeral of his uncle.

E. J. Malone of Cannonsburg, Pa., was a visitor last week.

A. Lorch is cutting fine Carnations for early flowers.

Lancaster, Pa.

In the retail trade funeral work has again come to the rescue and the shops have all had their share of the work.

King Frost was scheduled for the morning of Sept. 28 but touched things so lightly that no visible damage was done to any growing plants, and we can look for a few weeks longer of outdoor flowers with their colors deepened by the cool nights, which is a blessing, as stock is not over plentiful.

Our farmer florists have their Tobacco all housed and after the heavy rains of the past week are busy sowing Wheat to feed the world for 1919, with the greenhouses getting just what attention they must have. Elmer Weaver, our club president is in this class and has just finished cropping five acres of Sweet Corn at a price that for the labor expended puts the greenhouses in sixth class.

Ira Landis is taking up his acres of Gladiolus bulbs. He finds it "some job" as they run into Liberty Loan figures.

Mr. White, representing the Skinner Irrigation System, was in Lancaster a few days and found a large number of his firm's system installed in this section, the latest being for Celery growing on a hillside.

Andrew Irwin, a former employee of the writer's, later in business at Palmyra, and lastly at Lincoln, Neb., writes from "somewhere in France," saying that the Army is all right and that he is glad to be able to have some part in our American victories, but that he sometimes wishes he could have a few days in a greenhouse just for variety.

Liberty Loan

The Liberty Loan drive is on full head and Lancaster is going over the top as she always does. Mrs. Albert M. Herr as secretary of the Women's Committee has work enough for six and Albert M. Herr has some job holding back his Boy Scouts for the last week of the drive.

The recent ruling of the Fuel Commission allowing anyone to get all the buckwheat or smaller sizes of coal for either domestic or steam use they may want is going to help out some of our florists to run a little closer to their full capacity.

There has hardly been a holiday when the stores have been more rushed than last week. It was common for florists to work until midnight on funeral work. The shortage of blooms was of course the big handicap in rushing out the orders and prevented taking more. When local wholesalers were sold out and the small greenhouses cut clean, orders were placed in Boston, and such prices paid as $8 per 100 for Asters; $8 to $12 for Carnations, and $15 up for Roses. A visit on Saturday evening found the stores looking unusually bare of flowers and with many orders ahead for Sunday funerals. Customers were being turned away unless a single flower or potted plant was wanted. Asters were retailing for $1.50 per doz.; Carnations $1 to $2, and Roses $3 up. A little improvement in weather the past week over the week previous had a tendency to prolong the outdoor crop of Asters, Gladioli and other garden blooms. Salvia, Cosmos and Calendulas were pressed into service to help fill out in design work.

The usual prices asked by the local wholesalers the past week were as follows: Carnations $2 to $4; Asters $1 to $4; Roses $6 to $18; Lilies $15 per 100; 'Mums $1.50 to $3 per doz. Hardy ferns and Galax also Magnolia leaves were bought in large quantities from Boston, the past week as the only wholesaler was completely sold out.

Providence, R. I.

Business has more than "come back." Every store has all the orders it could care for. The daily cut of local growers' stock is too short to cover the demand. Prices are higher than ever before for this season. Roses bring $5 to $16; Carnations $5 to $6; Asters $2 to $4 per 100. A few 'Mums are to be had at $1.50 to $3 per doz.

Our growers are at their wits' end to find substitutes for Azaleas and other plants usually imported. Of one thing they are confident, which is that there will be the usual demand; the puzzle is how to meet it. The demand for funerals and other occasions keeps stock cleaned up. The Bellvue ave. stores are preparing to close up. At the Rhode Island Nurseries home propagated stock is taking the place of that usually imported. Mr. Vanicer reports no falling off of orders on account of war conditions, but rather a gain.

ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

NASHUA, N. H.—O. W. Wiig has been engaged as superintendent and foreman by Geo. E. Buxton, at the latter's extensive greenhouse establishment on Concord st. Mr. Wiig, who is well known as a floriculturist, has had wide experience, his training abroad including employment at the Kew Gardens, England, and at the famous Baron Rothschild gardens at Paris, France. He has also been with J. B. Keller & Sons, Rochester, N. Y., and J. W. Howard, Somerville, Mass.

American Dahlia Society Exhibit

Additional Notes to last week's report

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y. were mentioned in our last issue as showing only 100 blooms in the class for singles, as they were not able to stage all their exhibits till late Tuesday. We noted later that they were awarded a special prize for general collections of Dahlias, also a special for display of 1917 introductions of Dahlias, a special on Gladioli and for blooms of Gladiolus "Golden West."

James H. Bowman, Paterson,N. J. was awarded the American Dahlia Society's first prize for "Bowl or vase decoration of Peony flowered or decorative Dahlias, any foliage."

Washington, D. C.

Flowers of all kinds find ready sale. All varieties are scarce so it is anything but a buyer's market. Flowers suitable for funeral work are short because Asters are completely off the market. Dahlias are not coming in usual quantities and Easter Lily stocks have been cut considerably. Growers located in distant points no longer find it desirable to ship stocks for sale here because of uncertain express service. It has been found difficult to get Easter Lilies from Eastern points to Washington in salable shape so the growers have stopped catering to the Washington market.

Chrysanthemums are not to be had in appreciable quantities. Those offered are not of good quality. They are bought up, however, because every flower counts. More Roses are to be had than last week. White Roses are more plentiful, although not yet enough to fill orders. So are Hadley and Russell. Ophelia is good and sells well. Some good Wellingtons are to be had. This seems to be a desirable Rose and meets with ready sale. Orchids are bringing 75c. each. Greens are more plentiful than for some time.

In the 'Mum House

Did you ever receive a shipment of cut Chrysanthemums, good flowers, stems and foliage, but just alive with aphis at the necks? This sometimes happens even to good growers. The pest gets a foothold while you are looking the other way and before the trouble is realized the flowers are so far advanced that fumigation or spraying is out of the question. The only way to prevent this trouble is to fumigate or spray faithfully right up to the time the first petals appear. If you keep the stock perfectly clean up to that time everything will be all right afterward. If you haven't made up your mind just where to overwinter the stock plants, consider a deep coldframe, one in which it isn't likely to freeze much with proper protection. I would far rather have the stock in a frame up to about the first of February than carry it along in a dry house or one where it gets too warm for the plants. A good rest does the stock good, but the roots must be kept moist at all times. Even a little frost won't hurt them, but let them dry out a few days and the life will be gone. A good way to do is to plant the cut down stock in 3in. deep flats, label properly and take at once to the frames. You will be ready with the early ones pretty soon now.

Primula malacoides

If wanted for cut flowers you can't do better than to plant the stock out on a sunny bench in a cool house. Don't attempt to grow this sort warm; it can't be done, but when grown cool and given plenty of root room it will pay the retail grower as well as anything else in the house. Plants in pots as soon as ready should be shifted and never permitted to crowd in the least on the benches. From now on these Primulas will make their heaviest growth and if not watched properly the best of them will be ruined.

Chinese Primulas

To grow specimen plants of the Chinese Primulas a 5in. or 6in. pot is not too large for the best results, but we appreciate them more around Christmas when in a 4in. pot and full of flower. They make better material that way for the filling or making up of baskets, hampers or pans. The larger a plant and the smaller the pot the more attention required on the part of the man who does the growing. With stock partly potbound light doses of liquid cow manure are of great help. Once every few days is enough. It means better foliage, better flowers on plants grown in small sized pots, but don't neglect plenty of space between the plants.

Carnations

Get those supports in place on the benches, especially if you still grow Enchantress White, a wonderful sort still. With most growers it has a weak stem. It needs support of some kind; in fact, you couldn't grow any Carnations today unsupported, no matter what the particular variety, and make money on them. Keep on stirring up the surface soil between the plants, just lightly; if you go down too deeply roots will be inured. If you made use of good soil there isn't any reason to feed the stock as early as this. If you didn't have a liberal dose of manure in the soil when the benches were filled, a light topdressing of bonemeal worked into the surface may be applied now. Usually there is enough nourishment in the soil until the first good crop of flowers has been cut. Don't make the mistake in dosing the Carnation benches with a lot of fertilizer now. Rather pay more attention to cultivation, watering and supporting the plants properly. Get the sun to strike the soil between the plants. Keep the surface worked over lightly. Don't water when the soil is wet nor let the plants suffer for the lack of moisture. Bear always in mind you are growing the stock in just a few inches of soil. Success or failure depends a great deal on the man in charge.

Freesias

Matters haven't changed any since the first part of the Summer so what was said then in the "Week's Work" about Freesias is true now. More of them will be grown this coming Winter under glass than ever before to take the place of French Romans and Paperwhites. While both of these may reach us for late forcing and maybe more Paperwhites than we can use to advantage, Roman Hyacinths will not be plentiful. By all means plant Freesias and keep it up as long as solid bulbs can be had. The first planted ones, by this time 4in. to 5in. high, should be in the sunniest spot in the Carnation house. Whether you have them up to the glass or 15ft. away from it, it doesn't matter much if the house has had a coat of white paint this Summer and the glass is clean. The trouble with shelf culture is that the plants are likely to be neglected and dry out too often. For extra early forcing the plants in pots or pans will be best and the early planted ones will flower for Christmas if given about 54 deg. or so during the end of November and early part of December. But you can't do any forcing with stock where the bulbs have been planted as late as September. All you get out of such will be a lot of leaves; it is far better to keep such plants in a cool house and have them come into flower later on. If Roman Hyacinths don't get here by the middle of October they are likely to be too late for Christmas flowering, so in the meantime pay attention to Freesias. It will pay.

Ramblers in Pots

If you are fortunate enough to have a nice lot of Ramblers in pots, take the best of care of the stock. With no importation these great Easter Roses will not be over plentiful. Such as have been grown in pots during the Summer, while having made less growth, are by far the best for early flowering and the amount of flowers on the canes. In early October it is well to begin to harden the wood, keep the plants a little on the dry side and if a rainy spell should set in lay the pots on their sides. It is best to have the wood well hardened before heavy frosts are the rule. As soon as cold weather sets in bring the plants to a coldframe. If not deep enough to stand the plants upright they may be laid down. Cover the frame well and by the first week in January bring the stock into a cold house where it should remain for a few weeks. Field grown Baby Ramblers should be lifted after the first heavy frost. They are best off if potted up at once. If given a liberal sized pot, heavy soil and potted firmly, the plants may go to a frame. With just a little fair weather the roots will keep on growing for some time. This is of benefit for such stock will respond quicker next February when wanted than plants consisting of dormant stock with half dried up wood which has to be pruned back considerably. Don't fail to keep the freshly potted plants well watered.

Kerosene for Greenhouse Heating

On Thursday, Sept. 26, a representative of THE EXCHANGE called on Frank Heid, 287 South Broadway, Tarrytown, N. Y., to take a look at a block of everblooming Fuchsia Christmas Red and selected strains of ever flowering Begonias which he is growing both at Flushing, L. I., and Tarrytown for Christmas sales. While there the representative had an excellent opportunity to inspect the operation of the Heid Kerosene Heater which Mr. Heid invented and is putting on the market. He is using it to supply heat for the hot water apparatus in his own greenhouses.

The boiler in use in Mr. Heid's greenhouse is an old style, Lord & Burnham hot water heater, made some 20 years ago. The flue cleaning door is closed and sealed, as is also the ash pit door. The heating door was wide open. Just inside and at the bottom of this doorway the kerosene heater is placed. The pipe drafts of the furnace were wide open. Kerosene oil is fed into the heater through a ⅛in. pipe, through which it is brought from a tank or barrel of oil placed above and out of doors. The flow of oil is controlled by a valve placed in the ⅛in. pipe.

In operating this invention a little oil is first let into the heater and lighted with a piece of blazing paper or any other material. As the burning oil gives increasing heat the supply of oil is increased and the flames are carried back into the furnace.

THE EXCHANGE representative took a chair and sat directly in front and close to the flames coming from the burning oil in the heater. He could see no smoke nor detect any smell whatever coming from the flame, because there was no back draft, the flames being carried steadily inward. In its workings the device as far as could be seen is simplicity itself. When the fire is once started, the water warmed to the circulating point, or the steam producing temperature, and the flow of oil regulated to suit the weather, the apparatus needs no further attention until there is a decided change in the outdoor temperature. The fire is extinguished by cutting off the supply of oil. It takes, in Mr. Heid's furnace, about 2½ gallons of oil to heat water to the circulating point, after that about ½ gallon an hour to maintain the heat in ordinary weather.

It was a cool, rainy day when THE EXCHANGE representative called, but in about 1¾ hours after the heater was started the water was circulating freely in the hot water pipes. Apparently this heating device can be used in all hot water and steam heaters.

Iris Root Borer Again

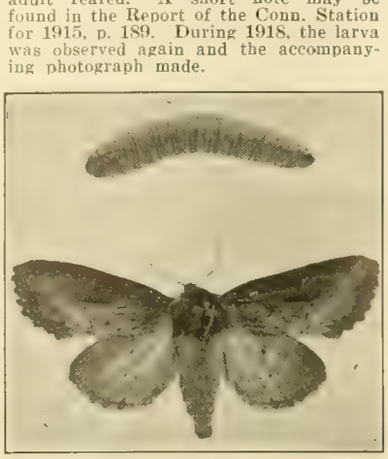
I have read with interest the article by Bertrand H. Farr in THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE (p. 451) regarding the Iris Root Borer (Macronoctua onusta, Grote). Mr. Farr is in error when he states that it is one of the hawk moths. The name "hawk moth" is applied to the members of the family Sphingidæ, which are also called "Humming Bird moths." Macronoctua onusta shown in the accompanying figure (see illus.) belongs to the family Noctuidæ, the cutworms. All of these are night-flyers.

Though I have not made a special study of the life history of the Iris Borer, the statements of Mr. Farr are so much at variance with the observations of other workers that I wish to call attention to some of the published records in connection with this insect. An adult in the station collection was reared from a nearly mature larva collected July 30, 1915. This larva pupated and the adult emerged in October. Mr. A. F. Winn (see Canadian Entomologist, vol. 46, p. 296) observed the moth to lay eggs the latter part of September at Westmount, Que., in cracks near the base of the leaves of German Iris, and some eggs were deposited between the leaves where the edges overlap. Mr. Winn believes that in nature most of the eggs are laid underneath the edges of these overlapping leaves near the base and that the insect passes the Winter in this manner.

Mr. Henry Bird of Rye, N. Y., (Journal New York Entomological Society, vol. X, p. 215) states that the larva bores in the native Iris (I. versicolor), the adults emerge in September, and that the larvæ are more highly parasitized than other species of Noctuidæ which have come under his observation. Apparanetly Dr. Roland Thaxter (Canadian Entomologist, vol 23, p. 35) was the first to record the species from Iris versicolor, where he found it at Kittery, Me. Arthur Gibson (Canadian Entomologist, vol. 36, p. 355, and 34th Report of Ontario Entomological Society, p. 49) records the rearing of several adults which emerged in September.

Perhaps the most complete account of this insect which so far has been published occurs in the 27th Report of the New York State Entomologist, p. 52, 1912, by Dr. E. P. Felt. An illustration of the adult appears on plate 17, fig. 3, of the report just mentioned. Dr. Felt also published a brief note in the 30th Report, p. 71.

The present author has received material of this borer at various times (see Report Conn. Agr. Expt. Station for 1906, p. 306) but not until 1915 was an adult reared. A short note may be found in the Report of the Conn. Station for 1915, p. 189. During 1918, the larva was observed again and the accompanying photograph made.



Macronoctua onusta Grote (Iris Root borer)

The upper cut shows the full grown larva, the lower the adult moth. Both are natural size

From all of the observations and data gathered it seems probable that the adults emerge and lay their eggs in the Fall and that these eggs hatch the following Spring. Of course, it is possible that more than one generation occurs in Mr. Farr's latitude, or perhaps the eggs which he has observed as being deposited at the tips of the leaves are laid by some other species. Here is a chance for careful investigation. It is hoped that some entomologist may be able to carry out such studies with a large amount of material in order to determine the exact facts in regard to the life history of this interesting species. Then we may more intelligently discuss the subject of remedies. In Conn. the injury is fairly common, but occasional, and only a small amount of material can be found in any single Iris plantation. Most of the larvæ which we have secured fail to produce adults.

W. E. BRITTON,
State Entomologist, Conn.

Why The Poor Dahlias?

From many parts of the country come reports that Dahlias this year have not been up to the standard; in fact that in many cases the blooms have been disappointing and the foliage unsatisfactory. Various explanations have been offered, among them being that the trouble was due to white fly, to a disease of the roots, or to the prolonged cool spell. THE EXCHANGE would be pleased to hear from Dahlia growers as to the results obtained this year and to receive information as to the cause of the trouble, from their oservation and experience. Such an interchange of ideas would surely prove interesting and valuable to THE EXCHANGE readers.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

President: F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; First Vice-President: W. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md.; Second Vice-President: David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.; Secretary-Treasurer: C. E. Kendel, 2010 Ontario St., Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary: Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich

George Dicks, son of S. B. Dicks, both gentlemen well known to the seed trade of this country, has been appointed submanager by the directors of Cooper, Taber & Co., London.

Seedsmen and the Draft

With reference to the telegraphic dispatch from the Seedsmen's War Service at Washington, relative to the seed industry and mentioned in our Seed Trade notes, page 493, of last issue, we understand that same has been put in Class 3 in the preference list of industries, as follows:

"Seeds:—Plants (establishments) engaged principally in assembling, cleaning, treating, preparing, storing and shipping seeds for growing food and feed, and for growing medicinal and chemical plants, excluding flower seeds."

While this classification is to be considered by the local draft boards in the "work or fight" rule and, in fact, in any matter pertaining to the employment of clerks in seed establishments in their relation to the draft, it does not follow that a man in such employment may not be called, but the classification referred to should have a bearing and should receive consideration.

European Notes

Tosti's gem "Good-bye Summer" is singularly appropriate at the present time, for while we have some gloriously bright intervals between storms the night temperature is reminiscent of March and already light frosts are reported. This will serve to check the too luxuriant late growth on Radish and Mangel crops which are still standing. As regards the former, late threshings are inevitable this season, and this is always a very troublesome affair. An even greater cause of anxiety is the absence on military duty of the men who understand the work of threshing this article, which is much more difficult than many seedsmen imagine. The English system of allowing the seed to remain in the straw until the following Summer is in every respect, both as regards the seed and the crop it produces, the most satisfactory. In any case we must ask our friends to be as patient as possible.

Second Lieut. F. A., Albert H. Mangelsdorf, of Atchison, Kan., was a recent caller. He was on his way from duty in France to a course of special training at Avonmouth, near Bristol. He reported a very busy time in France, and was in the best possible health and spirits.

Dutch and French Bulb Shipments

Never before in the history of America's trade in European bulbs were the importers kept in such utter ignorance of the situation as they are today. The large firms may guess approximately what they will receive, and with good luck may get some or all of the bulbs here in October. At present it looks as if French and Dutch bulbs will make a "dead heat" in the trans-Atlantic race, although advices from England inform us that some Dutch bulbs are already loaded, and if they have not been held up in some port, should reach here this week. If Dutch growers have shipped via England, without appointing someone there to look after the transshipment, it is unknown when they will get here. Possibly this may be the case with some of the importers of small lots for their own growing, and if such is true, I should be sorry for the future business that that Dutchman will get next year. Most of the large importers, I presume, have forwarding agents in England. The delay in French shipments is seemingly due to having missed two sailings at a time when steamers were most needed. One boat, I understand, was commandeered by the French Government; the other took fire in New York harbor previous to her Eastern trip. No advice has as yet been received whether the steamer which is to bring the greater bulk of French bulbs has sailed or not, so I cannot see any French bulbs here before Oct. 20 at the earliest.

All Eastern importers will no doubt arrange for the selection and prompt handling of their cases on the docks, and I predict those who have placed orders through these channels will receive their bulbs far in advance of those who bought direct from the producer. Nemo.

Dutch and French Bulbs

Reports from several reliable bulb importers are to the effect that at least three ships with Holland bulbs on board are on their way here. The time of their arrival at an Atlantic port is conjectural, but it is believed that these bulbs may be confidently expected to arrive, as all cablegrams to importers in this city are to that effect. Cablegrams from France, confirmed by letters, give assurance that French bulbs also, unless the unexpected happens, will arrive.

Frank C. Woodruff of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, 82-84 Dey st., returned on Thursday of last week from an eight weeks' visit to the Pacific Coast, being accompanied on his trip by Mrs. and Miss Woodruff. Mr. Woodruff devoted nearly all his time during this trip to inspecting the seed crops in the seed growing sections of the Pacific Coast States. After careful observation and study of the whole situation, Mr. Woodruff has arrived at the conclusion that aside from a few items such at Peas, Cabbage seeds, a few varieties of Beans, Turnip and Onion seeds and a few other unimportant kinds, the prospect for seeds is betier than last year, and on most items contracts will be filled 100 per cent. There is, however, considerable uncertainty as to vine seeds, since these were planted late, and unless the growers have an unusually prolonged Fall, there will probably be a shortage of those seeds.

William M. Hunt & Co., 37 Warren st., have added a nursery department to their seed, bulb and horticultural supplies business, and are now mailing out a list of shade, ornamental and fruit trees and shrub which they are offering for Autumn planting.

It is reported that all fertilizers will advance in price some time this month. This applies more especially to tankage, blood, sheep manure, and the several grades of ground bone. The fortunate individuals who stocked up with these fertilizers last Spring have probably, it is said, saved themselves between $5 and $15 a ton on these fertilizers.

Burnett Bros., 92 Chambers st., have begun their "Harvest Home" window display with an exhibition of ears of Longfellow field Corn on the stalks.

Chicago Seed Trade

Vaughan's "Book for Florists" is ready and is being mailed to all customers and others who may write for it.

There is nothing new in the import bulb situation. Seedsmen and dealers are patiently awaiting developments from day to day.

The news that the Dutch Government has ordered bulb growers in that country to reduce their acreage for 1919 crops has aroused much interest among the bulb dealers here.

The Albert Dickinson Co., seedsmen, silenced the guns of the State of Illinois temporarily at least, by the Yankee trick of beating 'em to it. Both the State and the Albert Dickinson Co. are claiming land which was once the site of the old Illinois and Michigan canal. The strip lies close to Thirty-fifth st. and Ashland ave., and since the city has developed, and the canal has been filled up, it is worth a heap of money. The Albert Dickinson Co. through their attorney, Eugene H. Garnett, filed an injunction suit in the United States Court Friday. A similar suit was filed in the State Circuit Court 59 minutes later. Each faction seeks to enjoin the other from entering upon the disputed land. Under court practice the court first attaining jurisdiction in such a matter retains it. The case will come up for hearing before Federal Judge Carpenter this week.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., is in New York this week on business.

Leonard H. Vaughan has been appointed by the Chicago Ass'n of Commerce as chairman of the draft exemption committee that will consider claims from an occupational standpoint. The recommendation of the committee will be attached to questionnaires, it being felt that a recommendation by a trade committee will carry more weight than one made by a firm or individual. Mr. Vaughan's appointment is for the selective service committee of Sub-division No. 22, which embraces seedsmen, florists, greenhouse builders and Onion set dealers. The committee will not pass on dependency claims.

Wm. Langhout, a well-known local representative of various Holland bulb growing firms, had a hearing before Judge Carpenter in the United States Court on Sept. 23. The judge bound him over to the Federal Grand Jury and placed his bond at $5000. Mr. Langhout, it will be remembered, recently purchased the Anton Then greenhouse property in this city, and was soon afterward forced into bankruptcy by the agent of a Holland firm, which has claims against him for several thousand dollars. These amounts are alleged to be due from former business transactions conducted while he was acting as the firm's agent in this country.

California Seed Trade

The damage done by the rain of last week is hard to calculate, owing to the number of conflicting estimates expressed by growers. Until the harvest has been completed in October, it will be impossible to give any reliable figures. Up to a week ago the season for drying in the field was very unsatisfactory, because the ground was wet, humidity high, and there was little wind or sunshine to take up the moisture. On Sept. 21 we had a severe electrical storm, fortunately accompanied by only a little rain. The week following saw a great improvement, there having been considerable sunshine in the Delta section and the Santa Clara Valley.

Carrot seed seems to have suffered more than any other, although a considerable amount of Onion seed was out. Any loss of Onion seed this year would be severely felt, owing to the light yield due to extensive flower blasting early in the season. All Beet and Spinach seeds, so far as the writer can learn, were warehoused before the rain. Considerable Lettuce seed standing will likely be a total loss. Large quantities of other seed were exposed to the rain, and the damage was great. Harvesting has been fully ten days later than last year, in spite of which larger quantities than ever have been stored in the warehouse on time.

Canvas drying sheets cost real money these days, as those who have had to replace them have found out.

J. R. W.

JAMESPORT, N. Y.—It is reported that J. Ebb Weir has several of his greenhouses planted to Tomatoes, the fruit from which is expected to follow the outdoor crop.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

THE HIGH WATER MARK OF SERVICE

In all the testimonials from advertisers printed in this column there is, in addition to the compliment paid the paper, a silent tribute to the subscribers who have responded to the advertising in question.

A letter received at this office from the Mersey Advertising Co., who handle the advertising of Bees, Ltd., the well known Rose house of Liverpool, England, advising of the reasons for not advertising this season, particularly defines this in the following paragraph:

"The American and Canadian Nurserymen have turned up trumps. It is a pleasure to do business with them, because they appreciate the efforts made to serve them."

While the quality of service THE EXCHANGE, through its American and Canadian connections, is able to give advertisers is well indicated in the following:

"The series of advertisements placed with you in past seasons have been productive of markedly good results and numerous repeat orders."

Here's one more paragraph of a most interesting letter:

"Our clients, Bees, Ltd., in the interests of national food production, have reduced their output of Roses in favor of food crops. The result is that we think it would be unfair, as well as unbusinesslike, to publish the usual full page advertisements, seeing that the stock for export will be taken up by those American and Canadian Nurserymen who have become regular buyers."

The medium securing immediate business for its advertisers, out of which a regular trade is built up, is the medium which should make a direct appeal to you.

Do your Fall plans on the wholesale end call for some well thought out opportune advertisements in THE EXCHANGE?

A recent advertisement prepared by this office brought 128 inquiries in four days, and additional letters are still being received.

Maybe we can add that touch, or whatever you care to name it, which will make your advertisement of the kind that pulls.

The Truth Concerning California

AS a health resort, the state has become famous. Because of the multiplicity of climates within its borders, there are all sorts of erroneous notions in the minds of men and women who would be benefited by their (climates') curative powers.

Five dollars the minimum charge to those who wish to know where to locate for health.

New Primula Malacoides

It is just as essential in Business as in War to be prepared for the future.

Your Business is largely what you make it.

The first step in selling is to have something worth while to sell, with a conscientious belief that it is all and more than you represent it to be. This is the case with the New Rohrer Primula Malacoides.

Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink and Light Lavender. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

These leaves are prepared in our own factory. They are flexible, do not mould, and are of a fine color. Cycas are very scarce, and we have been fortunate to have some on hand. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

MR. FLORIST:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

New Species of American Hawthorns

Arnold Arboretum, through E. I. Farrington, reports specially interesting discoveries. Instead of only 16 species as formerly known, the group appears to consist of more different forms than any other American tree group. Nearly 750 have been found. Among these are several of great ornamental value and probable wide adaptability. They flower and fruit at different times and some retain their highly colored fruit all Winter

Much interest is manifested by horticulturists in the nouncement by Professor Charles S. Sargent, director the Arnold Arboretum in Jamaica Plain, near Boston, at nearly 750 species of American Hawthorns have en discovered, raised and named under his direction. w people have realized the extent of the work which e Arnold Arboretum has been doing along this line. ly eighteen years ago the number of Cratægus species own as natives of the United States was limited to six- en. At that time botanists in general believed that actically all the species on the continent had been dis- vered.

Except for the Arboretum's investigation, it is prob- le that little more would be known about Cratægus en now, as the work of locating and classifying the horns is not an easy one. Two visits must invariably made, one in the Spring when the trees are in flower, other in the Fall when they are in fruit. Of course, it neeessary that exactly the same tree be visited each ne, so the plant hunter must tag each one visited in me way. All this work is complicated by the fact that e various species do not flower or produce their fruit the same time. Moreover, a tree cannot be depended on to blossom every year, and the fruit may be de- royed by insects or diseases. It is not strange, there- re, that botanists in general labored so long under the pression that only a few species existed. The mistake uld not readily be discovered except in some institution e the Arboretum, where large numbers of trees are grown.

Professor Sargent's attention was first called to the atter by the fact that trees collected from various parts the country, especially in Missouri and Arkansas, ffered constantly from any species which had been de- ribed by writers. They did not flower at the same time. hey had a different number of stamens. The color of e anthers differed, and the fruit varied widely. It as surmised at first that many hybrids had sprung up, it this conjecture was soon set aside, for it was found at the various trees maintained their characteristics solutely without change. There is not a variation und, as among the Crabs. Professor Sargent recently id that he has never seen what he considers a hybrid ratægus.

As soon as it was discovered that numerous unnamed species were growing in the Arboretum, the whole subject was opened up for investigation. Plant hunters were set to work in various parts of the country. When results were tabulated, they proved hardly less than astounding. It was found that instead of sixteen species this country has many more than all the rest of the world combined, the number running up to many hundreds. Just how many there are nobody knows even yet. In the Arboretum's opinion many remain to be located and classified. There are at least 150 which have been indexed but not named.

The Hawthorn appears in more different forms than any other tree growing on this continent. In time it will come to be, probably, among the most important of our native plants used for park and garden decoration. The Hawthorns are doubly useful, for the handsome display of flowers which they make in the Spring is succeeded by an equally fine display of Fall fruit. This is true of nearly every species, although they fruit and flower at different times. The earliest to fruit is C. Arnoldiana, a species found growing wild in the Arnold Arboretum and other parts of New England. The fruit obtains its full color before the end of August. Others ripen their fruit all through the Fall, and some hold this fruit until Spring. It is too early yet to make any definite statements as to all the kinds of Hawthorns most useful for ornamental work. Some especially good kinds, though, have been described in detail by Professor Sargent.

Cratægus Arnoldiana

Found growing wild in the Arnold Arboretum and other parts of New England. The earliest of the Hawthorns. The fruit attains its full color before the end of August

Cratægus succulenta

The flowers have rose-colored anthers and the fruit is two-thirds of an inch in diameter, scarlet and very lustrous

Cratægus nitida is found growing wild in the bottom lands of Mississippi River. It has a broad, rather open, unsymmetrical head. The leaves are dark green and lustrous, turning yellow, orange or red late in October. Neither the flowers nor the fruit are large, but they are borne in great profusion. Its Autumn color makes it one of the handsomest of the Thorns. Probably it should have a place with the six or eight most beautiful species of the genus. Although growing well in the Arboretum, it did not flower as well this year as usual.

Cratægus succulenta represents a group of Thorns distinguished from other groups by deep longitudinal cavities on the inner face of the nutlets of the fruit. The flowers have rose colored anthers and the fruit is two-thirds of an in. in diameter, scarlet and very lustrous. Although the foliage does not turn to handsome colors in the Fall, it is especially attractive all Summer.

Cratægus coccinioides is native near St. Louis. It is a round topped, densely branched tree, with broad, dark green, lobed leaves, from 2-in. to 3-in. long. The large flowers are produced in compact clusters, and have deep rose-colored anthers. The crimson fruit ripens in October.

Cratægus fecunda, also a native of the St. Louis region, belongs to the great Crus-galli group, of which the well-known Cockspur Thorn is a type. It is a round topped tree, with lustrous leaves, small flowers and abundant, orange-red fruit on slender stems. This is a wide-spread group, including species in the Puget Sound region, several in the southern Rocky Mountains, and the beautiful Cratægus Arnoldiana already mentioned. Cratægus Arnoldiana is the earliest Thorn to fruit. Several good specimens are growing near the Center st. gate in the Arboretum, and attract much attention when fruiting, as well as when flowering.

Cratægus punctata is an interesting Thorn because of the variations shown in the color of the fruits in various individuals. Some of the trees have red, others orange fruit, and still others fruit that is a strong yellow. C. punctata is one of the largest and widely distributed of the species in the Eastern states. It has been known for more than a century, and is now growing in many gardens.

Nearby are two specimens of C. cordata, which is the so-called Washington Thorn, a narrow tree with erect branches and small lustrous leaves. This is one of the trees to carry its fruits until Spring, making is highly attractive all through the Winter months. It is the latest of the species in the Arboretum to flower. Brittle branches is its drawback. It has been used as a hedge plant.

One especially attractive Hawthorn is C. pruinosa, which has flowers an inch in diameter and rendered conspicuous by the large, deep rose-colored anthers. The fruit, often an inch in diameter, is bright blue-green and five-angled at the end of Sept. Later it loses its angles, turns orange, and finally becames dark purplish-red.

These are only a few of the hundreds of Hawthorns which Professor Sargent has described growing in the Arboretum grounds. The Hawthorns being long-lived plants, individuals often survive for a huundred years. None of the trees in the Arboretum have yet reached their maximum size. They grow well when once established, and large specimens are easily transplanted. All the species thrive in any well drained soil, but when growing naturally are more abundant in those parts of the country where the soil is impregnated with lime.

Perhaps no task to which the Arboretum has devoted itself has been more worth while than this one of revealing to American gardeners the wealth of material offered by the native Hawthorns. This work has been watched with great interest by horticulturists abroad, so many of the best of the American trees will doubtless be found growing in Europe as well as in American gardens before many years have passed.

Fourth Liberty Loan

How Bonds May be Bought

The Fourth Liberty Loan will dispose of approximately $6,000,000,000 bonds. They will be dated Oct. 24, 1918, and bear 4¼ per cent. interest.

The first coupon will be payable April 15, 1919, and will be for 173 days' interest.

In the Metropolitan district of New York bonds may be bought in any one of four different ways, as follows:

1. Subscribe and pay in full for any amount, on or before Oct. 19, at which date the offerings close.

2. Buy on the Government plan:
Initial payment, 10 per cent.; Nov. 21, 20 per cent.; Dec. 19, 20 per cent.; Jan. 16, 20 per cent.; Jan. 30, 30 per cent.

3. Subscribe on the weekly partial payment plan of the Liberty Loan Association of Banks and Trust Companies of New York City, and use the book with adhesive receipts. Payments as follows:

	$50 Bond.	$100 Bond.
Initial payment	$4	$8
Twenty-three weekly payments	2	4

4. Subscribe on the weekly or monthly partial payment plan, using cards. Payments as follows:

Weekly Plan

	$50 Bond.	$100 Bond.	$500 Bond.	$1,000 Bond.
25 payments of	$2	$4	$20	$40

Monthly Plan

	$50 Bond.	$100 Bond.	$500 Bond.	$1,000 Bond.

January	8	16	80	160
February	8	16	80	160
March	10	20	100	200
April	2	4	20	40

Subscription terms Nos. 1 and 2 are general to the entire country, but Nos. 3 and 4 are local to New York City through an arrangement of the banks and trust companies thereof. We are informed, however, that somewhat similar methods of time payments may be arranged for in any other town or city.

Where payments similar to those given above as Nos. 3 and 4 are arranged for, the employer can considerably assist his employees by taking charge of the transaction. In the first place the employer should personally see to it that all his employees are made fully conversant with the terms of payment, and should make the personal solicitation for subscriptions. The employer confers a real benefit on the employee by taking entire charge of the transaction, and the amount subscribed for to be paid weekly can readily be deducted, with employee's permission, from the weekly payroll. Some employers have expressed their intention of assisting their people by assuming in advance some of the payments which, it will be noted, are double those asked for in the Third Loan (Now—a first payment of $4, and $2 a week on each $50 bond in lieu of $2 and $1 as before). In this way: an employee would like to take two Bonds, we'll say, but he is called on to pay $8 down and $4 a week for 23 weeks—more cash outlay than he can afford; so the employer goes half on the payments for the first 24 weeks and then holds the bond until employee completes his payment at the end of 49 weeks. Or the employer can obtain the bonds through any good bank and arrange for easy terms of repayment.

DELAYS IN THE MAIL—If your current issue of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE does not reach you on time, we ask the exercise of a little patience on your part; it will reach you in due course. The Post Office Department is doing the best it can, but delays are unavoidable due to these days of strenuous endeavor.

Giving Prominence to World Conditions

We have judged it the proper course, in these days through which we are passing, to give more emphasis to the world conditions affecting our every day lives than to the gossipy news of the cities, or even to cultural directions and those discussions on professional matters which, in times of peace, naturally occupy the mind of the trained observer. We are doing this because we believe our readers are far more interested in the forward march of events and the trend of the world's affairs, to the exclusion of practically all else except the obtaining of their daily necessities. We have reason to believe that in our efforts we are backed by the great majority of our subscribers.

The Skies Are Clearing

It seems almost too good to be true, but the facts are before us, and therefore it must be true. In the short period of seven weeks the situation of the Allies in Europe has changed from one of extreme gravity, to say the least, to one full of confidence, the natural result of a succession of victories, not on one front, but on at least three of the four fronts. Thus, from all indications, we cannot help but feel assured that the scales have turned, finally and for good, to the benefit of the Allies. While it is quite possible that it may take until late in 1919 to conclude the war, in the only manner in which it can be concluded, that is decisively and on our own terms, the end does seem to be coming near. And it may come sooner than expected, who knows? Just now the decision for a quick peace is in the hands of the German people themselves; should they rise in their might and rid themselves of the military caste which has so long ruled them with a rod of iron, we might see peace by Christmas.

The Annual Meeting of the F. T. D.

The Society of American Florists has evolved from within its ranks two great commercial bodies—the first and oldest being the Florists' Hail Association which does wonderful work, quietly at that, so quietly indeed that we have no doubt there is many a grower who does not even know of its existence. Unfortunately, in those early days, the S. A. F. did not recognize the coming value of its child, and today a great percentage of the F. H. A. members are not in any way interested in the S. A. F. The F. H. A. has grown to be a great dollars and cents 100 per cent. efficient organization, and the protection against loss which it securely affords is the tie that binds its members solidly one to the other.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association is a much later offspring, but already going strong, with every symptom of becoming a dominant factor in the business. In fact, it is practically as good as that now. It has become an established institution. Its operations have materially expanded the florist industry; it has not only made new business for its members, but it has added materially to that of the florist-grower and, incidentally, to that of the supply dealer. And, as yet, it is only in its infancy. We doubt if one million of our population know of its workings—therefore it has one hundred millions more to educate—some task.

Its operations, when peace returns, will encircle the globe. Think of that opening, gentlemen, and cast around in the whole field of your vision for a business that offers like opportunities for direct transmission of orders between a retailer in Kalamazoo, and another in Bombay. This is no idle dream, its fulfillment rests upon yourselves.

And in the United States and Canada, alone, what tremendous opportunities are open to you! Where you clear now as a body a hundred orders a day perhaps, shortly, if you build aright, you will be clearing a thousand. The possibilities exist; it's up to you to cleave your way through.

Wise counsel, broad and liberal views will effect the purpose. Members generally understand the value of "service," but that must be further impressed. Prompt settlements and honorable treatment, member to member, must prevail. As we see it the question of judicious advertising to the limit, is the base on which you must build. You may think you are doing that pretty thoroughly now but it is not a circumstance to what you will see yourselves doing in the near future.

Great preparations for a successful meeting are making at Cleveland; we advise all who can to be present there this next week, Oct. 8 and 9, so they may be partakers in the inspiration and enthusiasm which springs from a meeting of the character which this union of earnest workers is bound to provide.

Mr. Florist: It's Up To You!

In his address in New York City last Friday, President Wilson asked five searching questions concerning the issues of the war. They are printed below so every florist may decide which side he personally is fighting on. He will then be ready to support President Totty's appeal to members of the Society of American Florists for the florists to support the Government to the utmost in conducting the war to victory. President Wilson asks:

Shall the military power of any nation or group of nations be suffered to determine the fortunes of peoples over whom they have no right to rule except the right of force?

Shall strong nations be free to wrong weak nations and make them subject to their purpose and interest?

Shall peoples be ruled and dominated, even in their own internal affairs, by arbitrary and irresponsible force or by their own will and choice?

Shall there be a common standard of right and privilege for all peoples and nations or shall the strong do as they will and the weak suffer without redress?

Shall the assertion of right be haphazard and by casual alliance or shall there be a common concert to oblige the observance of common rights?

Have You Contributed to Our Fourth Liberty Loan? IF NOT, WHY NOT?

Madison, N. J., Sept. 28, 1918

Fellow Florists:

Give thanks to the Creator:

That you are living in such wonderful times.

That you have the privilege of contributing to such a marvelous emancipation of humanity.

That you are permitted to back up our glorious army at the front, the boys who stop at nothing and ALWAYS GET WHAT THEY GO AFTER.

Never mind where we came from; it's what we ARE, that counts. Now is our chance to show the world that we are 100% AMERICAN and 120% PATRIOTIC, ready with the last dollar we have to stand by the Flag.

What does it matter if our coal must be curtailed so the Government may use it for some other purpose more vitally necessary for the moment? What matters it if many of our best employees have had to leave for service "Over There," and we have nothing left but girls and the men over draft age to do our work? Look at the wonderful age we are living in.

We always knew what America is and what it stands for. Now the whole world knows and looks on in delighted wonder. The name "America," will be one to conjure with in years to come, standing for nothing but "Equal Rights for All," and fighting for nothing but a glorious principle.

Some of us, with our noses to the grindstone, cannot look out on God's glorious sunshine and see the broader aspects of life and read the epoch-making era, through which we are passing.

Our business will not suffer in the long run. The rebound from death and desolation will be quick and lasting and we shall make more money in the future in the business of plants and flowers than we ever dreamed of before. Faith and vision, are all we need. Let the weakling drop out if he wants to; the florists are not whiners! They are real men and the way they are working for Our Fourth Liberty Loan, will prove it.

Let us do our utmost to help administer the "final punch" to militarism, so we may once more settle down to our normal vocations.

In conclusion, the following from the Literary Digest, covers the situation far better than any feeble words of mine can do.

Americans! Here is your God-given land of liberty, far from the furious battles and the countless hospital-beds of France. What flame leaps to your eyes when you say "My Country, 'Tis of Thee?" Have the words filled your soul with a passion of love and holy zeal which make service of country the greatest thing of life, the only thing worth while, these days? Are you ready and eager to enroll in the army of twenty-five million men and women now summoned to carry the Fourth Liberty Loan to victory?"

Yours for Success

CHARLES H. TOTTY
President S. A. F. and O. H.

The florists and trades allied thereto of Greater New York are expected to purchase $500,000 worth of Bonds. As we understand it, only those transacting their banking business in Greater New York are requested to report direct to the Florists and Allied Trades Liberty Loan Committee, with headquarters at 1170 Broadway, New York.

In another column is told by one of our staff correspondents a remarkable story of the successful installation by Frank Heid of Tarrytown, N. Y., of a kerosene heater to heat his greenhouses in lieu of coal. Last Winter Mr. Heid carried his greenhouses successfully from February to May through the use of the kerosene heater, it being impossible for him to obtain coal.

The Fuel Administration issued a proclamation last Monday to operators and miners detailing a program to produce 12,234,000 bituminous, and 2,030,000 anthracite tons of coal weekly until April 1, in an effort to avert a coal famine this Winter and meet the needs of the war. This represents weekly increases of 1,731,000 and 121,000 tons or 16½ and 6⅓ per cent. respectively over the corresponding period ast year.

Economize on Paper and Paper Boxes

The restrictions urged by the War Industries Board on the use of paper and paper (cardboard?) boxes may save money, especially for the retailer, but it is going to be just a trifle hard to make as presentable a looking pakage as heretofore. We construe the order, however, with regard to the above, to direct that all "unnecessary" wrappings be discontinued to the end that the strictest economy be maintained.

The Fourth Liberty Loan

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

When the New York Florists' Club resolved to ascertain how much its members subscribed to the Fourth Liberty Loan (no matter whether such subscriptions were made in New York or elsewhere), that was a step in the right direction, but if it is desired to ascertain what the florists of the country have done to entitle them to be called patriotic, the S. A. F. and O. H. ought to call upon all members of the trade to report to its secretary, not only the subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan, but also to the first, second and third Loans as well. Fifty years hence, this might not only be a valuable statistic, but one of which our offspring, as well as the present generation, might feel justly proud. JOHN G. ESLER.

Nurserymen Rise Above Difficulties

War time conditions have hit hard at the nurseries about Geneva, N. Y. Formerly most of the seedlings, the basis for trees, were imported from France and Holland. It has been with great difficulty that supplies for the plantings during the last two years have been secured and those obtained have been supplemented by home grown stocks.

For years, Raffia, a fiber imported from Madagascar has been used for tying the buds. This year it was impossible to secure any. American ingenuity has supplied a substitute—the spring clothespin. This was found to hold the bud in place just as well as the Raffia. Indeed, the pin can be put on much easier than the Raffia and may be used several times.

Nurserymen are preparing for next Memorial Day. It is figured that under existing conditions cut flowers will be scarce next Spring. Accordingly there is to be an extra demand for shrubs and other ornamentals that may be used instead. Special attention has been given by growers this year to this class of shrubs.

Chrysanthemum Society of America

Examining Committees

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new Chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston: Wm. Nicholson, chairman; James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, Manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop sq. and Otis st., Boston, Mass.

New York: Eugene Dailledouze, chairman; Wm. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 W. Twenty-second st., New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia: A. B. Cartledge, chairman; John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa.

Cincinnati: R. Witterstaetter, chairman; James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago: N. J. Wietor, chairman; E. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head. Ship flowers to chairman, 162 North Wabash ave., Chicago, Ill.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuseday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character, in not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November the dates of which will be October 5, 12, 19, 26 and November 2, 9, 16, 23, 30.

The New York Dahlia Show

For the purpose of general trade information a member of our staff makes the following report as to his pick of the many varieties shown:

In a close study for individual varieties of more than ordinary excellence, the following in the several classes as they appeared when staged, seemed to us worthy of special mention. Others equally good, no doubt, escaped our notice.

Peony-flowered Varieties. Mrs. Frederick Grinnell, general color rose pink; Gen. Maurice, bright scarlet; Duchess of Brunswick, light red; Weber, pink; America, apricot orange; Dr. Peary, maroon; South Pole, white; Queen Wilhelmina, white; Billionaire, golden orange and pink.

Decorative Varieties. Hortulanus Fiet, shrimp pink tipped with gold; Oregon Beauty, oriental red; Mrs. J. G. Cassatt, rose; George Walters, pink; Millionaire, lavender pink; General Joffre, canary yellow; Mina Burgle, deep-red; Glory of New Haven, soft rose; Delice, pink.

Cactus Varieties. General Pershing, bright scarlet; Conquest, deep crimson; Tom Lundy, crimson; Kalif, scarlet; Marguerite Bouchon, soft rose with white center and tips; Attraction, pink; Mr. Gordon, variegated; Rene Cayeux, geranium red; a vase of this variety shown on long stems was one of the best features in the Show.

Single Varieties. Rose pink Century; Miss Emma, rich red and golden yellow; Scarlet Century; Golden Shower; Golden Century; Twentieth Century, white and pink.

Pompon Varieties. Gretchen Heine, blush white, rose tipped; Velle of Springfield, light red; Darkest of All, maroon; Nerissa, pink; Little Beauty, pink; Little Bessie, white.

Were we asked to name a few of what seemed to us the handsomest Dahlia in the show without regard to color or class, we would mention Mrs. Frederick Grinnell, Weber, Rene Cayeux, Hortulanus, Fiet, Frank Smith, Kalif and Mina Burgle.

Meeting the Coal Shortage Situation

SOME ROSE GROWERS' VIEW

We learn from the Flushing Rose Gardens, Flushing, L. I., that their method of coping with the 50 per cent. fuel restriction order for the coming Winter has been put in practice by cutting down their glass surface more than 50 per cent., combining in the restricted space the varieties that have shown the best returns. They state that probably most growers carry more or less stock which, upon close analysis, would show a loss, that having been their experience. They are satisfied that the net returns from their reduced equipment, all profitably employed, will be fully equal to those derived from their establishment as formerly operated.

A. S. Burns, Jr. of Spring Valley, N. Y., writes that he expects to run all of his Rose houses throughout the Winter. He can keep within the 50 per cent. coal limit by running them at a night temperature four or five degrees lower than he formerly did and by discontinuing his Lily houses, as there seems no likelihood of Japanese bulbs coming into this country this season. He has pretty nearly his 50 per cent. allowance of coal on hand and does not expect to have to use any other fuel this season unless he determines to swing in a couple of small houses of Hadley that he is using for Summer Roses, in which event he would use wood for fuel, having six or eight acres of heavy woodland on his property. Mr. Burns states that these are his plans as nearly as he could determine at the time he wrote us (last August), but the crop, market and labor conditions may make it necessary to alter them completely at any time.

From Murray Hill, N. J., we hear that L. B. Coddington will use coal only for fuel, having no wood or peat available. He will make endeavors to run most of his plant and keep the frost out so that he can save his plants. Much depends on the Winter, however, he says. If it is as cold as last Winter, he may find it necessary to change his plans. He also says that if his greenhouses are any good for the winning of the war, the Government could have them all. Mr. Coddington also expresses the wish that if he were only strong enough and could leave his business, he would engage in Y. M. C. A. work and do what he could to help the boys on the other side. We regret to learn that Mr. Coddington has only just returned to his home, having been ill and away for a number of weeks.

The editor would much appreciate hearing from other growers in the belief that these mutual confidences would prove beneficial in many ways. Some time ago we predicted that prices for cut flowers would jump considerably about Christmas but our market reports already show remarkable increases at many points and, if we mistake not, there is likely to prevail higher prices and a greater rush to secure stock than has ever before been known in the history of the business, not so much on account of increased demand as on account of shortage of supply.

Obituary

Nathan Lerner

Nathan Lerner, a salesman at the Boston Flower Exchange, died of influenza on Monday morning Sept. 30. He was 29 years old. He had been in the market about six years and sold the flowers of W. C. Stickell of Lexington, Joseph Fuller of Leominster, and C. S. Andem, Putnam, Conn. He leaves a mother and a sister. R. C.

Peter Crowe

A life devoted to his family, flowers and the welfare of his community came to a peaceful close last Sunday morning, Sept. 29, when Peter Crowe died in Utica, N. Y., after less than two day's illness, though he had been in poor health for some time. He was 77 years and two months old when he died.

Peter Crowe was born in Limerick, Ireland, July 9, 1841, was educated there and, when twelve years old, worked with his father for a neighbor, John Gray, who soon removed to Perthshire, Scotland. Gray was a gardener and young Crowe worked for him three years. Then he worked on the estate of Lord Kinneard at Carse O'Gowrie greenhouse and gardens near Dundee, where he remained ten years and became an expert. In 1865, just as the Civil War closed, he came to America and located at East Newark, N. J. where he worked for an Englishman, Frank Newbold, and remained for a year. For another year he worked for Richard Purdue, a commercial florist at East Orange, N. J. Next he obtained a situation as head gardener for four years, with O. S. Carter at Orange, N. J.

In 1872 he went into business for himself in Utica, in which he continued for 47 years. He was not only successful in raising flowers but studied the wants of the local market and catered to them. No wedding was thought to be complete for which he did not decorate the house and church and furnish the bridal bouquet. He knew what was appropriate, had good taste and strove to deal so with all people that they would call on him again. His son, William J., became his business partner, and the firm of Peter Crowe & Son became well and favorably known in floral circles throughout the State. Mr. Crowe made a specialty of Roses, and was successful. He became a member of the American Rose Society, served on its executive committee and was a successful exhibitor at many shows.

In 1903 he originated a new variety of fern, Adiantum Croweanum, which has been grown largely ever since and which has proved one of the most adaptable Adiantums grown for cut frond purposes. His son died in 1902 and, to relieve himself of work and responsibility, Mr. Crowe leased two-thirds of his greenhouses to Brant Brothers of Madison, N. J., who have since conducted them. From that time on he has devoted himself entirely to the growing of Adiantum Croweanum, which he sold at wholesale in all leading markets.

Mr. Crowe was a member of the florists' clubs of New York City and of Utica. He was successful in business, was well and favorably known, well informed, very intelligent and always progressive. He visited the old country and traveled extensively in England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany and a part of Italy, as well as in this country.

In 1870, at Orange, N. J., Mr. Crowe married Jane Hulmes, who was a member of the Chamerlain Society. When their only son passed away it proved a great blow to Mr. Crowe and he became a different man. However, he and his wife took a new lease of life and devoted themselves to the two granddaughters and their mother. Mr. Crowe also leaves three brothers, Martin of Utica, David of Orange, N. J., and John of Paterson, N. J. The funeral services were private. He was buried in Forest Hill Cemetery, Oct. 2.

One of the best things done for the retailer by THE EXCHANGE was the getting up of an "ALBUM OF FLORAL DESIGNS" for Agencies, and the "DESIGN BOOK DE LUXE" for counter trade. Most every retailer invests in one or other and keeps o buying. If you are not acquainted with these Business Getters ask us for further particulars.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

The Great F. T. D. Meeting Next Week

THE HOLLENDEN, CLEVELAND, OCTOBER 8 AND 9

There never was greater need for the retail florists to come together, compare notes, take council, and be prepared and ready to meet every possible contingency than exists at the present time. For these reasons a great and representative meeting is to be expected

More F. T. D-ism

Our meeting at Cleveland, Oct. 8 and 9, ought to merit the largest attendance we have ever had, due to the war and the situation occasioned by the war. Shipping conditions, which are so unreliable today, due to the congestion of rail traffic, must be met with, and how much may we be thankful to the F. T. D. and its organization in being able to transmit our orders from one to another with the fullest confidence of their being properly filled.

Nowadays this means much. Having the confidence of 600 members located all over the United States and Canada, and feeling that any order taken will be carried out to the fullest detail as though it were done in your own shop! And all this accomplished in a few short years—brought about in a most inspiring manner by the leaders who had the foresight and spirit of cooperation to help one another, who met from time to time and learned to appreciate each other's efforts so that they gave the best that was in them not only to merit the business but also the friendship.

It was these conventions, where everyone present entered into the spirit of "all for one and one for all" that brought the success of the F. T. D. to its proper level; take it from me, boys, when you meet the bunch at Cleveland you will meet the livest crowd connected with the flower business. From the moment Bill Gude, our president, takes the gavel to open up the meeting to the time hustling Secretary Pochelon says "meeting adjourned," will be found inspiration and instruction for still further cooperation.

Now, what has brought about the success of the F. T. D? One of the most important things I know of is the service rendered by the members. By that I mean, that if one member transmits an order to another, there has never been a time that if that order did not go through right but what the member who received the order was ready to make good and send another, gratis, with the proper explanation so that the good-will was held by all parties concerned, customer, sender and receiver of the order. It means much to those who are members to know that there is dependability, and should warrant the making of more members for our association.

This get-together spirit once a year by our members cements a friendship that is lasting and is worth more than all else; for the price of fellowship is not purchasable—only by personal contact can it be brought about. So that for a retailer who can attend our F. T. D. gathering there is a real treat in store both from a friendship as well as an instructional standpoint.

So here's success to the next F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, where abound some of the livest wires in the business, and from whom we can gather and learn how to "Say it with Flowers."

Yours for the Fourth Liberty Loan,

HENRY PENN.

Penn the Florist, Boston, Mass.

No Limit to What F. T. D. Does

We cannot tell in a few words what F. T. D. has done for us nor could a non-member florist comprehend what this would mean to him. To be a live florist and not a member of the F. T. D. would be like fixing up a beautiful show window and locking the front door. Our experience is that we did several thousand dollars more business last year than the year before when we thought we were doing a big business. This shows that there is no limit to this branch of the business; namely, the exchange of orders between its members all over the country. I advise every good florist and my best friends to join and then push.

Very truly yours, LANG FLOWER & NURSERY CO.

Dallas, Texas. OTTO LANG, President.

F. T. D. Increased Business 200 Per Cent.

To florist members of the F. T. D. I say: Attend the Cleveland convention and join. If you cannot attend send in your subscription to the secretary. You will surely profit by it. Since becoming a member my out-of-town business has increased at least 200 per cent. and local 50 per cent., good, clean business that I get paid for within at least 30 days.

S. W. COGGAN

Battle Creek, Mich.

F. T. D. Greater Than Individual Advertising

We are pleased to comply with your request and add our testimony to that of other members of the F. T. D. whom we know must have a good word to say on its behalf. We consider the publicity campaign of the F. T. D. Association and its members to have brought the florist business more prominently before the public, and with greater direct results than all the individual advertising in the last ten years. The delivery of flowers through the F. T. D. is now so universal that no florist who is alive to his own interests can afford not to become a member.

J. GAMMMGE & SONS, LTD., London, Ont.

F. T. D. Affords Great Accommodation

We are only too glad to say all the good things that any one could say for such a business enterprise as the F. T. D. It is a great thing for us financially, as well as for the great accommodation which it affords. There should be at least one florist in every town of any size representing the F. T. D. If the "outs" knew its value they would be only too glad to jump in, and therefore the more the F. T. D. is advertised the better it is for all connected with it.

VALENTINE BURGEVIN, INC., Florists, Kingston, N.Y.

Only Beginning to Realize F. T. D. Possibilities

We have been members of the F. T. D. almost from the start. We have found that we are only beginning to realize its possibilities as our customers become thoroughly acquainted with the idea.

It is, of course, a commonplace for many of our customers to use the service; but we find many new customers feel there is something unreal or mysterious about it so will not trust their order with anyone but the proprietor!

Since the first of the year we have had occasion to send over 350 orders and have received about half that number. Practically all this business would not have reached us had it not been for the F. T. D.

The service adds prestige to the business and gives an up-to-dateness that can be played up to good advantage.

The writer feels he profited more by attendance at the Detroit convention than at any convention previously attended. He is looking forward to the Cleveland meeting with much pleasure. Yours respectfully,

A. WASHBURN & SONS, Bloomington, Ill.

F. T. D. Gives Store Prestige and Increases Business

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery has increased our business in various ways. It is a means of bringing our name more forcibly before the public by showing we have something special to offer in service. It shows we are awake to the times and gives our store prestige. It brings increased business through telegraph orders from customers. We get an average of 100 orders a year from out-of-town for delivery in Mt. Vernon and vicinity. This business has increased and is increasing each year.

Reaching Out After Trade

What "The Man Who Stood Still" Learned From "The Man Who Went Ahead"

By MAJOR P. F. O'KEEFE

Because they were rival florists, they were almost enemies. Their stores were just around the corner from each other. Both seemed to have equal facilities. Both seemed to be getting about equal trade. But that was before they joined the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. With membership in the Society, they began to realize that each other was what you'd call a real man's man. Not at all the sort each had thought his competitor must be. As business acquintance grew into friendship they fell in the habit of talking things over after closing hours. And when there came a time that the business of one stood still while the other's grew apace, they freely and frankly compared notes.

The "man who stood still" couldn't understand why his business grew slack. His offerings were better than ever, the neighborhood around him was building up, he was giving each customer the same personal, courteous attention he always had given. Yet his business wasn't progressing, while his neighbor's seemed to be steadily forging ahead. And so far as he could see, Friend Competitor had "nothing on him"—in stock, service or store.

So one day he laid all the cards on the table, and said "Charley, what do you think is wrong." Charley thought things over for quite a little while, and then gave this frank advice. "You have everything I have, apparently; and you seem to be doing everything I do. But there's one thing you've entirely overlooked. You're waiting for trade, while I go out after it. I don't mean I peddle flowers along the sidewalk, but I reach out after trade that might othewise never exist. Take, for instance, my windows. You know hundreds of people pass your windows and mine every day. And you know how easy it is to 'dress' a window by throwing in samples of everything in stock. But have you ever stopped to think of the effect of such a display on the folks who ordinarily don't buy flowers. They wouldn't know what to ask for, and chances are they'd be too bashful to even step in.

"Now, notice how I fix my windows. Just a few choice sprays of the most seasonable blooms, and a change of windows every other day. A little card naming the flowers, suggesting an appropriate occasion for their use, and telling the price. That's all. But it does the work. That simple display of just a few attractive offerings seems to focus peoples minds on what they see. And the beauty of it is, they come in, three-quarters 'sold'. They know what to ask for, and they know the price. Of course, it takes more time and work to change windows so often but, man, it surely pays me well.

"That's how I reach out after the folks who pass my windows. But they're only a fraction of the folks who live here and ought to buy flowers from us. We've got to to find ways to bring those other people to our store, and there are many ways in which it can be done. I don't use all of them, but I do use all I can afford. Advertising in the newspapers is one way, and it costs much less than you think. You'll find my ad. in twice a week, and I try to feature some special offering in every ad. I find it easier to interest folks in a certain flower for a certain occasion than to just talk flowers, flowers, flowers! Those attractive cuts I use come from the promotion bureau of the society of American Florists, 53 W. 28th st., N. Y. They furnish complete ads. or just the cuts—whichever you want. Then I have a list of what you might call 'comfortable' folks, families that can well afford to buy more flowers than they ever do. I used the 'phone book to get the basis of my list, and then I add new names as I get them in various ways—weddings, socials and so forth. To each of these I've mailed a little booklet on 'The Etiquette of Flowers.' When to send them and what kind to send. It's the kind of book they keep and refer to. These books are little beauties. They also come from the promotion bureau—but they carry my name and address on the back. Yet they don't cost me much more than a postage stamp.

"Each month I remind my friends to consult the book, by sending a letter suggesting flowers for the coming month's events. New Year, St. Valentine's Day, Easter; why, almost every holiday in the calender calls for flowers to appropriately express the sentiments of the day. Also I watch the papers for marriage licenses and approaching weddings, and either send a neat card or letter, or make a personal call. And when I get advance news of banquets or social gatherings I make it a point to get in touch with the committee on arrangements. I've landed quite a few good contracts that way.

With Wishes for an Ever Increasing Volume of Telegraph

"Just now I'm working on a little scheme to learn the birthdays of the folks on my list. With my next monthly letter I'm going to enclose a card on which to fill in the birth-dates of the members of each family. Then I'm going to offer to send a little floral gift for each card filled in and returned. In that way, I'll know the right time to remind each family, and to suggest the right flowers to give. Frankly, I expect this plan to be the best thing I've ever tried. Of course, it will take a little time and cost a little money, but you can't get trade without putting up a little of both.

"So you see, while we both seem to have the same equipment, I'm using methods that you've overlooked. While you're waiting for trade to find you out I'm going out and finding the trade.

"I'm teaching the flower-habit to folks who've never thought of flowers before. And those who've been buying occasionally are rapidly learning that there's many a day in the year when nothing else is so delightful and welcomed as a gift of flowers. Just try these things in your busine six months—and you'll be more than surprised with r sults. And, remember, I'm only one of ten thousa fellow-florists who've found it pays to go after trade."

possible. "Paper conservation is essential as a war measure," it was pointed out by the board. "Every retail store, therefore, is directed to discontinue the unnecessary wrapping of merchandise, and to reduce its consumption of wrapping paper, bags, paper boxes, office stationery, etc., to that which is absolutely necessary."

Following is a resumé of the reductions which have been suggested:

Wrapping Paper

In addition to the discontinuance of unnecessary wrapping, your consumption of wrapping paper can be reduced by the following practices:

Do not use more paper than necessary to wrap merchandise.
Do not use heavier paper than necessary. Consult your paper dealer as to the most serviceable and economical grade.
Use the old paper taken from parcels delivered to you.
Use old newspapers when possible.

Tissue Paper

Eliminate as far as possible the use of tissue paper for packing.

Paper Boxes

Your consumption of paper boxes can be reduced by the following methods:
Eliminate the Holiday Box for Christmas gifts and use lighter weight boxes.

Use old boxes for delivery and have your delivery man return them for further use.

Office Stationery

Your consumption of office stationery can be reduced by the following methods:
Use lighter weight paper and smaller size envelopes.
Write on both sides of the paper for long letters.
Use half and three-quarter sheets of correspondence paper for short letters.
Use the backs of letters for carbons.
Make use of spoiled sheets and backs of envelopes for scratch pads.

How to Make Both Ends Meet

B. F. Barr of Lancaster, Pa., discusses production conditions and emphasizes his points by experience in his own establishment. Prices, he declares, must be advanced to show a profit.

Those who read THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE last week no doubt noted Mr. Totty's call for volunteers on the subject of production cost as a means of educating both grower and retailer as to the prices each should have for his products. Unless we can meet the existing condition without sacrificing the things that rightfully belong to us and at the same time contribute our share towards winning the war, we surely cannot class our business as essential.

F. T. D. window display of the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., designed by Albert Pochelon

Note in the foreground the minature F. T. D. flower shop and in the background the telegraph office. Suspended from the ceiling will be seen an airplane and in front of the store and at the foot of the hill two automobiles, thus suggesting various ways in which the F. T. D. delivers flowers

This is a matter of utmost importance and one that must be worked out individually, as every florist has different conditions which enter into the cost of production. Some of us are probably more successful than others, too. The principal matter, however, is now to govern prices on our product in order to make both ends meet.

Every successful enterprise governs its selling prices on the cost of production, distribution, sales, overhead or any other division of expenses that may accrue. Until we do this, we have no way of knowing whether we are going forward or backward. It is true the market is glutted at times, usually because of climatic conditions. Stock is sold below cost in order to move it. This is a great mistake. How much better would it be to send this suplus to one of our hospitals or cantonments than to flood the markets and drive prices downward! I have reference to those who ship flowers on commission. When the commission houses have an oversupply the price tumbles because they are obliged to move the stock and get what they can out of it for the benefit of the shippers.

You have all noticed how prices advance when stock is scarce. Why not keep it scarce until prices rise to where they belong? I feel sure if the producers knew their costs, their products would be selling at very much higher prices than they are today. In the face of the rising costs encountered, it is foolish to continue selling stock at prices formerly used. In the long run one does not sell much more stock at a cheap price than at a profitable price. I realize this fact more and more every day. People are accustomed today to high prices so unless we can advance our prices in comparison with the cost of production we had better get into some other line of business.

We all know the cost of labor is double what it was last year. As this item is 50 to 60 per cent. of our expense account against 28 to 30 per cent. last year, it is easy to figure what we should have for our product at the present time.

From our own expense accounts, tabulated monthly, in comparison with last year's accounts, I am convinced that the cost of production is 30 to 40 per cent. higher than last year. We keep an accurate monthly record of all our expenses separated and take this instead of our competitor's prices into account in fixing our selling prices. We would rather take a chance on losing a little business than losing money, in doing it. In comparing nursery lists from the various sections I find the big houses have advanced their prices 25 per cent. over prices one year ago, and in some cases even higher.

Whether the florist business is 50 or 100 per cent. essential depends largely on ourselves. If we cannot make a reasonable margin on our goods we certainly cannot contribute to the winning of the war, which is after all, the most important business of today.

Let me say again: Watch your expense account and base your selling price on the cost, or on the same margin of profit you had two years ago; this was, even then, as you all know, too small.

B. F. Barr.

"To even accounts and balance the books, the Allies should be permitted to name the date on which the war is to end," writes George Ade to the National Security League. "Be fair, Germany, and grant us this small favor—you, who have reveled in the initiative. And, for goodness sake, don't hurry us. Don't be offering suggestions as to peace terms. Can't you see that we are busy?"

Why do florists lose an excellent and cheap means of advertisement by failing to put up a sign over their establishments and keeping it in repair. Frequently on a trip through the country, we pass large and small greenhouse ranges with absolutely no indication (except the glass) that a florist business is being conducted there? A neat sign with the firm name and the specialty grown would be a good investment.—C.

"What's your business?" queried a judge in an American court of a prisoner. "I am a sailor," was the reply, in a rich Irish brogue. "A sailor! I don't believe you ever saw the ocean," declared the justice. "Does your honor think I came from Ireland in a wagon?" quickly retorted the ready Celt.—New York Globe.

A minister was preaching in a small town in Scotland and in his sermon he stated that he liked to interpret his subject his way but the commentators did not agree with him. When is a Plant Out-of-date

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

It was interesting and inspiring to read the prophetic letter from the pen of Mrs. Francis King in a recent issue of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. In the main I agree with her sentiments expressed. Optimism and faith in the future for horticulture are most refreshing these days when so many pessimists are much like the scouts of the Biblical Israelites who saw only the giants in the land and missed seeing the huge clusters of grapes which the other fellows brought back with them as a sample of the fruits of the Promised Land.

The expression relative to the untrained individual, posing as a landscape gardener and imposing on the unsuspecting public, is well understood. The term landscape gardener and landscape architect have been so sorely abused that many in the profession would welcome its proper restriction. Superficial knowledge is dangerous in any line. In our association and dealings with plant life, it is highly important to be grounded on right principles and to possess the knowledge of a plant's requirement as well as being able to "design prettily."

The question of any plant being "out-of-date" presents to my way of thinking several angles. It is certainly out-of-date and under ban to the individual who dislikes it, but very much up-to-date to the one who desires it; so that strictly speaking, no plant is out-of-date as long as there is a demand for it. But the too free use and the abuse of anything make it undesirable and distasteful. So it is with the use of plants when employed in the wrong place. Because of this, however, we should not condemn the plant but the planter.

How often have we seen Blue Spruce dotted senselessly all over a lawn or piled into a porch-bed planting where it should never be. The landscape man is not always of course to blame for these examples of landscape art (?). He is sometimes forced into pleasing some whim of the garden owner, who has a surplus of money but a deficit of natural good taste and who overrules the designer and forces an undesirable planting.

A well placed group or a specimen of Koster's Blue Spruce is beyond question a beautiful object. I well recall seeing a group of fifteen to eighteen of these plants set as the distant point in an extensive planting. They stood some sixteen to twenty feet high and against the skyline the foliage almost merged with the blue-gray of the sky.

Some few weeks ago, THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE had, as its weekly illustration for the nursery page, a picture of the Golden-leaf Mock Orange. The unique use made of it in this particular instance and the striking effect produced was such as to call forth approval.

The matter all simmers down then to the use or abuse of any particular plant and to the likes and dislikes of the individual. Finally we should remember that a plant is not a manufactured product but something that is a part of Nature which, though we may not condone, we should not condemn.

EDWIN MATTHEWS.

[We would recommend to Mrs. Francis King to auto to Mt. Thompson when next in the vicinity of Denver, returning from the plateau thereof by way of Bear Creek canyon. On the sides of this canyon, at 100 to 200ft. elevation above the creek, one catches an occasional sight of a Colorado Blue Spruce guarded by forest trees in their garb of living green, creating a wonderful color effect and, so far as the writer is concerned, one of the most impressive views in Nature's own landscaping it has yet been his fortune to look upon.—ED.]

The Market

The week has wrought few changes in the local market conditions. Business is a little better if anything, with marked indications of a steady future. Funeral work is in heavy demand. The supply of flowers is not over plentiful and is always cleaned up. The local cut of Roses is much heavier this week and should be abundant in a short time. 'Mums are hardly ready, although a few early ones are beginning to arrive. Carnations are longer and better and the supply is increasing. Novelties are almost off of the market and we miss them. Prices are practically the same as a week ago.

Pushing Liberty Loan Drive

Florists are enthusiastic workers in the Liberty Loan campaign. About $75,000,000 has been apportioned, as Detroit's share. This means that each individual will have to purchase twice as much as last time. The local selling organization has been meeting for the past two or three weeks to get in trim for this task. Indications are that the work will be put over in the characteristic Detroit way. Among the florists who are giving their entire time to this work are E. A. Fetters, Walter Topske, Philip Breitmeyer, Robert Plumb, Albert Pochelon and Albert Sylvester.

Talk of the Town

A large delegation of the local trade is planning to attend the coming F. T. D. convention at Cleveland. Secretary Albert Pochelon has devoted many long but seemingly tireless hours to making this event the best ever. Literally volumes of correspondence are being received and answered daily. Better than anything else this indicates the general interest in and importance of this coming meeting. The coal situation is causing the growers considerable worry. Although reluctant some have planned and are making arrangements to cut off some of their houses. Others are going to run at lower temperatures until their 50 per cent. supply gives out and then close down for the balance of the Winter. In several instances improvements have been made in the efficiency of the heating apparatus, and so much of the heat leakage has been eliminated, that it is estimated the 50 per cent. will almost carry these concerns throughout the Winter.

Clevelanders take notice: George Doemling says this will be a banner year for Detroit bowlers. The manner in which he has gone about to prove this should surely produce the much desired result—Cleveland's defeat! H. C. F.

Kansas City, Mo.

Roses are the only stock that the florists have in abundance. The cool, damp nights and sunshiny days have brought all kinds of Roses to perfection in the last week or two. They are selling for from 2c. to 16c. apiece. There are a few Lilies and these are commanding 15c. each. Gladioli are 5c. and 6c. apiece and are very scarce even at these prices. Asters are gone for this season. Carnations have not yet come in. 'Mums will begin to appear soon.

Business has picked up wonderfully lately. The early part of September was extremely quiet but some of the florists say that they have had triple the usual amount of business in the last week or two. There are no social affairs and only a few weddings, so that most of the business consists of funeral and hospital orders. There has been noted an increase in orders for the sick, both at hospitals and at homes.

Death of Florist Sailor

Jesse Hayes, who enlisted in the Navy in June, died of influenza, Sept. 23, at the Great Lakes training station. He had been an employee of the Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. since he was 12 years old and had proved capable and trustworthy. The young man is survived by his parents, who reside in Pleasant Hill, and two brothers who are in France. The body was brought back to Pleasant Hill where the funeral was held on Sept. 28.

Edward Amerhol, of Janesville, Wis., is in Kansas City visiting his son, who is in the hospital there. Young Amerhol is a student in the local motor mechanics service.

Mr. and Mrs. John Furrow, of Guthrie, Okla., were in Kansas City en route to Chicago, where they will spend their

Women as Motor Drivers

William L. Rock, president of the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co., has applied to one of the local motor training schools for experienced women drivers. As soon as these are secured Mr. Rock will put women on all of his delivery trucks to take the place of the men who will be called for service. Young boys will help on the trucks but the women will be responsible for the cars and the goods. Two or three additional women clerks have been employed in the retail store; others will be taken on as soon as they can be secured. "The war is being felt more keenly right along in our line of business," said Mr. Rock. "We expect to lose several more men in this new draft. We are only too glad to do everything we can to help win the war and we are employing women now so that they may be experienced when the men are called. We have thought of employing the wives of some of the men now at work in our greenhouses. These women could work half a day two or three times a week and still look after their homes. By dividing the time among them they could get along nicely and be a great help in the business."

Memorial Trees

Planting a tree as a memorial for every Kansas City man who dies in the war has been discussed by several local organizations. The city or park board may be asked to designate some memorial grove or avenue which would be frequently visited by large numbers of people. The entrance to Swope Park has been suggested. An avenue of trees that will grow to a great size, forming a complete arch overhead, and leading toward a spot where Kansas City will one day build a monument to her dead soldiers, is the plan suggested by Miss Lucy Bigelow. This idea was adopted from a similar plan carried out in an Ohio city. Eventually the trees of the grove or avenue would bear tablets with names of the dead soldiers. The expense of planting would be borne by a common fund to which everyone could contribute. Trees outlive human beings by many generations it is pointed out, and there are many other reasons, too, why trees are the finest soldiers' monuments.

The interest in the fuel question now has given way to that of labor as a recent order issued from Lansing requires that all men engaged in work that can be done by women must find employment in essential industries—store clerks, bookkeepers and so on among the florists' employees will probably be the first called on. Greenhouse help may not be interfered with in most instances but the high prices offered for common labor now make it difficult to induce men to keep at steady employment. Almost any man can get $4 per day as a minimum for common labor while I am told of girls getting all the way from $15 to $25 per week when employed on piece work and skilled men in trades are making anywhere from $5 to $10 per day and often in some special work much higher. Yes, and they are spending it too, as a glance at the price marks in the store windows and the classy clothes seen on both men and women on the streets indicate. All of this should give courage to the florist as showing the ability to buy flowers at fair prices when they want to and they "will want to" oftener or otherwise, according as the trade goes after the business. This is no time to "sob," but a good time to get busy. S. B.

Meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday Oct. 14, at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House bldg., 23rd St. and 8th Ave., at 7.30 p. m.

The Market

Oct. 1.—Conditions in the wholesale cut flower market have changed greatly since our last review. The general supply now arriving in the market is much less than usual at this season, especially that of 'Mums and Dahlias, and large buying by parties from Boston and other cities has, during the last week, depleted this limited supply. As a result prices are abnormally high on most items of stock.

American Beauty Roses are in fair supply and demand. Specials are selling at from 10c. to 35c. each with small sales of the choicest selections at 40c., and other grades at corresponding prices. As regards hybrid teas, by far the strongest demand is for grades No. 2 to extras inclusive, which are bringing relatively better prices than the higher grades. No. 2 grade blooms are selling at 3c. to 4c. each; No. 1 at 4c. to 6c.; extras at 6c. to 8c., and fancies and specials at from 8c. to 15c. The demand cleans up the No. 2 and extra grades daily.

Carnations are in moderate supply, and are moving well at from 3c. each for very ordinary blooms on short stems and 4c. to 5c. for the best now arriving.

Cattleya orchids are in larger supply and are about the only staple flower in the market which is meeting weak demand, prices ranging from 20c. to 50c. each. White Lilies are in moderate supply and are meeting with a strong demand, especially from out of town buyers, prices ranging from 12c. to 15c. each, the latter price prevailing. The fair supply of Lily of the Valley is also meeting with a fair demand, and the best is selling at from $12 to $15 per 100.

As regards the supply of miscellaneous outdoor grown flowers, Dahlias and 'Mums, Dahlias are in short supply and selling at from 35c. per doz. for those of insignificant quality up to $1.25 for the best arriving, which, by the way, are inferior to the best of other years. 'Mums are in short supply and largely of poor quality. They are selling at from 75c. to $4 per doz.; the latter price being paid for a few of fair quality. Cosmos is of good quality and the moderate supply is moving well. There are very few Asters, but plenty of Celosia.

The Fourth Liberty Loan

The florists in the Metropolitan district are expected to purchase $500,000 worth of bonds. Letters have been mailed broadcast to all concerned, and a personal solicitation will follow. Chas. Schenck, chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of the Florists and Allied Trades, asks that all in the district subscribe through this designated committee in the endeavor to make a strong showing; the actual purchase, however, can be made at any bank the purchaser prefers to designate.

Pres. Wilson Sends Roses

Before leaving for Washington on Saturday morning the President and Mrs. Wilson sent a large bouquet of American Beauty Roses to the 700 wounded American soldiers at the hospital on Ellis Island. The flowers were placed on a standard in the center of the main ward where the men could all see them from their cots. On a card attached the President and Mrs. Wilson sent their best wishes for speedy recovery.

Club Meeting

The Florists Club will hold its regular meeting at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening, Oct. 14, at 7:30.

The exhibition committee C. W. Knight, chairman, is desirous of making a comprehensive exhibit of any new or standard varieties of flowers or plants at this meeting, such as Dahlias, Roses or early 'Mums; in fact anything of sterling merit that will be of interest to the members of the florist's trade in general. The committee therefore requests that members and others bring or send some of their products to this meeting and have same passed upon by our awards committee. This will be an important meeting and no doubt largely attended by members and visitors. Flowers shipped by express or parcel post should be addressed to H. C. Reidel, No. 49 W. 28th street and must reach him not later than 6 p.m., Oct. 14th. Mr. Reidel will see that consignments sent to him are taken to the club's rooms and properly arranged.

The Beechwood Heights Nurseries, Thomas Young, Jr. proprietor have opened a salesroom for the disposal of their flowers—Gardenias, orchids, Roses at 53 W. 28th st. F. L. Suplee is manager.

The first Violets noted in the market this season were seen this week at J. S. Fenrich's, 51 W. 28th st. They were the variety Marie Louise, and though a little light on color, were very fragrant. Violets in the markets are always harbingers of the cool season.

Aconitum Fischerii (Monkshood): a variety of this flower with immense hoods of a pleasing blue shade arranged in very close spikes was seen this week at J. J. Coan's, 115 W. 28th st.

Some of the finest Lily of the Valley seen in the market for many a day was noted this week at the W. S. Allen Co.'s establishment, No. 53 W. 28th st.

The Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st., has this week a table of samples of well grown ornamental plants embracing Dracænas, palms, ferns, Pandanus and Myrtle. New plants are from the growing establishment of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Some of the first Unaka and White Frost 'Mums were noted at this same store.

There has been not a few changes in the wholesale and retail flower stores recently as regards the employees. Andrew Scott is now with Wadley & Smyth, 491 Fifth ave., E. J. Van Reyper and Joseph Vocke have joined the sales force at George C. Siebrecht's, 109 W. 28th st. and Edward Brenner is now with J. J. Coan 115 W. 28th st.

Make arrangements for the handling of your stock—don't wait until you are ready to ship. We invite correspondence with shippers of flowers, and you will find it well worth while corresponding with us, too, for many of the largest buyers of flowers depend upon us for their supply.

Special opportunity for a couple of Good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

The Market

Oct. 1, 1918.—Conditions at the wholesale flower markets are much the same as last week. The demand for flowers is larger than the supply. Prices are exceptionally high and the call for flowers for funeral work is unprecedented. American Beauty Roses are not overabundant. They sell at 8c. to 60c. each. Hybrid tea Roses of excellent quality are in fair supply. The heavy demand quickly cleans up the supply at 6c. to 20c. or even more. Carnations are slightly more plentiful but quality is poor. They sell at 6c. to 10c. Asters are poor except a few grown in greenhouses. They sell at 4c. to 10c. each. 'Mums are more plentiful, the quality good at $1.50 to $3.50 per doz. Gladioli are not abundant but sell well at 8c. to 12c. each. Lilies are scarce—15c. to 20c. each. Gypsophila elegans and Candytuft are in exceptional demand and are cleaned up at once. Wild flowers are being used to good advantage and all kinds of herbaceous flowers are selling well. Asparagus is largely called for; hardly enough to fill the demand. Price is unchanged but the bunches are smaller. Plants are selling well and are largely used in the retail store windows.

Trade Notes

George Hamer, assistant manager at the Boston Flower Exchange, and John McNamara, salesman for the Montrose Greenhouses have been sick with influenza.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are exceptionally busy. In spite of the heavy demand and

Satisfactory Market

Oct. 1.—The improvement in market conditions noted in last report has continued to a point where all conditions are highly satisfactory. The cool weather has improved the quality of all greenhouse grown stock. It is also good for shipping, which is a striking feature of the wholesale market. There is no more stock than what is required and prices are better for everything of medium to good quality. That there is a general shortage of stock in the surrounding country is shown by the increase in shipping trade. Buyers from the wholesale houses in other cities have been on the ground for some time picking up such stock they could for their home market. The closing of a number of greenhouses and the partial closing of some of the larger establishments means less stock and better prices for the season about to open. This will not be felt very much however until the 'Mum crops are over. These are large this season for reasons given in former reports.

The supply of Roses is not large but the quality is good. No more are coming in than each day's demand consumes. In red Milady is a favorite with buyers, while Mrs. Russell is the choice in dark pink. In an off color Ophelia has the field to itself. Columbia is holding its place as a novelty and commands an equal price with Russell. Prices are stiff, short stock bringing $3 to $4 per 100, with a proportionate increase for all the medium and better grades.

The Aster season is about over; not many good ones coming in, with the exception of some indoor grown stock. Some growers who intend to close have crops of late Asters in their houses. Gladioli are still holding on but the demand is fast waning. Easter Lilies have a good call and are a little short in supply; the stock offered brings the highest prices of the season. There are a good many Rubrum Lilies to be had and these are in good demand for funeral work. Most of the stock is cut short for this purpose. Violets are coming in but so far are not in large supply and meet with only moderate demand.

Carnations are in short supply. More could be used daily than the market offers and considering the quality prices are much higher at this season than they have ever been before. Some short stock sold as high as $4 per 100 the past week.

In orchids, Cattleyas are becoming more plentiful and will continue to increase in supply as the season goes on.

'Mums are fast becoming a leading feature in the market. Stock is coming in freely and in a much wider range of colors and varieties. Some really fine whites and pinks are to be had, although the best blooms so far have been mostly yellow. In two weeks more the season will be at its height and will continue so for several weeks, as the late flowering varieties have been planted more freely, the growers desiring to make the most of the season. California grown stock has already reached the market but has not come through in good shape; the delay in transit can be noted by the yellow foliage on some stock seen. As the transportation facilities for flowers under the supervision of the American Railway Express are not as good as they were under the old companies for the past two years, undoubtedly due to war conditions, it is safe to say that California grown stock will not cut much figure in the local market this season and the growers of the Middle West will have little to fear from this competition.

There is plenty of everything in greens with a tendency to advance the price on fancy Ferns.

Florists Make Fine Loan Showing

The sale of the Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds opened at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, when every bell and whistle and noise-making device in the city sounded for five minutes. The florists' division, with Fred Lautenschlager chairman, were at work immediately after the noise stopped and a wonderful showing was made for the trade in the first day's work. One enthusiastic worker drew $500 in cash from his bank with which to make the initial payment on the bonds for all who might not be prepared to purchase the first day. He has made a creditable showing.

T. E. Waters, supt. of the supply department of the Poehlman Bros. Co. has moved from his Summer home in Evanston to 3607 Wilton ave., on the north side.

Paul Reissig, a grower for the Chicago market, with greenhouses at Hollywood, on the La Grange car line, has his houses planted with 'Mums. He will close all his houses for the Winter as soon as the 'Mum crop is disposed of, which he thinks will be about the middle of November.

Walter Scott of La Grange Floral Co. will close all his houses except one in which he will carry over his stock of bedding plants for Spring trade. He will buy his cut flower supply from the Chicago wholesale market.

Martin Radtke, who conducted the National Grove greenhouses is entirely out of the business for the present and is employed by the Government in the construction of of a hospital which, it is said, when finished will be one of the largest in the country. It will be used for the returned wounded soldiers coming from overseas and will be on the site of the speedway track in Maywood.

A. J. Schmidt, who has a splendid range of glass in Riverside intends to run all his houses this Winter, having made the necessary arrangements for his coal supply, including screenings. Mr. Schmidt registered on Sept. 12 and takes pleasure in showing his registration card, which he calls his "ticket to Berlin". His son A. J. Jr. volunteered his services to the Government and is in training for the operation of a field tank.

Lieut. William George Asmus, son of George Asmus is at home, from Camp Grant, on sick leave.

Earl L. Hempstead, formerly of the firm of Hempstead & Callahan Bloomington, Ill. has been in the city several days giving demonstrations in some of the greenhouses of a new insecticide called "Insectomus."

The prospects for a good attendance at the F. T. D. convention in Cleveland, Oct. 8 to 10, are excellent. Several of the wholesalers as well as prominent retailers will attend.

The next meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club is scheduled to be held at the Randolph Hotel, Wells and Randolph sts., on Thursday eve., Oct. 10. As this conflicts with the meeting of the F. T. D. in Cleveland the same week it is being suggested that it might be well to postpone the club meeting till the following week.

Geo. Kuehner, a representative of the St. Louis wholesale cut flower market, has been in the city several days on business.

Swan Peterson, Rockford, Ill. was in the city Saturday purchasing material for boiler improvements in his greenhouse. Mrs. M. C. Sadewater of Rockford is looking over the wholesale supply market this week being on a visit to a brother in this city.

Illinois is to have its first great Apple show, to be held in connection with the sixty-third convention of the Illinois State Horti. Society which will meet at the Sherman house in this city on Nov. 19 to 22. The premium list is already out and can be had from the secretary A. M. Augustine, Normal, Ill.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The market was brisk last week, especially on Friday and Saturday, when funeral work kept florists hustling both to obtain stock and to fill orders. Cold weather has checked production so there is a short supply. Several frosts in this vicinity have reduced outdoor stock. Roses are more plentiful than other flowers, with Columbia, Milady, Richmond, Shawyer and the Killarney in the lead both as to quality and quantity. Hoosier Beauty of irreproachable quality are arriving. Russell is very scarce. Carnations sell at especially high prices because scarce and of their quality. Snapdragons are fairly plentiful. Many florists are relying upon these to help them out. Asters are decidedly poor, and Gladioli are practically out of the running. Few Lilies are offered. Mums are few and far between because planted late.

People are Talking

George M. Cohen, representing the firm of Wm. Porter Bros., of New York City, called on members of the craft last week.

Miss S. L. Nelson, secretary for W. J. and M. S. Vesey, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

Herman Leitz of the New Haven Floral Co., an active worker on the Liberty Loan team, reports success.

Miss Margueite Flick has returned from Huntington, Ind., where she secured an order for decoration and bouquets for an early October wedding.

The New Haven Floral Co. reports enough coal for next Winter at its greenhouses, as they have already stored their 50 per cent. allotment, and filled their bins with stock, according to Government ruling.

Lilies are missed more than other flowers this Fall. They are almost no factor on the market.

The Style Show, an annual event, will be held during the second week of October. Flowers will play a prominent part in decorations. Orders for these are being booked.

The Flick Floral Co. has finished the installation of its new vacuum heating system. It has its full allotment of coal, supplemented with slack.

Paul Shive, son of Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., enlisted in the Home Guards Militia, and is looking forward to entering the National Army soon.

The drafting of workmen will make a big gap in the large working force of W. J. & M. S. Vesey as many had to register under the new law.

Retailers and wholesalers report an improvement in business during September as compared with other years, and especially last year. In general, prices have shown a good increase. Many retailers have booked wedding orders for October. Prompt all affairs, and the Style Show, give promise that October will be a lively and profitable month. D. B.

Increased Demand

Oct. 1. The market has undergone a remarkable change, a change that has never been experienced before in this market for this time of year. Starting with last Thursday the demand increased to such an extent that by Saturday it was impossible to fill orders. The long week-end alone was sufficient to clean up the supply, not counting the shipping trade which increased volume of business for the week-end. In other years gone by the market here has always been oversupplied with flowers at this season. There are several reasons for the sudden shortening up of the market, among them being the fact that the Duke's supply is probably 50 per cent. less than last year, due to decreased plantings and with the cool weather of the past two weeks the cut has been materially reduced. Once again, Mums are not yet a factor, as the only varieties to be had thus far, are Smith's Advance and Golden Glow, and the supply of these is negligible. There are scarcely any Carnations to be had and with Asters as a rule off the list, Roses are the mainstay of the market. Even the latter, however, are rather short in supply. There are a few Gladioli, a quantity of Cosmos, and an increasing supply of Cattleyas. All in all everything in flowers is selling up close including greens. Asparagus plumosus is taking fast. Conditions are such that the market would be considerably improved with an increased supply.

Liberty Loan

The florists' quota for the Fourth Liberty Loan for this district calls for $250,000. The committee in charge of the florists section of which Arthur A. Niessen is chairman and Robert Kift secretary, is working hard to obtain this quota in the shortest time possible and to oversubscribe it. The committee men have all been assigned their respective sections and are asked to make returns before Oct. 6.

Douglas Laird, formerly with Henry A. Dreer Inc. and now with the Royal Flying Corps somewhere over there has been writing very interesting letters from the fighting line. He states that the percentage of deaths in the aviation corps is due more to engine trouble, collisions and poor landings than to combats, the number of deaths from the latter cause being small in comparison.

Wesley Clark, one of the old regulars of the S. S. Pennock Co., has resigned to go into war work.

Sydney Bayersdorfer comments on the unusually heavy demand for artificial flowers, partly attributed to the shortage of fresh flowers.

All the retail stores report much funeral work.

Advices received by the seed houses show that a shipment of French and Dutch bulbs are on the way and may be looked for at any time.

George Carpenter has his houses filled with a fine grown lot of pot Mums for the Fall trade.

Club Pushes Loan

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was given over to the boosting of the Liberty Loan and an urgent appeal was made by Chairman Arthur A. Niessen for the Florists as a body to raise the stipulated quota of $250,000. H. A. Coles of the Fuel Administration was the speaker of the evening and gave statistics and facts concerning the Government's requirements and the production of coal and fuel.

The speaker gave specific instances of the conservation of coal as practised in some of the large coal-consuming establishments. Mr. Coles' talk pointed to one thing and that was thrift. "Every shovelful counts."

Robert Craig and P. O'Mara of New York responded to Mr. Cole giving their assurance that the florists were backing up the Administration to their fullest ability.

The newly elected officers are: Pres., Mark P. Mills; Vice Pres., E. A. Harvey; Treas., George Craig; Secy., Robt. Kift. The exhibit of the evening was a splendid vase of the new Rose Columbia grown by Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, Pa.

We regret greatly to learn of the death on Sept. 25 of the wife of S. S. Skidelsky, the latter head of the well-known firm of S. S. Skidelsky & Co. Mrs. Skidelsky's death was due to pneumonia, after an illness of six days. The late Miss Skidelsky was married to Mr. Skidelsky on Sept. 24, 1916, after he had been a widower for eight years.

F. E. Ads Give Good Results

Denver, Col.

The wholesale cut flower market shows gratifying improvement, with stock of all kinds cleaning up well each day. A decided shortening of supply has also occurred and in some lines it is often found difficult to fill orders. In Roses this is especially true of American Beauty, Francis Scott Key and Russell.

Carnations are in active demand. Though not yet noteworthy, the quality is steadily improving and some good stock is arriving; not enough, however, to satisfy the brisk call. The season for Gladioli is nearing its close. Not much stock is arriving and the demand also has fallen off. Easter Lilies are in sufficient supply, and yellow and white 'Mums have made their appearance.

The city retail business is picking up, there having been a distinct gain in activity since the last report.

About Town

B. F. Gillis and Harry Collins of the Park Floral Co. have returned to business after spending a pleasant vacation.

The Denver Wholesale Florist Co. is receiving a few good 'Mums, the varieties being Golden Glow and Smith's Advance.

Herbert Clawson of the American Flower Shop has been sick for several days, but we hope to see him back at his post soon again.

Chas. N. Page, proprietor of the Bright Spot greenhouses, has bought the business formerly conducted by Davison & Western, at Fifth ave. and Josephine st. This is a modern, retail place of about 25,000ft. of glass, iron frame houses in A-1 condition, with a brick store and office building and a nine room residence in a district of good homes. Both Mr. Davison and Mr. Western came from Des Moines, Ia., where they were connected with the Iowa Seed Co., of which Mr. Page was president. Mr. Page spent 37 years in the seed business. Mr. Page has been at Point Loma, Cal., for the last five years, recovering from a nervous breakdown, but now is ready to go back into the trade again.

At the greenhouses of the Park Floral Co. American Beauty Roses and Keys look strong and healthy. This firm is growing more Carnations this season than ever before. The houses are all planted and stock is doing finely. A house of Snapdragon, pink, white and yellow is showing color. 'Mums are also showing color. In the orchid house six fine Cattleyas were ready to be cut. The new one-ton truck is found very useful. It is in action every day.

At the city park the flower beds were a mass of bloom during the week of Sept. 23, and well worthy of a visit by flower lovers. Cannas, Geraniums, Salvias, Zinnias, Verbenas, Coxcombs, Marigolds and Sweet Williams were included in the collection. Credit is due Superintendent John Russell for the excellent display.

The Hamlin Dahlia Gardens are advertising in the daily papers, urging customers to come and select bulbs now from fine varieties in bloom.

Elmer Grover of Elitch Gardens was married on Sept. 10, to Miss Bessie Widen. The trade extends its best wishes to the happy couple.

Recent visitors were Carl Espelin of Espelin & Warren, Fort Collins, Colo., and George Fleischer, Pueblo, Colo.

A False Alarm

The Denver Post of Sept. 27 published a list of non-essential industries purporting to be given out by the Government and which included the florist in a list of 25 other industries and occupations. This identical list was published by the newspapers of the country on Thursday, Aug. 22. Immediately after, W. F. Gude, the Washington representative of the S. A. F., took the matter up with General Crowder who, on Sept.6, assured Mr. Gude in a personal interview that the florists had not been classed as non-essential, nor was there any idea of doing so. Coming direct from General Crowder Mr. Gude said this statement should in a measure alleviate the discontent among the florists, especially the heads of departments. This information appeared in the issue of THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 14, and florists of this city should be reassured accordingly.

Cleveland, O.

The next meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club will be held at the Hollenden on Oct. 7 at 8 p. m.

The demand for all flowers greatly exceeded the supply; the shortage of stock at times being acute. Everything coming into the market clears up at good prices. As yet 'Mums have not begun to cut any figure. Some choice Roses of the varieties Russell, Hadley, Ophelia, Winnett, Columbia and Ward are to be had in limited quantities. Carnations are getting more plentiful but are still short stemmed. Asters are practically over and the last cuts of Gladioli will soon be made. The cool weather is retarding Dahlias and in some sections of Northern Ohio frost has seriously damaged the crop.

Tritomas, Larkspurs, Helianthus and Marigolds are the best of the outdoor flowers and sell readily. The call for Easter Lilies is heavy and the light supply will doubtless continue until after the 'Mum season. Both Valley and orchids are scarce. Greens are plentiful.

September Business

A large number of funeral orders throughout the entire month enabled most of the retailers to do a large and satisfactory business during September. Receipts would have been even larger had it not been for an entire week of rain toward the latter part of the month which depressed trade considerably. Inability to procure the needed stock at times also doubtless limited sales.

Wholesalers report a volume of business slightly in advance of the records for the corresponding month a year ago. City trade was well sustained throughout the month and out-of-town buying, both of cut flowers and supplies, was particularly good. In the early part of the month low prices prevailed, but changed quickly as the supply lessened.

Ready for the F. T. D.

Final arrangements for the F. T. D. convention to be held at the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland, Oct. 8 and 9, are completed and a record-breaking attendance is anticipated. The fact that all florists whether members of the F. T. D. or not are requested to be present, is sufficient guarantee of that.

The window prizes offered by the Kennicott Bros. Co., C. H. Grakelow and Sam Seligman being respectively $100, a silver cup and $25 are expected to produce some fine displays. At first it was thought that the contest would be restricted to organization members but it is announced that it is open to all retailers of the city.

Judging by the way specimens of advertising are coming in it may safely be said that the publicity committee, of which H. P. Knoble is chairman, will have a busy time making the display. This exhibition of the advertising of various firms will be one of the many features of the meeting and should be given careful study by every florist present.

One of our florists possessing a lively sense of humor has facetiously dubbed our Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson "Mary Pickford," and no one gets more fun out of it than the tireless publicity expert herself. The Cleveland type of co-operative advertising will occupy a conspicuous place at the convention.

General Chairman Brown has appointed Frank Friedley, George Bate and James McLaughlin to stimulate the interest of florists not members of the F. T. D. in the matter of suitable window trims for convention week. The plan is to have the association and its aims advertised in the window displays of every flower store in Cleveland and its environs, which will also serve as a token in recognition of the presence of the country's ablest florists.

The next meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club will be held at the Hollenden, Monday, Oct. 7, at 8 p.m. A number of leading F. T. D. members are expected to be present at this meeting, so all members are urged to turn out and give them a hearty welcome.

Mrs. George Barber, wife of the former florist at Beloit Ohio, died on Sept. 25, at her home in that city. Death was caused by Bright's disease. Mrs. Barber was in her 52d year. She was the mother of A. B. Barber, of the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, and Lottie B. Barber. Interment was held on Sept. 27, at Sebring, Ohio.

Trade Report

The long predicted shortage of flowers is now apparent. 'Mum season will be the only relief during the coming season. Shortage of coal and scarcity of labor will doubtless result in shortage of stock and high prices. Lilium giganteum is retailing at $5 per doz. and wholesaling at $15 to $20 per 100. Fancy Carnations bring $3 to $4 per 100 wholesale and maintain $1 per doz. retail. 'Mums for some unknown reason are much later than last season and are bringing $3 to $4 per doz. for stock ordinarily worth $2.50. Roses are decidedly off crop. Best grades bring $15 to $20 per 100; medium $10 to $12, and shorts $3 to $4. The Northern Michigan Aster crop is about gone at $3 to $4 per 100. Very few Dahlias are being shipped in at $3 to $4 per 100. A few home grown orchids sell readily at 40c. to 50c. each. The first 'Mum plants of the season to arrive retail at $2 to $4 each. If it is possible for any grower to produce more stock, let him do so, for he certainly will have an outlet at good prices.

Bird's Eye View

The funeral of Capt. Hammond, the British aviator, called for many flower pieces in which the Circle Flower Shop, A. Wiegand's Sons Co. and Bertermann Bros. Co. mainly participated.

Will Roepke returned from Rochester, Ind., with a nice string of fish and a dozen wild ducks.

Carl Sonnenschmidt is home from a vacation at the St. Clair Flats.

Walter Bertermann is on an automobile trip to Los Angeles, Cal. He expects to be gone about a month.

About ten of the local boys are included in the present draft; some have already gone into preliminary training.

The October meeting of the State Florists' Ass'n. of Indiana will no doubt be largely attended as much interesting business is scheduled.

Ben Feldner of Zanesville was a recent visitor.

RYE, N. Y.—The Ford Nurseries, Inc., recently reorganized, has secured the services as grower of Alexis L. Thunberg, well-known florist. He formerly held a similar position with E. W. Fengar, Irvington, N. J.

Caught on the Fly

Julius Brotje is making his usual Fall killing with his Michaelmas Daisy (Perennial Aster). He also has a new Gladiolus he imported from Holland that outstrips all reds. The flowers are as large as Panama and there are as many as nine out at one time which makes a spike over a foot long. It keeps well, but the retail stores hardly know this quality as they don't keep them; they sell them!

Harry Bamford, of the Martin & Forbes Co., is now in the employ of the Willamette Iron & Steel Co.; timekeeper in its steel ship yard.

Liberty Loan week saw several florists on the solicitor list: James Forbes, Max M. Smith and the writer. Business was not rushing so they could be well spared.

Clarke Bros. were the first to ship in early California 'Mums, which arrived in fair shape; but the weather is still somewhat too warm.

Miss Else Schnapp, formerly with Smyth & Co., of Chicago, is now the first permanent lady employee with Clarke Bros. She has been a florist since childhood and is stepping in her father's footsteps. No wonder her father is proud of her. H. NIKLAS.

Columbus, O.

With most florists in this section September was the best in the business. The greatest difficulty is to get stock to fill orders. Nearly all outdoor flowers, except a few Dahlias that escaped frost, are done. So Roses and Carnations have to fill most orders. The rather large cuts of Roses of good quality coming in are used up quickly so there are not nearly enough to go around. Carnations coming in only slowly bring 3c. to 4c. wholesale and are always ordered days ahead. Every florist expects flowers to be scarce during the coming Winter, more than they are now. The grower who has the stock will get the prices. 'Mums this season are rather late; it will be several weeks before they figure much on the cutflower market.

Peeps in Florists' Windows

The Munk Floral Co. had a Liberty Loan window that caused much attraction.

Emil Metzmaier is confined in the Mercy Hospital undergoing an operation. Mrs. M. Metzmaier is also confined in the same hospital. Both are much improved.

Mr. White, bookkeeper of the Columbus Floral Co., has been drafted in the army. This firm is employing many girls in its greenhouses. Frank Miller, superintendent, says they are very satisfactory.

Prof. Hottes took a class of his students to Dayton to see the flower attraction of that city. W. J. ENGEL.

Koil Kinks
How to Comb Them Out

IF coils would only kink like this coil, anybody could tell it was kinked.

But coils kink all by themselves in their own little way.

One of their kinkiest kinks is air pocketing.

There are a lot of systems right this minute kinked that way. They are costing shovelful after shovelful, ton after ton of coal that they needn't.

Kinks may be prevented and overcome.

We do both.

While you are slow firing is the time to study your heating troubles.

Solving heating troubles is right in our line of business.

When shall we come and find out whether your heat is kinked or kinkless?

Send for our Coal Eater Detective. He will find Kinks where you would never think a Kink could be.

What he will charge for his expert service will be small in comparison to what he may save you.

War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY

Rousing Convention at Cleveland, O., OCTOBER 8 AND 9

ALL OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

1919 MEETING IN BUFFALO

The first day's session opened on Tuesday morning at o'clock in the ballroom of the Hotel Hollenden, which s beautifully decorated. The decorations were of a triotic character. The ceilings were draped with nerican flags and flags of the Allies. On the stage were anged palms and ferns and a great vase of Premier ses grown by E. G. Hill Co. Three sides of the hall re lined with advertising matter, arranged by H. P. noble. There was a good attendance. Canadian dele- tes were prominent, among them W. J. Gammage and ed Dicks, West Hamilton, London; Geo. M. Geraghty, J. Higgins, J. C. Harrison and H. G. Dillemuth, Toronto; H. King, Winnipeg; Frank McKenna, Montreal, and ank Smith, Hamilton, all wearing large Canadian ensigns their breasts.

The convention was called to order by Fred W. C. Brown, airman of the local committee of arrangements. Mr. rown emphasized the business character of the conven- on, saying that the delegates were there for business and ot for pleasure. The opening by Mr. Brown was followed y a salute to the Colors of the United States and of anada, flags being presented by Mrs. Frank Friedley and Irs. Herman Knoble, the audience rising and singing merica. The meeting was now turned over to President ude, who delivered his address as follows:

President's Address

Permit me to thank you for your presence here this morning hich is an evidence of your paramount interest in this work, hich I claim is not only of a material nature, but of that higher nd nobler calling, of doing unto others as you would they hould do unto you, for the betterment of all mankind through- ut the world, irrespective of any financial gain.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

The last year has been an eventful one. Many unexpected roblems have arisen among the growers and producers of lowers throughout the country; consequently, the producers nd distributors have also been much disturbed, and finally he retail florists, whose interest we represent, have had all orts of unusual problems confronting them since the meeting n Detroit last year, but in general the retail florists have not much to complain of so far, but much to be thankful for, since ve are in a business and profession which has many problems o solve, such as no other business has, and many problems hich each one must solve for himself, largely on account of he peculiar conditions which arise and the unusual requests hat are made of every retail florist. Therefore, these gather- ngs, such as we have here this morning, are more needed now han ever before in the history of our business, because there s no way that we know of that will better facilitate the light- ning of our burdens than the fact of getting in touch with each other here on this floor and evolving new thoughts and new ideas which should be brought out here and can be dis- cussed to our mutual advantage.

Telegraph Delivery Orders

I believe this business has more than doubled in volume in twelve months over any previous twelve months since the existence of our organization; hence, the necessity of more up-to-date methods of doing business among many of our members, and especially non-members. I refer particularly to the transmission of orders by telephone, telegraph or mail, apparently conducted by many of our members and non- members, where no copy is kept of the same that can be used to settle disputes with the telegraph companies and parties who receive orders to execute. Quite a few cases have come to my notice in the past twelve months that would have been much easier adjusted if copy of the original order could have been produced.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Another important item which many of our florists seem to neglect is not promptly acknowledging orders, so that the sender of the order can satisfy his customer that his com- mission has been attended to.

Wm. F. Gude
Re-elected President of the F. T. D.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Another item of serious reflection is the careless manner in which many florists seem to keep their accounts. I know from personal experience that it is frequently necessary to write to florists and ask them if they received an order, why they have not acknowledged it, if they have filled it, and will they not kindly send a statement so that we can settle up. All of this would not be necessary, and it should not exist, if our members would be more accurate in transmitting orders and more prompt in acknowledging the same and sending out bills at once in accordance with our constitution and by-laws. By so doing it might inspire our non-members, to whom it is fre- quently necessary to send orders, because there may be no F. T. D. member in that particular locality.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Another item which is of utmost importance is the prompt and careful filling of orders when they are received and the little details and instructions which are to go with them carried out to the letter. It is really deplorable to think that any employer or employee should fill an order any old way with the idea in his mind, "What difference does it make; nobody will ever know how much was paid for it and I will execute it to make the biggest profit, irrespective of whom it may hurt." The motto of every individual or corporate member of this organization should be "He who serves best profits most."

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Is there anything in the transmission of orders that will inspire more confidence in your customer than to write the order of transmission in his presence, give him the name of the party you are going to send it to, if desired, and insert the exact amount of money which you received, plus telegraph charges or charges deducted, transmit the order and take copy of same for future reference?

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Several cases have come to our notice where orders have been executed for less than the amount transmitted and some- times with inferior flowers and service, without any explanation to the sender of the order.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Are flowers non-essential? I should answer positively NO! Because flowers signify life itself and we know that without flowers there would be no fruit of any kind. So flowers are used to cheer the human race everywhere, from childhood to old age, and are used to express our sympathies when our loved ones finally pass over to that great beyond of a higher life. There are no words in our language that express thoughts sympathies, kindly feelings and good cheer like flowers can, especially in these trying times with so many loved ones away from their homes serving their country for you and me. Mem- bers of families become sick or injured or pass away. It is then that flowers play their greatest part and in many cases do more to heal the wounds inflicted than any other agency in existence.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Oh, what more wonderful part can our association play right now, when our loved ones are hurt or become sick on foreign soil, than to send to mother or nearest kin a few flowers to cheer and help heal the wounds of those who are fighting our battles and giving their all.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Indeed, I am told that our Canadian brothers have worked up a wonderful and beautiful custom and sentiment along these lines, and if there is no profit, counting our gain in dollars and cents, could anyone imagine anything more beautiful or inspiring or more beneficial in upholding the morale of our soldiers and sailors all over the world than telling their mothers and fathers in God's own language that we stand unitedly backing them?

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Foreign Relations

The possibility of sending flowers and doing good to all mankind all over the world is simply immense, and there is opportunity everywhere awaiting to be grasped. Why not amend our by-laws so as to cover international conditions for the whole universe?

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

The Use of Flowers in War Times

Indeed, they were essential in ordinary times and they are much more so in war times when the world seems sad, for the beauty and fragrance of flowers give strength to the spirit and lightens the heavy heart of sorrow, and those who supply the world with them at this time are benefactors and deserve the praise of their fellow beings.

Window Displays

The movement that was started some time ago to stimulate window displays and recognize ability in this direction has been given another forward step at this convention. Prizes have been offered by Sam Seligman and Kennicott Bros. of Chicago and Charles H. Grakelow of Philadelphia. Any florist who will carefully study the florists' window displays in this city will no doubt get ideas, which when taken home and put into effect, will bring him more than his trip cost to Cleveland.

Associate Membership

Secretary Pochelon has heretofore brought up the question of making some provision in our constitution for associate memberships. There are few associations of any importance in any line of industry that have not found it expedient to receive associate members. No doubt this question will be favorably considered by this convention, but it remains to be determined the condition on which such associate membership will be received. In connection with this is the kindred matter of foreign membership. Perhaps at this time, while the war is in progress, there may be some difficulty in adjusting this matter, but it should not be allowed to sleep as its importance is manifest to all.

Relations with the S. A. F. & O. H.

The fundamental aims of the F. T. D. and the parent organization, the S. A. F., are the same. Unquestionably the two organizations can mutually assist and forward each other's purposes and objects. This is forcibly illustrated thus far in the Publicity Campaign.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Finance

The financial condition of this association, as shown by the reports of the secretary and treasurer, are highly satisfactory, but no association can afford to neglect the future, and your president would recommend that steps be taken at the earliest possible date toward the establishment of a permanent fund. This will give the association better standing and is in all respects highly favorable.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Membership Present and Prospective

The condition of the membership will be reported in detail by Secretary Pochelon and I need not refer to same, except to say that our membership has been growing steadily. During the past six years it has increased to more than ten times the initial enrollment of 57. Members should lose no opportunity to interest and bring in new members. In union there is strength, and the more we increase our membership the greater will be our usefulness to the public and the greater the rewards we may expect to derive.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Cost Finding and Overhead

In the great campaign that has been going on in this country, notably in the last five years, looking toward greater efficiency in all lines, investigations into costs and overhead have been playing a considerably greater and greater part. This is a matter which we cannot afford to ignore, and too much credit cannot be given to the work of those far-seeing members who have been interesting themselves to bring this matter properly before you. Your president predicts that the work of this convention will see another forward step taken in this matter, with corresponding benefit to our entire membership.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Business Conservation

Conservation is a term that has been used so often during the present war that we sometimes pass it over too lightly and fail to appreciate its full meaning and its vital importance. The fast crowding events of the last three years have only served to more strongly emphasize the necessity of conserving in all lines. We understand the conservation of coal and of fuel generally. We realize the necessity for conservation of food and of all of our natural resources, but it is just as necessary to conserve manpower and capital and to stop waste wherever it may be found.

It has been well said that the cost of merchandise and overhead and operating expenses have gone up and will increase still further. In order to maintain normal profits, it is obvious that it is necessary to cut down expenses as far as possible, stop losses, avoid lost motion, eliminate waste and work faster. No store can hold on to the old, wornout methods and yet operate at the speed that is required by present day conditions. The war has called thousands of trained workers out of stores; the new employees are untrained. One of the most difficult problems that the florist of today has to meet is how to carry on business more efficiently than ever before, yet with less help, and at the same time avoid all waste. The florist owes it to himself, as well as to his country, to make certain that neither his time, his goods nor his money are wasted. If he is to actively cooperate with our government in this crisis, and at the same time benefit himself, he must conserve labor, eliminate waste and speed up his business. He can only achieve this through evolving a more efficient system than he has heretofore used.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Aims and Objects of the Association

A writer in one of our prominent trade papers recently had this to say of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association: "It stands for the closer union of retail florists for mutual help, a standardized method of bookkeeping and accounting, a better system of credits, enlarged sales channels, the exchange of the best thought on floral matters; in short, it means the breaking down of cut-throat competition and the substitution of genuine cooperation, to the end that the florists' business everywhere shall develop more normally, healthfully and broadly."

That portion of humanity which has not as yet been made receptive to the business tendency of the age is prone to consider such aims too altruistic, too Utopian for any use. But the fact that, in rapid succession, men and firms, not hitherto actively enjoying its benefits, are becoming members (to see how it pans out) is the prima facie evidence that the association is on the high road to success. When these renew their membership, it is their usual comment that they are sorry they did not join years before because they have profited so largely in their first year's experience. The history of the association further shows that scarcely has a member dropped out on account of being dissatisfied with the results derived from membership.

Flowers in Hospitals

At a recent meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Mrs. J. Clark Curtin, chairman of the Committee on Home and Overseas Relief of the National League for Woman's Service, described the distribution of flowers to sick and wounded soldiers and sailors at the different hospitals in and around New York. She expressed the thanks of her organization to the New York Florists' Club who had given liberally to aid this work, and read several letters from the wounded who had been cheered by gifts of flowers. This is true of another Committee, notably in Washington, D. C.

W. L. Rock
Re-elected Treasurer of the F. T. D.

Non-essentials

Charles A. Hinsch, president of the American Bankers' Association, at a recent convention of that body held in Chicago, Ill., has this to say of non-essentials: "Every single line of activity runs into all the others. Every question is tied up with all the others—questions of banking, financing, transportation by land and sea, and by lake, river and canal as well, questions of industrial and agricultural production, of wages, efficiency, of social content and social unrest, and the still subtler questions concerned with the health, vigor, education and morality of the people—all are linked together. So it is that we cannot conduct the war without also conducting 'the war after the war.' It is not permitted that we live only for today. Prudence demands that the work of next week and next month be so ordered that the work of next week and next month be developed rationally and normally. Whatever our inclinations, we find ourselves inevitably looking forward."

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Business Ethics

Questions are constantly arising between members that may lead to differences that will prove embarrassing unless they receive broad-minded and intelligent treatment. The policy of this association has been, and it is hoped will continue to be, broad-minded and liberal. It is recognized that this is an organization for service and that if we are to be of any use to ourselves or to our communities, we must at all times furnish the very best services at the least expense consistent with fair and reasonable profits.

"Say it with Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Telegrams of regret and greeting were read from Grandy, Florist, Norfolk, Va., Chas. H. Totty, president of the S. A. F., C. H. Grakelow, F. S. Webb, A. F. Borden, Albe Knopf, Redondo Floral Co. and W. L. Rock, all deep regretting their enforced absence. On motion of Geor Asmus a telegram of sympathy was sent to Mr. Grakelo together with a floral remembrance.

Treasurer W. L. Rock's report was read by Secreta Pochelon who announced the investment of the associ tion's funds, of $1000 in Liberty Bonds in Kansas Cit $500 in Washington, $500 in Detroit, and $500 in Clevelan

A balance on hand of $12,989.87 in the treasury of th F. T. D. was announced.

The convention was then enlivened by a sextette soldiers in khaki singing patriotic songs, urging Liber Loan subscriptions. They were given a vote of thanl and presented with a unique bouquet made of cigars ar cigarettes, designed by Max Schling, New York Cit He referred to the bouquet as a few everlasting flowers show everlasting love for the soldier boys.

Secretary Pochelon then presented his report, whi read as follows:

Secretary Pochelon's Report

Mr. President, Ladies, F. T. D. Members, retail florists ar friends:

Our worthy President, Wm. F. Gude, has instructed me n to weary you with a long, tiresome paper but to read you few lines from the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

I have never had the pleasure of watching our Clevelar boys at the card table do any plain dealing, but I can tho oughly assure you that they can trim other florists good ar plain in bowling.

Our President has given me strict orders against talking you in Billy Sunday style; nevertheless I hope that when get through you will all walk up the sawdust trail to the pulp and solemnly swear allegiance to our organization and th you will faithfully promise to go home from this Clevelar meeting to work, cooperate and preach the gospel of th F. T. D. to your fellow florists.

The F. T. D. Canal Boat

The text of my sermon today will be "The F. T. D. Can Boat." At first I thought of starting with Noah's Ark, bu time limit prevents this. The canal boat F. T. D. was saile by that able captain, J. A. Valentine, but it was a cumbersom affair. The crew he had to work this boat with was absolutel too small and, besides, it carried too many passengers, wh even in the roughest kind of weather would not give a helpin hand. His annual allowance was only about $205 and no on can blame him for becoming downhearted and tired of his jol He appointed Irwin Bertermann as captain and the latte looked around for a new crew to sail this boat.

Captain Bertermann and his crew took it into their own hands to sell this old boat over the heads of the directors and bought a Great Lakes steamer, which a great many of our members thought was just a pleasure steamer, and more and more passengers were crowded on board this ship, with very little increase in the number of the crew.

This F. T. D. ship sailed around the Great Lakes and prospered. Finally it stopped at Chicago and Captain Gude, who was appointed at that most enthusiastic meeting in the hot month of August, on the hottest day of the year during the S. A. F. Convention at Houston, Texas, took command. He soon felt that we ought to have a good sized ocean going boat to carry our passengers, which by that time numbered five hundred and the crew about fifty.

Things were going along fairly well with the exception of here and there a sneaky submarine or the noise of an undermine explosion, and after sailing this boat for about a year he could find his bearings almost blindfolded. He called a meeting at Detroit of all the directors and stock-holders of the F. T. D. ship and this meeting was so enthusiastic that he accepted the Captaincy for another year. After consulting with Purser Will L. Rock he said that the time would soon come when we would buy a boat of still better type, and behold last week orders came from Washington that out F. T. D. ship, from the Cleveland meeting on, shall be, as it ought to be, to measure up to the spirit of our great country, a fast cruiser, submarine and mine destroyer, burning oil in order to save coal for the florists.

I wired back to our Captain, "What will we do with our big bunch of passengers?" A quick, snappy official reply came back: "Transfer every F. T. D. passenger to cruiser." Reason in war time no war ship shall carry passengers, Make a working crew out of the whole outfit; in other words make every F. T. D. member "work or fight."

Although he sighted small mines, treacherous submarines and other obstacles in the way of this last F. T. D. cruiser, our Captain, who is not afraid of anything, managed to run right over them without as much as doing the least little harm to our hull.

Can you find a better or more courageous captain than Capt. Bill Gude? And as we are at war would we make such a sad mistake as to change our country's President at Washington? No. Would you think it wise to change presidents in our F. T. D. work? No. Rather than make a change we should try get a still better boat and become a volunteer in the crew. Become a worker like First Mate Philip Breitmeyer.

Ladies and Gentlemen, let this sermon sink deep into your thoughts. Every F. T. D. member can do a great deal to keep this cruiser full speed ahead at all times.

Mr. Pochelon then submitted some

Facts and Figures

The finances of the F. T. D. are now in fine shape. Seven years ago our income annually was $205 and we were then about $385 to the bad for the year. We have today in our guaranty fund nearly $9000 invested safely by our treasurer in Liberty Bonds and other securities. We have bought $1000 in Liberty Bonds from Kansas City, the home of our treasurer,

October Notes

During October we start into Winter conditions. While we may have spells of Summer weather we are every bit as likely to experience a touch of real Winter conditions before the end of the month. For this we should be prepared—just a light dose of frost will ruin a batch of Stevia ready to be cut; it will do the same thing to other tender plants—watch the ventilators, doors, the fires and the frames outdoors. I don't know of anything more important for us to bear in mind than the help question. We are very apt to keep on propagating or laying out our work as we have been used to for many years in the past, forgetting or paying little attention to the fact that it may be impossible to obtain help to do the work. To propagate 10,000 Geraniums or transplant thousands of seedlings in itself isn't a big job, or, rather, nothing to be compared with what it takes to attend to these plants later on. In other words don't undertake too much; there isn't a plant we grow under glass that will get along without attention, and in order to get anything out of it more is required than just attention. All this means work. You are better off in cutting down a little on the number of plants to be grown than to try and grow the same amount as usual and not be able properly to take care of things. Things will be worse before they get better in the way of getting help to do work for you. You will have to adjust yourself to existing conditions and the sooner this is being done the better. It is well worth your while to consider it; there are many establishments already showing the effects of lack of help and the small grower will feel it every bit as much as the larger ones. Some of us will help do firing this Winter who haven't done anything of this sort for many years. Lucky the man who is still able and willing to do it.

Carnations

With many retail growers Carnations during the Summer months can be made to pay, and especially is this true with the man located in the smaller cities and towns where most people have a little garden of their own. Whenever in such localities a spray or funeral design is wanted, Roses or Carnations have the preference over Asters, Gladioli or anything else the customer may herself have in her own garden. This will always be that way; the florist is supposed to furnish something different. I know of several growers around the Chicago market who had some fine field grown Carnations on hand after their houses were all planted, but they wouldn't sell this surplus for it paid them better to wholesale the flowers—for which they received 2c.—which in many instances made the plants bring in from 12c. to 16c. each instead of 5c., had they disposed of them for benching. It isn't always that one strikes the market under present conditions and yet I am sure it pays to grow on a certain number of plants just for the purpose of furnishing flowers during the Summer months and the present is the proper time to root a batch of cuttings for this purpose. Practically every flower stem has two or more good cuttings at the base; just remove them and place in sand; no knife or cutting away of a part of the foliage is necessary. Every one will root and if you keep the young stock in 2½in. until January, pinch and keep shifted. After that flowering plants can be had by the end of June and they will improve and keep on flowering up to the end of October.

Geraniums

Plants for Easter

If you have rooted cuttings out in frames these can remain there for some time yet with proper glass protection and with favorable weather maybe long enough to wait for the 'Mums to get out of the way. However, stock rooted in the propagating bench inside should not be allowed to suffer and as soon as well supplied with roots should be potted up and placed on a sunny bench. Don't be under the impression that any old place is good enough for the plants. Stock having been allowed to suffer is hard to get back into shape later on. To grow a good Geranium the plants must at all times have the proper care and cuttings potted up now, and kept going all Winter, will not only grow into extra fine plants by Spring but furnish several cuttings. I am sure it will pay any florist to put forth extra effort this coming Winter to grow on a fair sized batch of pink and white Geraniums for next Easter. While we were never able to dispose of many flowering plants of Geraniums during the Winter months there is no trouble in selling any amount of them when it gets near Easter and after that date. Try to grow on a nice lot of plants; start now and take good care of them. Bear in mind that hardly ever do all of the plants come into flower the same time so if you want, for instance, 300 plants for Easter week you should grow at least 500 of them. If you haven't good stock to start out with why wait with ordering until November or December? Do it now while the weather is in your favor.

For Use Next Spring

There are always some of us who keep on selling out too close in Spring. We know that we must reserve just so many Geranium stock plants in order to get ready with more plants for the next year's demand and we also know just what a time we had the year before in not having put aside enough stock. But in spite of all that, being offered a good price tempts us to let go of the plants in Spring instead of reserving them and we trust to good luck in obtaining cuttings in some way the following Fall. For those short on stock and wishing to propagate as many plants as possible the best way by far is to take the old plants and bench them. In that way with a Carnation house temperature you can obtain good sized cuttings all Winter which is not possible from plants in pots, at least not anywhere near the quantities bench plants will furnish. May be you haven't room at this time in which case the plants can be kept in pots until the Chrysanthemums are cut. If wanted, the plants in the benches after having furnished cuttings up to the end of February, can be lifted and again potted up into 5in. or 6in. They will, with just a little care grow into salable stock by the end of May or they may be planted out into the field to furnish cuttings next Summer and Fall. You can get a lot of cuttings from a single Geranium plant in the course of a year, but you must keep the plant going; you can't do it from a stunted pot plant.

America's Potash Supply Assured

Papers read at the National Exposition of Chemical Industries in New York City last week indicated that Germany cannot hope to use her potash resources as an economic trump card at the peace conference, to secure satisfactory terms. So far as the United States is concerned, the experts discussing the subject were unanimous in declaring that with proper application American requirements of potash can be met adequately without the necessity of importing from Germany after the war.

Linn Bradley, chief engineer of the Research Corporation of New York City, who spoke on "Recovery of Potash from Iron Blast Furnaces and Cement Kilns by Electrical Precipitations," said the recovery of potash in the United States is making rapid strides. The industry may be roughly divided into those plants in which the recovered potash is the main product and those in which the potash is recovered as a by-product. It is believed that while the largest immediate tonnage may be obtained from desert lakes, kelp, alunite and a few other sources, nevertheless a study of the economic problems will show that the surest way of making the American potash industry permanent and enduring and able to supply all of our requirements even against German competition is to develop and rely upon by-product potash.

The production of pig iron in this country is such that over 1,000,000 tons of potash per annum may be secured from it, an amount far in excess of our pre-war requirements.

The South as a Potash Producer

It was pointed out that serecites and Cambrian potash-bearing slates have been located in Georgia. These carry as high as eight or nine per cent. potash. Commenting upon this, he said freight rates should be very low since this material is located close to a large market—the cotton fields of Georgia and Alabama.

Referring to the relation of the iron industry to the potash question, he said: It should be pointed out that in the Alabama district there is an abundance of excellent coal and cheap labor, and that the climatic conditions are such that the district may be considered an all-year one as far as operating is concerned. When it is realized that there is immediately at hand an enormous tonnage of high-grade iron ore which carries a large potash content and that the South produces our cotton and therefore is the large consumer of potash, and thus provides a market within a few miles, the economic importance of this situation can be better appreciated.

Sees Need of Federal Aid

It does not seem, Mr. Bradley said, that our own Government should falter or lag behind in this field, but on the contrary should immediately make comprehensive plans and take energetic action of such a character as will insure the proper solution of the problems under discussion. It seems ridiculous, he said, that the United States should be playing the rôle of food granary for ourselves and our Allies, also raising the cotton so necessary in connection with the war, and yet do nothing to provide the potash either for food purposes or for the cotton, except the limited and inadequate efforts due to private initiative. It ought to be emphasized that potash is a subject which should be understood and appreciated by every one in the Nation, and that it should be considered primarily from the National point of view.

Potash from Seaweed

C. A. Higgins, of the Hercules Powder Co., told of the recovery of potash from kelp, certain species of seaweed, and the utilization of kelp ashes for fertilizer, but gave it as his opinion that kelp, solely as a source of potash, would never compete with unrestricted supplies from Europe, or even with that recovered in modern cement or blast furnace practice.

The failure of this industry to develop before the war is due to the unwillingness of American enterprise to attempt to overcome the lead of the German Government-fostered combines.

With the opening of hostilities in 1914 attempts to commercialize the giant kelps of the Pacific Coast failed, owing to uncertain backing, poor equipment and inefficient means of harvesting, but in the Summer of 1915 the demand for acetone, a solvent vitally necessary in the production of explosives, became so great that new attempts on a large scale were made to utilize the sea weeds of the Pacific.

Kelp never really entered into a huge industry and there were no standard methods of handling it and its products. It taxed inventive genius to design the proper equipment and apparatus for harvesting and manufacturing the desired acetic acid and potash from it. Yet in May, 1916, in San Diego, Cal., the largest kelp plant in the world was in operation. Sodium acetate and potassium chloride were among the first products.

In 1917 the manufacture of ethyl acetate, which is in big demand for artificial leather and lacquers, was in full operation. Today a large proportion of the "dope" with which airplane wings are being coated comes from the kelps of the Pacific, as well as belt cement for glueing strands of leather belting, and film cement for joining together motion picture films. Acid-proof paint is another product. The business is not a mere war venture, but is established on a permanent basis, ready for competition with the best that the German chemists are able to produce at the end of the war.

Sunflowers Supply Potash

Those who grow Sunflowers should bear in mind that the ash obtained from the plants after the seed has been harvested is, owing to its richness in potash, a manure of considerable value, says The Gardeners' Chronicle. Of the ash obtained from burning the Sunflower stems, leaves and heads, 62 per cent. consists of potash, and as an acre of Sunflowers produces 2500 to 4000 lbs. of tops, the total yield of potash is considerable. Allowing 3000 lbs. of top there would be produced 160 lbs. of ashes per acre of crop, which should contain upward of 50 lbs. of potash. After the seed crop has been gathered, therefore, the tops of the plants should be collected and burnt, care being taken to choose a dry day. The ash should be stored in a dry place until required for use as manure for Potatoes or other root crops in the following year. It should be spread over the ground before the Potato crop is planted at the rate of from ½ to 1 oz. to the square yard.

Points on Lime and Lime Spreading

Aside from the percentage of total oxide which lime contains, its efficiency is also influenced largely by the evenness of spreading, and the thoroughness with which it is mixed with the soil by harrowing, says the N. J. Agri. Exp. Sta. The more soil particles there are in contact with lime particles, the better and quicker will be the results. Therefore, it is desirable to have a lime drillable, and at least reasonably fine. Extreme fineness in ground limestone, however, is not necessary, especially if it increases the cost greatly. If all the fine dust is present, a limestone that will all pass a 10-mesh screen is so much cheaper that it can be applied in larger amounts and will give more lasting results. Because it always contains some lumps, and because it cannot be spread by machinery, lump lime is generally considered about equal in efficiency to hydrated lime. Increased labor in handling, slaking, and spreading lump lime also adds materially to its low first cost. Ground, burned lime is the most concentrated drillable form of lime, but cannot be held in sacks long on account of slaking and swelling. The discomfort to men and teams in handling caustic lime is also an argument for ground limestone. The latter has no burning effect, and can be held for any length of time without loss or change of form.

For a more detailed discussion of lime values, write to the New Jersey Agri. Exp. Sta., New Brunswick, N. J., for Circular 2.

Often prevailing winds may, for several days, prevent the spreading of the lime. To keep the wind from blowing the lime about, the U. S. Dept. of Agri. suggests a home-made, improvised wind shield for the spreading machine. Gunny sacks or an old tarpaulin of sufficient length to reach from the lime box to the ground should be attached to the machine in order to protect the spouts through which the line is distributed. It is necessary to weight the free ends of the sacks or canvas with pieces of wood or iron so that these shields will be held perpendicularly.

New York Seed Trade

We are reliably informed that a steamer has sailed for an Atlantic port with several thousand cases of Paperwhite Narcissus bulbs on board. As regards Dutch bulbs we have authentic information that several steamers have sailed having bulbs aboard and that they are expected at Atlantic ports. This is the only information available up to Monday afternoon.

In compliance with the general orders of the Department of Health the seed stores in this city are, until further notice, opening at 8 a.m. and closing at 4 p.m.

A "harvest home" window display of Winter Squashes and Pumpkins in variety are noted this week at Weeber & Don's, 114 Chambers st. These fruits are reported in many farming sections to be in short crop this year.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41 and 43 Barclay st., is sending out its Autumn bulb catalog.

K. Van Bourgondien & Sons, of Arlington, N. J., report that they have received word from their Holland offices to the effect that the third shipment of bulbs has left Europe for an Atlantic port. They further report that they have received a large consignment of Guernsey Soleil d'Or Narcissi and that, on account of the scarcity of Paperwhites, these are meeting with a brisk demand.

Arrival of Dutch Bulbs

As we are going to press we learn that another shipment, the second of this season, the first being only 100 cases, has actually arrived, but no information is yet available as to kinds and number of cases.

The Wholesale Seedsmen's League held a meeting in this city on Tuesday of this week at the Hardware Club. There were present at this meeting F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., Joseph Brack and H. E. Fiske, Boston, Mass., David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., L. W. Bowen and Kirby White, Detroit, Mich., B. Landreth, Sr., and Jr., Bristol Pa., S. F. Leonard and Leonard Vaughan, Chicago, Ill., Lester Morse, Santa Clara, Cal., Mr. Page, Greene, N. Y., John Hunt, Cambridge, N. Y., T. W. Wood, Richmond, Va, Watson Woodruff, Frank C. Woodruff, Frederick W. Bruggenhof, E. E. Bruggehof and A. Lee Don of New York City.

Chicago Seed Trade

There is nothing new in the import bulb situation. Retailers in various sections of the city as well as in the surrounding towns report a good demand, which so far they are unable to satisfy.

A. Miller, president of the American Blub Co. has just returned from a stay of several days in New York City. He reports that the florist's business is quite brisk there but times are quiet with the seedmen.

The Onion set crop in the Chicago district has been harvested under most favorable circumstances.

The W. W. Barnard Co. reports the booking of orders for Onion sets to be equal to the standard of other seasons. Inquiries for Holland blubs are numerous, all inquirers asking for immediate shipment. W. W. Barnard is now in excellent health. He spends much time in motoring to the firm's seed farms in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store left Sunday to attend a meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League in New York City on Oct. 8.

Louisville Seed Trade

There has been considerable improvement in the demand for Kentucky field seeds during the past month. Bluegrass seed which was very slow in starting is now in much better demand, although a large percentage of the crop is still in the hands of the growers and strippers. Good 21-lb. seed is quoted around $2.75 to $2.85 a bushel, carlots, dealers' prices, on re-cleaned basis. Nineteen pound seed is worth 5c. to 7c. a bushel less.

Orchard Grass seed has been moving rather freely, the buyers going high for it, with the result that No. 1 seed is quoted around $3.25 a bushel, carlots, cleaners' price, for re-cleaned seed. It is claimed that very little of this crop remains in the hands of the farmers. Redtop has been in active movement, with good seed selling in a jobbing way at 12c. to 12½c. a bushel.

Onion sets are stronger and farmers are asking $9.25 for yellows and reds and $11 a barrel for whites. On a resale basis, figuring bushels at 32 lbs., yellows and reds are quoted at $2.50 a bushel for immediate delivery, and $2.85 for Jan. and Feb. delivery. Whites on immediate delivery are quoted at $3, and for Jan. and Feb. delivery at $3.25. There hasn't been much speculation in the market this year. Buying prices have been too high to cover contracts and to fill immediate demand in the South.

Indications are that Jefferson Co. will produce a big crop of seed Potatoes this year, as the crop was very late, and a considerable amount of stock promises to be too small for table use. It is estimated that on the second crop almost 50,000 barrels of seed were planted, as against an average of 30,000 barrels. Bad growing weather is expected to reduce production for the county, in spite of the largely increased acreage, it being estimated that the growers will not get seven barrels to one barrel of seed, whereas they should make about twenty.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co's Fordhook Farms

That 800 acres embraces quite an area of territory was plainly evident on the occasion of a somewhat hasty ride through the farms of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., known as the Fordhook Farms, and located just west of Doylestown, Pa. The property lies in a rolling country of pleasant hills and fertile valleys, and is well diversified with here and there good looking stands of timber. A Peach orchard on one of these farms occupies a prominent position and the trees are young and thrifty. Last year was produced some $10,000 worth, but this season, owing to the severe Winter, the returns were much lighter. The farms, apparently bought from time to time, each have their own tenant buildings, barns and outbuildings, and each one possesses some distinct feature of interest. For instance, at one we found colonies of pigs, many of them pedigreed, and in size all the way from big motherly sows to "teeny" youngsters, in appearance and size akin to that of a big rat and almost as agile. The Red Jerseys convey an idea of weight with plenty of lean in among the fat, but the Berkshires are far and away the aristocrats of the family with their sleek, almost silky black coats. They are really "classy."

The point of greatest interest on the day in question (near end of September) was concentrated on the Tomato fields and cannery. In the fields large groups of pickers were still in evidence, while the cannery was working full. This latter was described in our issue of Sept. 14, page 413. The chemist in charge reported that another expert analysis had classed the product as equal to the best on the market. The high grade canned Tomatoes are put up in one gallon enameled lined cans and will be taken largely by the hotel trade.

The ever interesting trial grounds devoted to vegetable and flower seeds, and which occupy probably more acres than any similar institution in the country, were still largely in crop but time was not at our disposal to allow of our stopping at any point to make close examination. The one thought uppermost, however, was what must be the magnitude of a business which could clean up annually the output of seed from this one place alone without taking into consideration the supplies grown for the same company at their vegetable farms in Southern Jersey, their flower farms in California and, as well, as the great stocks grown under contract throughout the country at favored spots.

It is with great regret that W. Atlee Burpee & Co. part with Howard M. Earl whose resignation took effect Sept. 27, after his return from California. Mr. Earl takes this step mainly for personal reasons and leaves the Burpee organization with every good wish on its part for the success of his future efforts. For several years past Mr. Earl has taken charge of the entire production; growing contracts, etc., for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., and it is not expected that it will be a simple proposition to find another man of corresponding ability and so thorough an experience as was possessed by Mr. Earl to fill the position thus left vacant.

Catalogs Received

Forest Nursery Co., Rt. 2, McMinnville, Tenn., Wholesale trade list of forest and shade trees and ornamental shrubs, season 1918-1919.

Martin Kohankie Nurseries, Painesville, O., wholesale list, Fall, 1918 of flowering perennials, Peonies, Roses, shrubs and flowering trees; 8 pages.

Framingham Nurseries. W. B. Whittier & Co., Framingham, Mass. Fall, 1918 trade price list of hardy evergreens, Rhododendrons, deciduous trees, flowering and other shrubs, Roses and fruits; 32 pages.

Henry F. Michell Co., 518 Market st., Philadelphia, Pa., Wholesale price list of seeds, bulbs, plants, flower, vegetable and farm seeds, and accessories, for Sept., Oct., and Nov., 1918, containing a full list and including many desirable sorts; 34 pages, illustrated.

S. G. Harris, Rosedale Nurseries, Tarrytown, N. Y., catalog devoted mostly to Peonies, but including also hardy perennials, Irises, Phlox, trees and shrubs and fruits; 20 pages, illustrated, including an attractive cover showing in color, Peony Jeanne d'Arc.

Foreign

V. Lemoine & Son. nurseries, Rue du Montet, 136 to 142, Nancy, France, Autumn 1918 and Spring, 1919 catalog No. 192, listing greenhouse plants, ferns, new and rare shrubs, flowering perennials in variety, including Peonies, Delphiniums, etc.; also Gladiolus and other bulbs, and a few sorts of seeds; 52 pages, illustrated.

Princeton Nurseries, Princeton, N. J., a book about Princeton products, 1918. An interesting piece of printing in the form of catalog 9in. x 12in., consisting of 24 pages. A fine quality of India tint sepia paper is used throughout and the numerous halftones showing the firm's thrifty stock of fruits and ornamentals are lifelike reproductions. The aim of the catalog is to tell the reader something about the nursery stock grown at Princeton, and to give him an idea, with comment and illustrations, of its quality. A comprehensive list of deciduous ornamental and shade trees is given, as also a complete listing of deciduous shrubs, together with broad-leaved evergreens, coniferous evergreens, Roses, deciduous climbing vines, hardy perennial plants and fruit trees. In producing such a well printed trade list in these war times the Princeton Nurseries are evidently convinced that activities of the nursery trade are not useless and that their business is worth while, and we laud their efforts.

Pointers for Catalog Makers

In making catalogs do not fall into the mistake of talking to yourself instead of to your prospect.

The majority of catalog makers are too prone to look upon the money spent as something given away rather than as a paying investment.

The report on the exhaustive trials of runner (Pole) Beans made by the Royal Hort. Society in the Wisley Gardens has just been published. The premier position has been assigned (as regards Scarlet Runners) to the very distinct variety which is appropriately named "Prizewinner." The strain comes from one of the Northern firms, Dickson & Robinson, Manchester, having been awarded the only first class certificate. An award of merit was accorded to Sutton's A. 1 and Sutton's Scarlet and Carter's Scarlet Emperor. Eleven varieties were "highly recommended," while Sutton's "Best of All" was lowest on the list.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

A recent ruling to all newspapers and periodicals from Washington read as follows:

"Discontinue selling advertising with a guarantee of circulation required and rebate, if circulation falls below guaranteed amount."

It appears that this ruling caused considerable misunderstanding, so that the following explanation was necessary:

"The purpose of this ruling is is to prevent the printing of copies of newspapers and periodicals which are not called for by the legitimate circulation, but are printed by the publisher and circulated by forced means in order to make good the guarantee and save such rebate. Such circulation is, of course, a waste of paper and during the war must be stopped."

Without any desire to accentuate matters for those publishers of forced circulation, we could not but help recognizing that the advertisers in THE EXCHANGE have little to worry about paying for a circulation forced to meet a guarantee of copies sold.

The circulation of THE EXCHANGE week by week is as great as the number of paid-up subscribers we have on our mailing list—no greater.

It means that those who buy advertising space in THE EXCHANGE buy it solely on that basis.

The form of circulation most appreciated by the keenest advertisers is that of concentrated circulation, which a paid up subscription list, such as ours, constitutes, and which is so well confirmed in the following letter:

"I did not receive my copy of Sept. 28th. Too good to miss in these changing days. Boyden Road Greenhouse, Holden, Mass."

Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Patriotic Philadelphia florist running houses on low temperature to meet war conditions—Is not growing vegetables because he does not know market—Example in unselfishness—Cultivation of Lettuce essential to success—Cultivate shallow to avoid injury—Radishes must be marketed promptly—Growing Chinese Cabbage under glass—Sweet Potatoes—Cutting Asparagus tops

A Patriotic Florist

On my way through Philadelphia, I had the pleasure of visiting a florist in the western part of the city. We had an interesting conversation concerning the business and the kinds of plants being grown. No doubt, as it is with many others, the crops being planted are those which require low temperatures. In fact, no fires have been started and plants which are usually grown at 60 deg. are growing along slowly at 45, or to whatever temperature the thermometer may fall.

There were several houses of Chrysanthemums at various stages of growth coming along nicely. Some houses containing ferns presented a fine appearance, but under the lower temperatures the plants were not growing as desired. It is his intention to keep some of his stock at temperatures just high enough to hold it over the Winter.

While he has no vegetable crops, he has heard of other houses where vegetables are being grown this Winter. It is not expected that every florist will devote part of his space to vegetables this Winter. Our friend remarked that with a little coaching on the subject he would be able to grow certain vegetable crops but that a man must study his market in order to dispose of his crop to the best advantage. This is the important point. A great many men can grow the crops, but the most important part is to sell them.

Many florists who were considering the growing of some cool vegetable crops this Winter have been making a study of their market for some time and this has guided them in making the selection of the kinds of crops to grow. Every town and city presents a different problem but there are demands for fresh vegetables in the Winter as well as in the Summer.

I admired the patriotism of our friend. Under the present conditions of a slow trade, less coal and fewer men to do the work, he is ready to do the best he can by buying Liberty bonds and War Savings Stamps to help win the war. There are many more citizens among our florists and men in other lines of work who are giving all they possibly can in money, time and energy in order to help our country to be a leading factor in winning the war. These men are really patriotic.

There is another class of people, which I am glad to say is very small, trying to make all the money they can out of the present conditions of high prices. They do not buy Liberty bonds, War Savings Stamps nor give any money to the Red Cross and other lines of work that need help. Such selfish men and women are not only unpatriotic but are openly helping the cause of our enemies.

Public opinion of true Americans will not permit such people to hide behind false fronts. Every patriotic florist should do everything he can in his community to make people show where they stand, and to see that slackers receive such treatment as they deserve.

Cultivation of Lettuce

Lettuce should be cultivated occasionally to keep the ground loose. Overhead watering will settle the soil considerably and will check the growth somewhat unless the soil is porous. If Radishes are grown between the Lettuce the ground should be worked a little as soon as the Radishes are harvested.

It should be remembered that Lettuce is a shallow rooted crop and that the depth of cultivation must not be more than 1½in. between the rows and less close up to the plants. As soon as the leaves begin to touch, cultivation should cease since the leaves may be injured.

Watch the Radishes

As the Radishes reach their maturity they should be examined frequently and be marketed promptly when they are of proper size. If they are left too long they become pithy and are not a desirable product. Such Radishes should not be offered for sale since they will hurt future sales. The temperature should be kept low but if the sun warms up the house plenty of free ventilation should be given.

Chinese Cabbage as a Cool Greenhouse Crop

Chinese Cabbage known also as Pe Tsai, has been tried by some growers in search for a new salad plant which may be grown in greenhouses. It is being grown very successfully outdoors and is seen frequently in some of our large markets. Some of the attempts to grow it under glass have not been as successful from a commercial standpoint as desired, since the crop does not thrive as well in greenhouses as in the open. On the other hand, for greenhouse use, it is desirable to have a strain which produces heads somewhat smaller than those produced outdoors on good soil. In the greenhouse closer planting distances are generally employed.

The seed is sown in flats or on beds similar to Cabbage, and the young seedlings are transplanted two inches apart in flats or beds when the first rough leaf appears. They remain here until four to five inches tall when they are ready for permanent planting in the greenhouse. A well branched root system is essential.

The young plants grow very well, but when the leaves become large there is likely to be some tip-burn since they transpire water faster than the roots can take it up. Another disadvantage is that Chinese Cabbage cannot be grown in the greenhouse in the early Fall or late Spring. At the Maryland State College, the writer has grown it at nearly every season of the year. The temperatures are usually too high in the early Fall and late Spring, and the Chinese Cabbage tends to go to seed rather than to form good heads.

The crop which was started about the middle of October and grown as a Winter crop was the best of all the crops. Chinese Cabbage is very hardy and seems to produce the best heads when grown under cool conditions. There was practically no tip-burn on this Midwinter crop, but the other crops had some tip-burn.

The time required to grow a crop is 12 to 16 weeks. About four weeks of this time is required to grow the plants large enough to plant in the greenhouse. The soil should be rich. The temperatures may be 42 to 55 degs. This crop is not suggested for general use by all growers but there will be some growers who will try it on a small scale since it may be grown in Midwinter. On rich soil, the plants may be set one foot apart each way. Since a constant supply of moisture at the roots is needed, the crop will grow better on the ground level or solid beds, than on raised benches.

Harvesting and Storing Sweet Potatoes

Sweet Potatoes are being harvested and stored before heavy frosts come. The first light frost which merely kills a few leaves will not injure the Potatoes but a heavy frost will injure the crop. Commercial growers use special Sweet Potato plows for taking out the Potatoes, but those who have grown a small quantity for home use may dig them carefully with a spade to prevent bruising them as far as possible.

They are usually dug on a clear bright day in order that the Potatoes may dry off thoroughly in the sun before they are stored. In order that the Potatoes will keep well in storage, they must be dry and the bruised places must be healed over. To do this, the Potatoes are usually hauled from the field to a special storage house or to a room where a temperature of 80 to 85 degs. may be maintained for several days. When the bruised spots are healed over and the Potatoes are dry, the temperature may be lowered to about 55 to 60 degs. Sweet Potatoes must not be placed in root storage cellars such as are used for White Potatoes, Beets, Turnips, etc.

The home supply may be stored in slat boxes or crates near a chimney in an upstairs room that is kept warm at night as well as during the day. Some people store them in barrels or boxes in the kitchen not far from the stove. If the furnace room is warm enough they may be placed on high shelves or in baskets hung from the ceiling. They should not be placed on the cellar floor where it is likely to become too cool or damp.

Cut Asparagus Tops

As soon as Asparagus tops turn yellow and growth has stopped, they may be cut off and moved from the land. This practice not only places the Asparagus field in better condition for early cultivation in the Spring but any disease or insects which may be on the plants be destroyed. The tops are removed to a place where they may be burned. It is important to see that all of the stems are burned in order to make sure that all Asparagus rust is destroyed. This is the worst disease of Asparagus. The ashes contain some potash and may be distributed over another field. If the tops are not cut this Fall the stems will become hard and tough during the Winter and will not be cut as easily in the Spring. The Fall cutting will also relieve the pressure of Spring work.

Southern States

Houston, Texas

All the florists report a good business. Some of them have had to work overtime in order to keep up with the rush of orders.

Mr. Eichling of Kerr the Florist reports that the store has been very busy for the past two weeks, and that Thursday of last week was the biggest day this year. This shows that the people of Houston, at least, have not decided to look upon the florist as non essential. The store furnished the decorations for a big banquet at the Rice Hotel given by the officers of the 57th Infantry. The designs were emblematic of this branch of the service; smilax and palms and the new Columbia Rose were used. The greenhouses of the R. C. Kerr Co. give promise of producing some fine Roses and a big crop of 'Mums.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses says that his force has been working day and night. They have been rushed particularly with funeral work. He is receiving shipments of fine 'Mums from California and Roses from Denver. He says, however, that it is hard to supply the demand for flowers. In order to fill orders, he has had to buy from private persons who have flowers in the yard. He will soon be cutting 'Mums from his own crop.

The Q and S Florists report a rushing business. They have had a great deal of funeral work; they have also booked a big wedding for next Sunday, and in addition have orders for 30 designs on that day.

Mrs. C. Thomas has returned from a pleasant vacation, which she spent around Seabrook instead of going North.

President S. J. Mitchell of the Houston Hort. Society has called a meeting of the club for next Monday, at the offices of the public parks. Secretary Laughlin will present a report on the project to make Houston a Crape Myrtle city, and has prepared a paper to read before the club. C. L. B.

Nashville, Tenn.

Fall is here with its first whiff of frost. No damage has been done, however. With the rains of the past few days, the Fall crops should come on well. Cosmos is in full glory now, but there seems to be but little of it, this Summer having killed it. Dahlias were so injured by the hot dry season that they are not coming yet in any quantity. Gladioli are scarce also.

There will be few flowers from the out of doors this Fall. This will be an advantage to the florist if he has enough stock to meet the demand which has been above normal all Summer, and is showing no signs of falling off now. There will be a good crop of 'Mums of all kinds. The early ones are about ready for use. Roses are on the short side still, and Carnations are not yet coming in sufficient quantities to meet the demands. What are coming are unusually good, however, possibly because the Fall has been abnormally cool.

As the Winter approaches we see more nearly what we can expect in the amount of space to be used. Some of the growers have cut space considerably; others little if any. All agree there will be almost as many flowers grown this season as

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

last, partly through more economical use of the space.

A good many home grown bulbs have been dug and potted up, so even though the Dutch bulbs should be delayed or not come we shall not be wholly without our usual flowers. A good many Valley will be dug and forced as well. The past two seasons have proved that our locally grown Valley is as good as any that ever came from Germany.

There promises to be less variety of plants for the customer to choose from this Winter than ever before. Most of the growers are pinning their faith to Cyclamen, Primulas of various kinds, and Cinerarias. Perhaps there are no better Cyclamen growers in the country than our local men, and Nashville people have come to be great buyers of this plant.

Some of the growers have not used any of their year's coal supply as yet, having relied entirely on Corn cobs and wood for the Summer. These items have been allowed by the fuel administrator, and as they do not count on the quantity of fuel allowed, makes it possible to use the normal amount of coal in cold weather. Corn cobs have proved satisfactory fuel for Summer and early Fall firing, though the fireman needs to be on his job. They are obtained from the mills and grain elevators.

The population of Nashville and vicinity has increased to nearly 50,00 during the last few months, on account of the giant powder plant near by. The pay roll of this institution has grown to over $1,000,000 every week. This has proved a hardship as well as a blessing. It is almost impossible to secure competent men laborers at all, or at least at a price they can be used. Much of the work is now being done by colored women, and white boys. Where it has been possible to retain the growers and foremen this is giving good if not satisfactory results.

MRS. MERTIE BRAILLIAR.

Fall stocks of flowers are unusually good this season, and retailers have excellent merchandise to offer. Cool weather through Summer and Fall has aided stock materially, so Dahlias are unusually good. Roses are in good supply. Few growers are cutting Carnations. Some good Violets are coming at comparatively low prices. Snapdragon is about gone as are Asters. The Fall crop of 'Mums is especially promising, and there is a good acreage, as florists figured upon being able to market a large percentage of this crop without the consumption of much fuel.

Several frosts arrived in late September and early October, but little harm has been done. The State Agri. Dept. reports that crops haven't been damaged. There hasn't been any coal burning weather so far.

The Fourth Liberty Loan kept things humming in Louisville. Several florists gave their plate glass windows to be decorated by sign painters, with campaign lettering. Louisville as usual has exceeded her allotment, more than $13,000,000.

Seen Through the Binoculars

August Baumer was an active high private in the ranks during the campaign. He got out with the bond sellers, canvassed the city for subscriptions, and proved that he should have been in the stock and bond business instead of the florist business, as he cleaned up.

In the Jefferson st. window of Fred Haupt is an attractive service flag carrying two stars, for his men who entered service.

Saul Rosenfield, representing the New York ribbon house of Wertheimer & Co., was a visitor in Louisville on Oct. 3.

John A. Keller, at Lexington, Ky., has a greatly improved retail store in the Ada Meade Theater Building, which has been recently remodeled from top to bottom.

Sickness has interfered with business at the store of C. B. Thompson & Co., where two of the principal workers are away on account of illness. Miss Mary Schleeter, Mrs. Thompson's niece, has also been away for several days.

George Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz Co., reports that business is excellent. He has been getting a nice volume of local as well as country business, and feels very well satisfied with the demand so far.

At the William Walker Co., things are generally humming. Miss Edith Walker reports that the greatest trouble is in getting help at the store and the farm.

The Nanz & Neuner Co., in moving from Fourth ave. to the growing establishment at St. Mathews, Ky., left Fourth ave. for the first time in more than 50 years. This is one of the pioneer florist organizations of the State. For many years it has had a farm at St. Mathews, with a retail store on Fourth ave. It is believed that what business is lost through going to the country will be made up in reduced overhead.

Clarence and Hattie Walker, who took over the F. Walker Co.'s greenhouses at New Albany a few weeks ago, when the property of the old house was split up between Herbert Walker and his brother and sister, are now operating as "The Walker Greenhouse."

Mrs. H. Walker, of the F. Walker Co., has been ill for several days and away from the store, but is showing some improvement, and expects to get back shortly.

Herman Kleinstarink, Jr., who was with his father in the retail and growing business for some time, is now doing nicely at Youngstown, Ohio, where he is holding down a foremanship in a big plant working on war orders. Mrs. Kleinstarink, who was formerly Miss Bertha Walker, is with her husband at Youngstown.

Washington, D. C.

Florists report an unprecedented business coupled with disconcerting shortage of stock of all kinds. The large number of deaths has caused the placing of more orders than retailers can fill to advantage, or for which they can find sufficient flowers. For the most part prices paid for designs have been good. One firm booked more than 100 orders in a single day, and every retail establishment is going along heavily.

Retail establishments in the District of Columbia have been ordered closed until 10 o'clock each morning except for the receipt of goods. The new store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Florists have notices tacked up on their doors notifying the public of their compliance with this order.

Violets have made their appearance, but as yet they are obtainable in but small quantities. Speaking of the situation generally, one of the wholesalers said: "The scarcity of flowers and the demand for them is unprecedented. It is impossible to fill orders. Very few 'Mums are coming in as yet and nothing to take their place. Last week we could fill a few orders if given to us the day before, but now the retailers are crowding both wholesalers and growers with orders. Growers haven't anything to offer. They have been cutting down their fuel consumption for fear they will run short when cold weather sets in. Further, the draft and enlisting have made heavy inroads on the working forces so that the growers are really without sufficient help to continue their businesses on their usual scale. The market is further hampered through the inability of out of town growers to get stocks into Washington in salable condition, because the express service is poor and inadequate."

Orchids are more plentiful than they have been and sell up well at $9 per doz. Very few Easter Lilies are to be had and the wholesalers have standing orders for these. Not many Carnation are coming in. Dahlias are good. They are being marketed direct by the growers and few are coming through the wholesalers.

Washington's growers will try to get through the Winter on limited coal supplies, rather than shut down their houses. John Gutman, however, is going to operate his houses in Congress Heights as long as he can without coal and then do what he can with his outdoor stock.

Among the recent visitors in Washington were Elise L. and Edith M. Archias, of Sedalia, Mo.; F. M. Johnson and Edw. Gallivan, of Chicago, Ill., and Patrick O'Mara, of New York City.

E. A. D.

By 4:30 p.m., Oct. 6, the firm of Gude Bros. Co. and its employees, the latter totaling about 70, had all subscribed for the Fourth Liberty Loan, giving them a record of 100 per cent. The firm also subscribed 100 per cent. on the Third Liberty Loan.

DOVER, N. H.—E. A. Corson, florist, has moved his store to the Snow Block, on North Main st.

Greenhouse Heating

A booklet of 52 pages, containing a reprint of four prize essays on the subject, which passed through the columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE several years ago, with comments by John McArthur, heating engineer for Hitchings & Co. There is also included a collection of answers to pertinent questions on greenhouse heating.

The problem of greenhouse heating is a vital one in the face of the 50% fuel restriction order, and all growers desiring information upon the choice of a boiler, the installing of a proper amount of piping, both as to the quantity and the proper placing of it, the stoking or feeding of the furnace and the general management of the heating apparatus should be in possession of a copy of this valuable little pamphlet.

National Publicity Campaign

On Monday, Oct. 14, there will be on sale throughout this country, and delivered to over half a million homes of the better sort, the November issue of the Metropolitan Magazine. All florists are requested to secure a copy or copies of this number, remove therefrom our campaign page, in two colors, featuring Chrysanthemums, and post it conspicuously in the store windows, or in other places where it will be seen by the public. Such posting will connect any establishment with the magazine publicity and should very materially stimulate a demand for Chrysanthemums, which this season are in unprecedented supply. For the convenience of the trade, our Promotion Bureau has arranged for a supply of these pages, printed on only one side. Two copies, packed in a strong tube, will be mailed on receipt of ten cents to cover cost.

This prominent advertisement opens our Fall program for magazine publicity. To get the best results from it florists should link up their establishments with the magazine advertising through their own local advertising. It is best done through the use of the electrotypes the promotion bureau is supplying. These feature as closely as possible the magazine advertisements. So closely do they match that one of our subscribers actually reports a mail order wherein credit was given him for "seeing your ad. in the Saturday Evening Post and local papers."

The Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays are to be especially featured in some half-dozen magazines of large circulation. Plate advertisements for local newspapers will be provided. All that is necessary to complete them is the insertion of name and address.

The committees have planned to the last penny the expenditure of the funds at their disposal. This, sad to say, is so short of actual requirements as to make an important part of the publicity arrangements tentative. You, Mr. Non-subscriber can help to change this condition very materially. Of course, we know you are buying Liberty bonds - the money you pay for them you are lending to the Government. Whatever you give to our campaign fund you lend to yourself—at an extraordinarily high rate of interest, easily collected. Cannot you see your way to advance yourself just a little money for your own good?

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

A meeting of the society took place Friday evening, Oct. 4, President H. Wild presiding. There was a fine collection of flowers and vegetables, and numerous certificates were awarded.

During the meeting, after a stirring appeal for the Liberty Loan had been made by G. B. Cannon, proprietor of the Quality Seed Store, also by President H. Wild, and a patriotic recitation had been rendered by James Foster, the society decided to buy five bonds, one for each member in the service. This emptied the treasury. A collection replenished the funds and a new treasury was started. It was announced that the members would participate in the Liberty Day parade and that they promised to excel themselves with a wonderful spectacle of vegetables for the occasion. The Fall show will take place Nov.1, 2 and3.

W. RICE, Cor. Secretary.

Nassau Co. (N. Y.) Hort. Society

There was a large attendance at the regular monthly meeting, held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove on Wednesday evening Sept. 11, Pres. Robt. Jones presiding. The exhibition tables were well filled with a fine display of flowers, fruit and vegetables. The president appointed Thos. Twigg, Frank Watson and Wm. Milstead to act as judges for the monthly exhibits. The following members exhibited: Wm. Noonan, Frank Petroccia, Arthur Smith and Jas. Holloway. John Scheepers & Co., New York City were awarded the thanks of the society for their La France Raspberry.

The preliminary schedule for the show to be held on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 was read and adopted. Vice-President Thos. Twigg reported that George Ford, one of our members had been killed in action on Aug. 8. Mr. Ford was a well respected member of this society, ever ready to extend a helping hand where needed, and the deepest sympathy is extended Mrs. Ford in her sad bereavement. Competition for the next monthly meeting, to be held on Wed. Oct. 9 are: Three heads of Cauliflower, best six Carrots, and the heaviest head of Cabbage. Robt. Jones will be the manager for the Dahlia show, to be held on Wed. Oct. 2. Schedules can be had upon application.

HARRY GOODBAND, Cor. Secretary.

Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink and Light Lavender. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Frank Cawte of Cottage Grove, Bloomfield, Conn. is now serving with the boys in France.

Douglas Laird, formerly with Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia is with the Royal Flying Corps in France.

Geo. McCallum, who is training at Great Lakes, Ill. is recovering from pneumonia in the base hospital.

Edgar Brown, eldest son of F. C. W. Brown of Cleveland, Ohio, has enlisted in the Army.

Tom White, bookkeeper of the Columbus (Ohio) Floral Co., has been drafted into the Army.

George Brod, son of George F. Brod of Stratford, Conn. is at camp, having been called to the Colors.

A. M. Michaelson of Michaelson Bros., Philadelphia, Pa., is doing his bit helping Uncle Sam at Hog Island.

About ten of the Indianapolis, Ind., florists have been included in the present draft; some have already gone into preliminary training.

The H. W. Buckbee Co. of Rockford, Ill., has three stars in its service flag, but still has sufficient help to keep its greenhouses going.

After a taste of the war industry Benjamin Gibbs of Philadelphia, Pa., has returned to his first love, the florist business.

Henry Meyer, of Kenosha, Wis., has two sons in the Army. Frank E., the elder, is in France, and Henry in Key West Fla.

The service flag of the Gardeners and Florists' Club of Boston has recently added ten new stars, making a present total of 37 members with the Colors.

Paul Shine, son of Aaron Shine of the Flick Floral Co. of Fort Wayne, Ind., has enlisted in the Home Guards Militia, and is looking forward to joining the National Army soon.

Private James Schowles is reported as being at the base hospital in Lakewood, N. J., having gone "over the top" three times, being gassed and seriously wounded.

We are sorry to learn that Jesse Hayes, who enlisted in the Navy in June, died of influenza on Sept. 23. Further details will be found in the Kansas City newsletter.

We regret to learn that Chas. Brown, formerly employed on the J. Ogden Armour estate and also at one time with Vaughan's, at Western Springs, Ill., has recently been killed in action abroad, while serving with a Canadian regiment.

Albert Geisert, grower for the Park Floral Co. of Denver, Colo., has received a letter from a French hospital saying that his son Fred had been wounded in both arms and both legs when in the front line.

Henry Masten who was with the Alpha Floral Co. of Denver Colo., has written from the Naval Training Camp at Mare Island, San Francisco, Cal., saying that he is doing well. He expects to be sent across any day.

Roy Ackenbach and Henry Benz, who have until recently conducted a florist's business in Racine, Wis., are with the expeditionary forces in France. Their business is now in the hands of Joseph Rehl.

J. Harper Hetherington, manager of the Washington Floral Co., has been notified that his two brothers have entered a French hospital, Horace D. gassed, Frank W. crippled with rheumatism.

W. W. Wilmore of Denver, Colo., has received a letter from his son Charles who is with the Tank Corps at Gettysburg, Pa., saying that his company was taken to New York City where it did some marching and was taken to the theater in the evening.

Mrs. Gertrude H. Lowen, formerly Miss Nellie Toogood, who was employed as a bookkeeper and cashier of the Washington Floral Co., Washington, D. C., is now serving as private in the U. S. Marine Corps. Mrs. Lowen is now the wife of Private Lowen of the Medical Corps.

Frank Spikermann, son of Mrs. Frances Spikermann who conducts the Sandwich Greenhouses at Sandwich, Ill. is a wireless operator on the U. S. Cruiser Alabama on the Great Lakes. Her oldest son, Dr Arthur Spikermann, is in the Army service at Ft. Sheridan.

Pte. Paul F. Viguier, formerly linotype operator on THE EXCHANGE, notifies us that he has at last arrived in Europe on Uncle Sam's business of helping to establish law and order in the world. He sends best wishes and good luck to all.

George Schumer, son of Peter Schumer, a well-known Carnation grower of Evanston, Ill., is said to be the first wounded florist to return. The Evanston papers gave the event much publicity. He is at present at Camp Stewart, Va., recovering from shrapnel wounds.

Louis Turner, Jr., of Louis Turner & Sons, of Kenosha, Wis., is with the Wisconsin Signal Service Corps in France. Walter Turner, a younger brother, has also joined the Colors to serve in the mechanical department. He is at present at the Sweeney Auto School in Kansas City, Mo., but will join the auto field service when proficient.

Henry L. Jacobs, son of Joseph Jacobs, connected with the firm of S. Jacobs & Sons, greenhouse builders, Brooklyn, N. Y., is now an ordnance sergeant, and is stationed at Washington D. C. Sergt. Jacobs was formerly a mechanical engineer. He was assigned to the engineering division of small arms and machine gun section. He expects to go across very soon.

That Charles Bartlett Weathered of New York City, whose untimely death in France was recorded in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 28, was held in high esteem is shown by the following testimonial from his employers, S. Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, N. Y., with whom he had been connected until the time of his enlistment: "We regret his death deeply. He certainly had a bright future before him and was well liked."

Harry A. Bunyard of New York, who recently signed up with the Y. M. C. A. for overseas work, is stationed at the Bristol Hotel, New York City, awaiting arrival of his passports, immediately after receipt of which he expects to go abroad. In the meantime he is editing the "Kit Bag," a paper on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. secretaries stationed in that city. A postscript to No. 33, now in our hands, is characteristic of its editor. This is not the "Kid" Bag.

Joseph J. Lane, formerly advertising manager of the Garden Magazine, writes from France that he is now a corporal and that he expects to "take over Pershing's job in about a month." Yet he has thought for "the bunch," for he wonders "if they will ever wake up to the need of flowers, and the opportunities the present and the future contain for sales to Americans everywhere. A little girl gave me a Rose in a French town just after we landed. It made me cry! What would our boys think of receiving flowers as they marched along to come overseas, or other times when we are nearly overcome with our emotions. Florists have a noble work to perform in this line."

"A glorious death is his
Who for his country falls."

We regret to learn that Geo. Ford, a former member of the Nassau County (N. Y.) Hort. Society, was killed in action on Aug. 8.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Rights Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Frequent complaints are being received here from florists, seedsmen and nurserymen regarding the difficulty they are having in collecting debts from men now in the military service. Numbers of business men have been called to the Colors, often with but little notice, and it has frequently been difficult for such men to adjust their business affairs before going away, and they have sometimes left behind unpaid bills.

To meet this situation Congress some time ago passed what is known as the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Rights Bill, in which provisions were made for the temporary suspension of legal proceedings and transactions which may prejudice the civil rights of persons in the service during the war.

Under the law, in actions or proceedings in court to collect debts owed by men in service, the court may require as a condition before judgment is entered that the plaintiff file a bond to indemnify the defendant against any loss or damage that he may suffer by reason of any judgment, should it thereafter be set aside in whole or in part.

It is also provided that if any judgment is rendered and it appears that the defendant was prejudiced by reason of his military service in making his defense thereto, it may, upon application made by him or his legal representative not later than 90 days after the termination of his service, be opened by the court rendering the same and the defendant or his legal representative let in to defend.

At any stage an action commenced against a person in military service during the period of such service, or within 60 days thereafter may be stayed until the termination of military service, and no fine or penalty shall accrue by reason of such stay.

The law provides further that "in any action or proceeding commenced in any court, against a person in military service, the court may, in its discretion, on its own motion or on application to it by such person or some person in his behalf shall, unless in the opinion of the court the ability of the defendant to comply with the judgment or order entered or sought is not materially affected by reason of his military service: "(1) Stay the execution of any judgment or order entered against such person, as provided in this act, and (2) Vacate or stay any attachment or garnishment of property, money, or debts in the hands of another, whether before or after judgment." E. A. D.

Glimpses of French Horticulture

The interesting notes which follow are taken from letters received by Geo. Arnold, Glenwood Beach Gardens, Ensenore, N. Y. from his son now serving with the Colors in France. The younger Arnold is a member of the Rochester (N. Y.) Florists' Ass'n.

In the fields all through this part of France (near the St. Mihiel sector) there are many species of leguminous plants. I suppose that they like this limestone soil. At any rate Pea-like flowers are much more in evidence than in Western New York, and ranging all the way from the little White Clover to the Locust trees. A considerable proportion of them I have not seen before; and I am still without means of identifying them. In the Botanical Gardens at Lyon I found four of them with labels. Vicia Gerardii is a rather neat Little Vetch. Hippocrepis (species illegible) is a low growing shrubby looking plant with yellow flowers. Indigofera Dousa (I. Gerardiana) is prettily decorative, with its silvery leaves. Colutea arborescens is an early blooming shrub, 5ft. to 7ft. high, with flowers of a good yellow. I have seen it doing fairly well on high, rocky banks along the roads.

The Centaurea that I have mentioned as being so abundant around here is the C. sempervirens. The Scabiosa is the S. caucasica, blue. There is a great variation in type, but I have seen no white sports growing wild. M. Leonard Lilile, at Lyon, had a very nice stock of the white. Harpalium rigidu was the label on a plant in Lyon, to 4ft. high, that looked like one of perennial Sunflowers, (Helianthus rdus). Several species of Ceanothus two of Echinops, all good garden jects, are common here. Knautia lo folia is a good perennial with light flowers, resembling Scabiosa caucas (synonym for Scabiosa longifolia).

Annual Pentstemons are used a bit for bedding in Lyon, and are reds and whites. There was a Gai dia, too, that was a mighty fine s of yellow for cutting. Not quite so in flower or plant as grandiflora, better as a cut flower. In these dens, too, are many fruit trees tra on walls or on espaliers, especially trees, quite in contrast with the W ern New York orchard method.

The country about here is very and the soil extremely shallow, underlaid with soft limestone. I orders to arrange for three company dens of eight to ten acres each, an to 20 small detachment gardens. waiting for a special pass and preter to enable me to start out work, as this point is so near the that there is a guard at nearly road crossing. As the gardens w scattered over a territory at leas miles in length I shall have to around pretty lively. Well, we are all ing to get out of here before vege are ready next year. A Garden in a Wilderness

Late in June Private Joseph Ros of the base hospital at Camp Upt gan, with the assistance of Private Leab, to convert some of the acid the camp site into a garden. ter clearing away the stumps the are worked by hand, limed and part p with vegetables, part with ornam als. Good crops of Corn, Tomatoes, ea Celery Beets, Lettuce and two cr of Beans were grown for the officers' ess. But what attracted most attention were the floral designs in which 4000 ants were used. These plants were d ted by Samuel Untermeyer and the houses of Central Park, New York. The most striking were a replica of the edical Caduceus, 14ft. by 16ft.; a bell, 9ft. by 8ft.; the American flag, 10ft. by 7ft., and the American dal of honor, 30ft. square.

Before joining the Army Pvt. Ros thal had been a head gardener f Mr. Untermeyer, for whose estate nea Yonkers he planned the $2,000,00 garden. Prior to that he had lived in Russian Poland where his family before the war owned famous nurseries now ruined through the Bolshevist tr bles. His right hand man had had no gar ning experience before this season.

Soldier and Sailor Insurance

The business of insuring our s and sailors is scarcely a year yet we have written more than $30,000,000,000 of insurance, insuring approximately 3,500,000 soldiers and sailors. This gigantic business employing 10,000 individuals has done a greater business than the largest insurance company of the world. The total for August will approximate $5,000,000,000 in new insurance.

More than 90 per cent. of our army and naval force are insured. This insurance has strengthened the morale of our fighting men and brought comfort and courage to their dependents at home. In addition to the insurance there are added soldier and sailor family allotments and Government allowances to dependents, the disbursement of allotments and allowances already totaling more than $140,000,000.

Mr. Falconer illustrated his address with an exhibition of 90 different kinds of fruited or berried shrubs, most of which were sent to him from the Rochester, N. Y., botanical parks which, next to the Arnold Arboretum at Boston, have the richest collection of rare trees and shrubs in the country. The exhibition included 19 varieties of Barberry; 7 of vividly berried Cottoneasters; 11 of Haws; 4 of Euonymus or Spindle trees; 11 of Crab Apples, whose fruit ranged from size of Peas to that of marbles; 14 of Roses; 7 of Viburnums, the Snowball family of the shrubs, the Buffalo berry, the Sea Buckthorn and two forms of Buckthorn from the mountains of Northern Asia with showy black fruit. Among the plants in the Pittsburgh collection were sprays of Euonymus fruits, brilliant Viburnums, strings of Golden Climbing Waxworks, red Haws and Snowberry. The exhibit was very interesting to all present, and a vote of thanks was extended to the city parks of Rochester and Mr. Falconer.

"Dahlias" was the subject for the evening. Some beautiful local and out-of-town exhibits were shown. Dixmont Hospital had a fine collection of new seedling single and show type Dahlias, which were awarded a culture certificate.

McCallum Co. showed a fine variety of commercial Dahlias grown by W. W. Maytrott of Vineland, N. J., the finest ever exhibited here. Mr. Knauf had a vase of outdoor Roses, exceptionally fine, considering the conditions and time of year in which they were grown. He lives in the heart of the city. The quality of flowers shown was really remarkable. "'Mums" is the subject for the next meeting. Hereafter the meetings will be held in the rooms of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., on Seventh st.

Rochester, N. Y.

Never in the history of the flower business has such a scarcity of stock existed as at present. The demands have been such in fact that it has been necessary to refuse business for want of material to fill orders. Prices have advanced to unheard of figures, Roses going from 8c. to 25c., and the demands far in excess of the supply. Carnations brought 6c. last Saturday, a price never before heard of in this market at this season of the year. No 'Mums are coming in as yet which makes matters worse. The few Asters still coming move at good prices even though the quality is generally poor. Dahlias are very scarce; the frosts have no doubt put an end to them. If present conditions are a gauge as to what they are to be in the future the outlook is anything but cheerful for a supply of stock to take care of the demands.

Flower City Personals

The property and greenhouses of the late Frank O'Brien have been purchased by George B. Hart. The plant is situated in Fairport, N. Y. There are about 17 acres which will be used as trial grounds for Hart & Vick, Inc., seedsmen.

The regular meetings of the Rochester Florists' Ass'n will be resumed on Monday, Oct. 14. Arrangements are being made to have a good attendance and a topic of interest to all for discussion.

The retail store of Max the Florist has been closed permanently because Max has been called for the second time to the Colors, this time for limited service.

Rochester has cause to mourn the passing of Nathan R. Graves, whose horticultural photographs have helped to establish for it the title of "Flower City." His obituary will be found in another column.

Dangerous New Potato Disease

A Potato disease, probably the most serious thus far known, has very recently been discovered by Prof. J. G. Sanders, Economic Zoologist of the Pennsylvania Dept. of Agri. The disease was found by Prof. Sanders near Hazelton, Pa. and had apparently gained access there previous to the quarantine established by the Federal Horticultural Board on Sept. 20, 1912, prohibiting the further importation of Potatoes into the United States.

The infection of the tuber takes place at the eye, or near it. A warty growth, not unlike a piece of Cauliflower, is quickly formed. Before long the Potato is entirely covered, becoming a warty mass. This decays in the soil and results finally in a brown, ill-smelling, pulpy mass, resembling a decayed puffball. This mass contains great numbers of spores, millions of which are thus freed in the soil and remain virulent there for at least seven or eight years, as experiments in Europe have shown that after rotation of crops for six years, during which no Potatoes were grown on the infected ground, the disease returned when Potatoes were once more planted. The progress of the disease is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The disease is readily carried by infected seed and may even be transmitted by parings from infected Potatoes thrown on the ground. Manure from animals fed with such infected, uncooked Potatoes may also be a means of spreading it. The fact that the disease destroys the tubers completely, combined with its insidious character and the long life of the spores, adds to its seriousness as a menace to the Potato growing industry.

The Pennsylvania State as well as the Federal authorities are taking every possible measure to fight the disease and prevent its spreading beyond the present area of infection. The entire anthracite mining section region of Pennsylvania is being carefully watched and it is suggested that State inspectors and others in various parts of the country keep a lookout for the disease, especially in those localities in which imported Potatoes may have been used during the past eight or ten years.

The Market

Local market quotations were as follows: Roses $6 to $20 per 100; Carnations $2 to $6; Asters $2 to $4; Gladioli, in limited supply, $6; Lilies $15 per 100; 'Mums are more plentiful and of good quality, selling from $1.50 to $3.50 per doz. Candytuft, Gypsophila, Dahlias, Celosia, Calendulas and other small flowers sell readily, as the supply of everything is far from meeting the demand.

The past week has been good weather. Florists were swamped with orders for funerals. Practically the same continue this week, with flowers high and scarce, the annual fruit and vegetable exhibition of the Worcester County Hort. Society will be Oct. 10, open to the public from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. The only call for flowers on this schedule will be 'Mums, four vases, six blooms in each. This will be the last show of the season until the Chrysanthemum exhibition, Nov. 7 and 8. It has been decided by the committee on arrangements to turn the 'Mum show over to the local chapter of the Red Cross to make whatever it can. It is probable that a small admission fee will be charged and at the close there will be an auction of cut blooms and potted plants donated by the exhibitors. Thus a good sum should be realized as the florists are taking great interest and are eager to make the display the best ever.

In our issue of Sept. 28, page 504, it was stated that John H. Slocombe of New Haven, Conn. won first prize for a collection of 25 varieties of Dahlias at the exhibition of the American Dahlias Society held in New York on Sept. 24 to 26. In addition to this we learn that Mr. Slocombe also won first prize for 50 blooms, as well as first prize for ten blooms, all Dahlias of his own raising.

Prevention of Potato Scab

How should seed Potatoes be treated previous to planting to prevent scab?—A. I., Wis.

Scab of Potatoes and Beets is due to a fungus which lives from year to year in the soil and on the tubers and roots. It is increased by manure and by lime, hence these should be applied not nearer than the year before Potatoes and Beets are planted. Plant clean seed in clean, uninfested land. If only scabby seed is available soak the uncut tubers in formalin solution 1 pint in 30 gallons of water for two hours. Drain and either cut at once or let dry. Use the solution over and over as far as it will go. Avoid having treated seed touch infested bins, floors, bags, tools, etc.

Some Hardy Ornamental Flowering Trees

These interesting and valuable notes are part of an address by John Dunbar, Assistant Superintendent of Parks of Rochester, N. Y., delivered before the meeting of the American Cemetery Superintendents' Association on September 11. It will be noted that Mr. Dunbar endorses the high opinion of our American Hawthorns held by Dr. Chas. S. Sargent, director of the Arnold Arboretum, and referred to in the article on American Hawthorns by Mr. Farrington in our last issue. Readers will also doubtless recall the interesting article on Lilacs by Mr. Dunbar, which appeared in THE EXCHANGE this June

In the embellishment of woodlands in parks, cemeteries and private estates, what are known in gardening language as "ornamental flowering trees" should receive a large degree of attention. Of course as a matter of fact all trees have their flowers. Oaks, Hickories, Beeches, Hornbeams, Elms and Birches, all have interesting blossoms, but they are more or less inconspicuous and never attract attention from the ordinary observer. There are many hardy trees however whose flowers are very showy and conspicuous and when they are used extensively in plantations and woodlands, or placed individually on the borders of lawns and meadows they produce a particularly showy and noticeable effect, and attract the attention of even the most indifferent observers.

It would seem to be very important to use this class of trees largely in cemetery plantations and woodlands, or wherever opportunity and requirements present themselves for such planting. The superintendents of modern cemeteries, it is pleasant to observe, are making every possible effort to beautify with trees, shrubs and plants the areas and surroundings that contain the remains of our departed relatives and friends. Surely this is altogether fitting and proper. No effort should be spared to make cemeteries beautiful with the most ornamental of hardy trees, shrubs and plants.

More About the American Hawthorns

American Hawthorns have come into much prominence, at least botanically, during the last fifteen to twenty years. During that time over a thousand species have been described in North America. Many of them are handsome, roundheaded trees, but the majority are either arborescent shrubs or shrubby in habit. They are very numerous in many places about the Great Lakes in heavy clay-limestone soil. They are very showy when in flower in Spring; some species are much more showy than others. Many of them are singularly attractive with their conspicuous crimson, scarlet, orange red, or orange yellow fruits in late Summer, Autumn and early Winter. No mistake can be made in planting these native Hawthorns liberally, as they fit remarkably well into all planting schemes where there is room for them to grow. They germinate the second year after sowing; that is they pass two Winters in the dormant state. We have raised thousands of them and we treat them in the same way as the Amelanchiers. We recommend the twelve species following as beautiful small trees to plant: Cratægus Arnoldiana, C. Barryana, C. Dunbari, C. durobrivensis, C. Ellwangeriana, C. ferentaria, C. genseensis, C. macracantha, C. nitida, C. opulens, C. rotundifolia, and C. regalis.

In a short time some prominent American nurserymen will be offering most of these Hawthorns for sale. During recent years the species in the Crus-galli group, and some species in some of the other groups have been attacked by a leaf miner which considerably disfigures them. This however can be destroyed by spraying with Black Leaf 40, according to formula, just about the time the leaves have attained nearly full size in Spring.

Our Native Amelanchiers

Our native shade trees or Juneberries (Amelanchiers) among hardy ornamental flowering trees, have so much to commend them that it is strange that the planting of them is hardly ever considered. In our city park woodlands, and particularly on the banks of the Genesee River in Seneca and Maplewood Parks, during the first week in May, it is a charming sight to see the shade trees in full bloom. The graceful, feathery branches, smothered with myriads of white blossoms, cannot be excelled in graceful beauty by any other flowering trees. I have noticed the woodlands on the western side of Mt. Hope Cemetery look particularly attractive with Shade Trees in bloom. A great deal is said about the wonderful beauty of Japanese Cherries. I have seen individual Shade Trees standing alone; fine specimens, wreathed in flowers, and perfect cynosures at a long distance, and I am sure that no Japanese Cherry in Japan could excel them in graceful beauty.

We propagate them in our parks extensively. The fruits are gathered when ripe, usually some time in July, soaked in water and the seeds separated and dried, as in this condition they can be distributed in sowing much more easily. We sow them in flats which are exposed to the weather and always kept moist and they germinate the following year. When large enough they are planted in the nursery and in three or four years they are of sufficient size to plant out permanently. Four species and one variety grow here, namely: Amelanchier canadensis, A. lævis, A. sanguinea, A. sanguinea, var. grandiflora, and A. humilis. The last three are shrubby in habit and flower later than the tree forms.

Various Attractive Crab Apples

The different species of ornamental Crab Apples are charming when in bloom. It takes a good many years, perhaps 15 to 20 years, to get a well roundheaded Crab Apple tree, but such a tree, with the branches wreathed in rose tinted, carmine red, blush, or white blossoms is indeed remarkably beautiful. One of the most popular is perhaps the Japanese form, known in catalogs as Malus floribunda, with rose tinted flowers. The form known as M. floribunda, var. atrosanguinea, with carmine red flowers, which however, I think has nothing to do with M. floribunda—is remarkably attractive in bloom. We have two native species in Western New York, namely M. coronarius and M. glaucescens. The double flowered Bechtel's Crab, a form of M. ioensis, is being extensively planted of late years, and is very desirable. Some equally handsome foreign species are M. baccata, M. Halliana, M. spectabilis, M. Sargenti (the last named seldom exceeds in size an arborescent shrub) and M. zumi.

The American species can be raised from seed, but that method is not reliable with the Asiatic species, as they seem to hybridize freely, and seedlings are usually very different from the parents, as we have found out from experience. We have propagated a great many by tongue grafting on common Apple roots, always using the central root on one year or two year seedlings. This is done in Winter and they are planted out in Spring. However, we shall probably bud them in August hereafter, as it is less trouble, and they grow into large plants much more quickly. It is difficult to purchase the different forms of Crab Apples in nurseries today, and park and cemetery superintendents must resort to propagation if they intend to use them to any extent.

The Red Buds and Halesias

The Red Buds add a charming color note to parks and cemeteries towards the end of May with their myriads of red or pale red flowers. Cercis canadensis can be grown into a shapely and handsome tree, but it needs considerable pruning attention, for, if left to grow at will it divides into numerous large limbs which are readily smashed by storms. The white flowering form sent out by the Teas of Carthage, Mo. is very beautiful. I don't think this is in the trade today. We have one plant, and we budded it this Summer on young seedling stock of the type of our own raising. The Chinese Red Bud, Cercis chinensis is much smaller growing than the American species. The flowers are a deeper red. It was severely injured with us last Winter. In an ordinary Winter it is not injured.

The Silver Bell, or Snow Drop Tree, Halesia carolina, when its beautiful bell-shaped, drooping white flowers appear, about the third week in May, is a handsome sight. Although it is a tree distributed in its wild state from Virginia to Texas it was not injured with us during last Winter. It has lately been observed that there are two important forms of this tree. One commonly sold in nurseries and now growing in ornamental grounds is the type, H. carolina, with low branching habit, and does not make a one stemmed tree. The variety monticola which under its native conditions, grows into a tree 80ft. to 90ft. tall, has much larger and showier flowers than the type, and when in full bloom is singularly handsome. One tree with us is now about 40ft. in height. We are much interested in this tree, because we were the first to call the attention of the distinguished dendrologist, Dr. C. S. Sargent to this form. Previous to this it had not been observed scientifically.

The Beautiful Dogwoods

The White Flowering Dogwood, Cornus florida, is perhaps one of the most beautiful flowering trees of North America. In seasons when it flowers abundantly there is no more beautiful sight to be seen than when copses, plantations and woodlands are adorned with hundreds of specimens in full flower. Unfortunately in the most Northern parts, where it is native, the flower buds are frequently Winter-killed. Last Winter with us all the flower buds were killed, and in numerous cases the wood was partly killed. We raise thousands of specimens of the Dogwood from seed, planting it extensively, and will continue to do so, because in years with ordinary Winters we can always depend upon it to make a fine display in Spring. The Kousan Dogwood, Cornus Kousa, from Japan, bears a strong resemblance to the White Flowering Dogwood. It flowers a month later, and the branches covered with numerous white bracts produce a charming effect.

Little attention has been paid to our American Plums as flowering subjects. We have admired them very much during late years. The American Plum, Prunus americana, and the Black Plum, Prunus nigra, when flowering in established groups, or as single, well-developed individuals, are remarkably attractive, as myriads of showy flowers are produced from every joint of the previous year's wood. The Allegheny Plum, Prunus allegheniensis; the Wild Goose Plum, P. hortulana; Munson's Plum, P. Munsoniana, and the Beach Plum, P. maritima—the last named is somewhat shrubby—are all highly decorative.

Hearing on Importation Regulations

In my circular of Aug. 29 accompanying the proposed revision of the Rules and Regulations governing the importation of nursery stock, plants, and seeds into the United States, it was suggested a conference be called for the discussion of the proposed regulations. In order to give ample opportunity for the presentation and discussion of any reasonable objections that may be made to these proposed regulations, the boards calls a conference for its final consideration at the Dept. of Agri., Room 11, Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., at ten o'clock, Oct. 18. All interested parties are invited to attend. C. L. Marlatt, Chairman.

All concerned will meet at the office of Wm. . Gude, 1214 F. st., N. W., Washington, at 9 a. m.

Boston Conference Postponed

In Massachusetts, owing to the order of the Health Dept., it has been found necessary to postpone the New England Gardeners' Conference which was to have been held in Boston on Oct. 18 under the auspices of the Boston members of the National Ass'n of Gardeners. Another date will be arranged as soon as restrictions are raised possibly in early November. M. C. Ebel, Secretary.

Why the Poor Dahlias?

I noticed in a recent issue of The Exchange an article entitled "Why the Poor Dahlia?" so contribute my part to the discussion you invite. I have always wondered why Dahlia growers, both professional and amateur, cannot determine what really troubles their Dahlias. As far back as ten years ago, I saw Dahlias become stunted, produce unnatural foliage, curl their leaves, show yellow edges, and cease to produce flowers or very poor ones.

My diagnosis is that this trouble is due to "white fly". Root disease and weather conditions have in my opinion, nothing to do with it. Any grower who has had troubles with white fly either indoors or out, on any or all plants, will soon recognize it if he grows Dahlias and has this particular trouble.

Ten years ago, I wrote to experimental stations, and the Dept. of Agri. in Washington, but none of these institutions gave me the least inkling how it can be fought. I am convinced that no spray or treatment will effectively fight it. By the way, it is by many growers called "thrip".

One Dahlia grower who has studied this insect told me an interesting experience he had this year. The white fly appeared in July. The grower soon noticed three species of ladybird betles in great quantities on certain plants, with the result that the plants seemed to pick up soon and were perfect in September. It seems that the beetles had feasted on the white fly and kept them off the plants. I therefore believe that the white fly can be destroyed only through some such agency.

Another grower informed me that in order not to waste any space he planted lettuce between the Dahlias, with the result that the white fly feasted on the lettuce and ruined it while the Dahlias were left unmolested and succeeded.

It is of great importance that something be done to check white fly out of doors, for if unchecked, it will be impossible to grow Dahlias.

It is peculiar that the white fly attacks only certain varieties of Dahlias. I found that the more robust the foliage, the less chances of attack.

I think that The Exchange rendered a valuable service by opening its pages to the discussion of this subject, for we may find someone who perhaps has solved this problem, and he can do a great good by letting the world at large benefit by his experience.

Very truly yours,

Maurice Fuld.

Check! Mate in Two Moves!!

By this time the German Imperial Government must know that shrewdness is a poor makeshift for rectitude. Its attempt to trick the United States into a cessation of hostilities by its recent "peace offensive" has been met by President Wilson's straightforward questions as to the exact intention of that Government. In substance the President asks:

1. Is the Imperial German Government ready to accept the fourteen principles laid down by the United States as necessary for peace?
2. Does it consent to withdraw its forces from all occupied territory?
3. Is the German Chancellor speaking for the constituted authorities of Germany by whom the war has been conducted?

No matter how these questions are answered it means—checkmate! For if answered one way it will mean an end to the war because the answers will be equivalent to unconditional surrender; and if answered in the other way the answer will mean precisely the same thing—unconditional surrender, not through diplomacy but through force of arms.

In the first case unconditional surrender will mean that Germany shall evacuate Belgium, France, Russia, Serbia, Italy, Montenegro and Rumania and withdraw her submarines from the high seas, also that she shall hold herself ready to allow the adjustment of colonial claims with reference to the wishes of the governed populations, abandon economic control of Russian territory, indemnify Belgium, restore Alsace-Lorraine, restore Italia-Irredenta, consent to the establishment of an independent Polish state, see to the relinquishment of Turkish control of non-Turkish populations, and the establishment of autonomous governments for the Austria-Hungarian nationalities.

If Germany agrees to do all these things, her promise must come from one other than a Hohenzollern mouthpiece and the military autocracy that plunged the world into war. If the chancellor replies that he talks for the "constituted authorities" his words on this point alone will end the "peace offensive" for the President has said: "We cannot accept the words of those who forced the war upon us. We do not think the same thoughts or speak the same language of agreement."

Florists, this means that we must continue to fight. The command is: "Forward, in the cause of humanity! Force to the utmost!!" This cause demands mountains of munitions, enormous amounts of material, millions of mighty men, the help of every man, woman and child in the nation. Nothing short of unconditional surrender will make the world safe for democracy. To insure this end it is imperative that everyone devote his best efforts and contribute unstintingly to the Victory Loan Campaign which our soldiers—many of them florists, nurserymen, fruit growers, truckers, farmers—all lovers of peace—are more than justifying by their "last full measure of devotion." Lend them, your brothers, your fullest aid!

Lend to Your Utmost!

Re-Education and Re-Construction

As our boys return from the war there will have to be made provision for many who will not be able again to take up the vocation they laid down when, sacrificing all interests, they joined the Colors and then encountered the rough and tumble campaigns, the most strenuous ever known. These will need education along new lines to the end that they will be enabled still to maintain themselves creditably on our generous American standard of good living which has ever been open to those who are willing to labor.

What part will the florist, the seedsman and the nurseryman play in teaching these men and in giving them employment?

Here is a condition which now exists, for men are already returning who will be unable to do any more fighting, and they will soon be ready for work.

It being impossible for us to conduct a personal canvass we ask readers to send us in suggestions as to positions such men, especially crippled men, could fill in their own lines. There must be scores of openings, in all our varied lines, especially now that labor is scarce.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Act recently enacted by Congress places disabled soldiers and sailors under the joint authority of Surgeon General of the Army and the Federal Board for vocational education. We learn that reconstruction hospitals have been established at Washinton, D. C., (Walter Reed Hospital) Ft. McPherson, G San Francisco, Cal. (Letterman General Hospital) N Haven, Conn., Fort Bayard, N. M., Markleton, P Cape May, Lakewood and Colonia, N. J., and Otisvil Plattsburg and Ft. Porter, N. Y. Hospitals at otl points are in process of organization. Various use trades are taught at these hospitals, besides such edu tional subjects as may be necessary.

In New York City there is in operation the Red Cr Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, which a trains disabled soldiers.

Remarkable things have also been done in the way supplying these disabled men with appliances to take t place of the limbs they have lost. For instance, t French have devised artificial arms and hands that able the crippled workers to perform with entire efficie such operations as pruning, grafting, digging, etc. and ports from France show that it is taken as a matter course there that the disabled man, after he has be trained and properly equipped, take his place with question by the side of the normal worker.

In Canada considerable progress has been made in t re-education of disabled soldiers; in that country hor culture, agriculture and related lines hold a high place the vocational scheme. At the Agricultural College Guelph, Ontario, the classes in market gardening a similar subjects are among the most popular.

Economizing on Heat in the Greenhouses

The coal situation has raised the question of h greenhouses may be operated at a minimum of c consumption without impairing the safety of the pla housed therein.

The problem is a most perplexing one, for it is g erally regarded that tender greenhouse plants can long survive without proper temperatures and con quently fast rules are usually adhered to in the nec sary heating for the care of stove and other tender plan The drastic experiments of a gardener in England, rela in the Gardeners' Chronicle (London), demonstrate t remarkable degree the hardiness of many so called ten subjects (and as the gardener stated), plants for wh our forefathers would have considered the stove h absolutely necessary. As his experiments will undoubte prove of interest and a possible aid at this time the meth employed are repeated in his own words, which follow:—

"In my particular establishment firing has been duced to the veriest minimum. Throughout the Su mer, artificial heat, except a little necessary for pro gation, has not been used; and even now we have o sufficient to guard against the effects of frost and t occasional wet and foggy nights. Yet, speaking g erally, the various batches of plants are very little low the usual standard.

"Kentias, such ferns as Nephrolepis, Adiantiums, Pte and Aspleniums, Crotons, Gardenias, and many oth stove and greenhouse plants are looking perfectly healt The ferns made excellent growth during the Summ the palms have also grown, though slowly, and are app ently quite happy. Many of the true stove (i.e., wa house) plants are now practically at a standstill, do not appear to be suffering in any way, and insect pe have given very little trouble. Begonia Gloire de Lorrai and the Winter-flowering hybrids, such as Mrs. He Optima, and their kindred varieties, are flowering w although the night temperature is often below 40 d The plants might have been larger, perhaps, but t flowers are strong and free, and their colors, seem ex bright. The variety Gloire de Sceaux looks a little comfortable, and probably needs warmth to develop flowers. Gloxinias and Streptocarpuses grew and flower well, though a little later than usual, and the form plants made excellent tubers. The Cyclamen tasted degree or so of frost, and appear none the worse for they are throwing up good flowers, though they ha scarcely known fire-heat. So with many other indo subjects, a few have suffered, but, considering the savi effected, it might justly be called a negligible few.

"Naturally, such drastic reductions in temperatu are not resorted to except as an emergency measur and are not recommended. Such conditions can on be safe and successful in co-operation with special ar careful treatment, particularly in regard to the use the watering pot. Reduction of temperature must accompanied by an equal reduction of moisture, bot at the roots of plants and in the atmosphere. Fre air should be afforded whenever possible. During th Winter months syringing and damping should be entirel suspended, and water applied with great care, only wh absolutely necessary. Experiments prove that the m jority of greenhouse plants require very little water indee under Winter conditions, and if kept on the dry side a much better able to withstand frost and the evil effects fog.

"Perhaps a little more fresh air and cooler treatmer might reveal the hidden charms of many of our ove coddled inhabitants of the greenhouse."

Notes on Rose Culture

By EBER HOLMES

The problems of the Rose grower are many and varied in these times, the most important being the scarcity and high price of coal and labor. In regard to the former difficulty, houses will be run at a lower temperature than formerly; some will be closed for the Winter after the Fall crop has been cut, or after Christmas, depending somewhat on individual requirements and circumstances. On some places where it has been customary to burn up several carloads of coal previous to the date of this writing, Sept. 20, practically none has been used so far this Fall. It is now time, however, that fire heat be used for a part of the night at least, and by putting in a night man, coal may be saved by using in part any cheap substitute that may be available, such as old lumber, corncobs, sawdust, or anything that will burn and give off heat. During the coal shortage of last Spring we commenced on Feb. 6 in very cold weather with a mixture of four parts of Pine sawdust to one of soft coal and pulled through from that date until the end of May with a minimum consumption of coal. Air should be carried in the houses at all times with the fire heat to keep up the health and vigor of the plants. If dew forms on the foliage over night it is a sure indication that you lack steam heat and air, and a week of this treatment will produce disastrous results to your plants. With a little cooler treatment than usual you may not get quite so many flowers as is customary at this time of the year, but with careful treatment your plants will be more vigorous and the flowers of better quality. With a curtailed production and an increasing expenditure the prices obtained should be higher and it would seem that the growers should come to some definite agreement among themselves and demand a fair price for their goods, to cover the higher cost of production. There should be an end to the reckless waste of flowers, and the old practice of dumping stock into the ash barrel ought to be discontinued. The serious shortage of labor may be overcome somewhat by employing women or young people to do the lighter kinds of work, including grading and packing of flowers, tying, cleaning up, etc. A great deal of work has to be curtailed and it is important to decide properly what is essential work, and what may be left undone without detriment to the stock.

Watering and Pinching

The general care and methods of cultivation will be much the same as usual. Less use of the hose for syringing at this time is advisable, as red spider is not troublesome now as when hard firing is practiced, when the sun is getting hot in the Springtime. Careful attention should be paid to watering, doing this thoroughly when needed and early in the day, so that the surplus moisture may evaporate before night. A light top-dressing of rich loam and manure may be applied with advantage to any plants that were set out early, or on old plants where the soil is becoming exhausted.

There is nothing better than a careful regulation of the crop by pinching off about half the growth at regular intervals. Take out the points from the short growth, and cut off about one-third the length of the longer ones, leaving the best and strongest growth if the best grade of stock is wanted. By dividing the place into sections and pinching a part every week you can have a continuous supply of flowers. About Oct. 10 would be a good time to pinch for a Thanksgiving crop and a relatively later date for Christmas, making allowances for prospective temperatures to be carried, location of beds and arrangement of heating pipes, which may make a difference of a week in the crop in certain parts of the place.

An Early Shut-down

Where it is the intention to shut down the house shortly the pinching may be eliminated and everything possible cut from the stock in the meantime. For an early shut-down the cooling off process may begin in October, going down gradually until a minimum of 26 deg. is reached in November. The house may be kept around the freezing point at night for a few weeks, when the plants may be cut down, watered every day for a week and then have a top-dressing of manure which should be well watered in and then no more water should be given for several weeks, or until the plants are leafed out and growing nicely. When cut down and being started into growth a night temperature of 40 deg. is advisable, which may be raised gradually as growth progresses. These plants will give fine flowers in February or March, according to the time of starting. To get the best results the first growth should be pinched which adds greatly to the vigor of the plants. The resting period may be changed to suit requirements, allowing about three months from the time of starting to cutting the crop.

Where it is the intention to close altogether for the Winter, the water and heating pipes should be drained at the required time and the plants may be covered with Marsh Hay or any similar cheap covering and kept frozen until Spring; about the only care required would be to see that mice do not get inside the covering and eat the bark from the plants, and to give air during warm spells so that the plants are kept dormant. They may be uncovered in the Spring when required and will give a splendid crop for Memorial Day or earlier with little expense.

Cuttings

Cuttings may be put in the sand at any time now, which will make fine stock for early benching in the Spring. Select good stock from the best flowering plants and as soon as rooted pot them into small pots, using good loam, or if there is a sunny bench available set them out close together in about 2in. of loam, where they will make better plants than they would in pots. Get all the soil that you will require during the Winter under cover before the bad weather sets in and before it gets too wet. Handle this while it is dry for the best results.

Obituary

Thomas J. Gibson

Thomas J. Gibson who had been ill for some time with an affection of the heart died at his home on Bliss Road, Newport, R. I., Sunday October 6, in his 68th year. The deceased established the Gibson Brothers florist business on Malbone road in 1872. It continued under that name until 1912 when the partnership was dissolved; the two brothers Joseph and John W. continuing it at 9 Malbone road until the death of the latter on Sept. 8, 1918, leaving Joseph Gibson the sole partner of the firm. From 1912 on until the present Summer, Thomas J. Gibson continued business in his own name, at the store on Washington Square, formerly occupied by the old firm. He was thus in the florist business continuously for 46 years, and leaves an unblemished reputation behind him. He was a member of the Representative Council of the City continuously for almost 11 years. Newport Daily News has this to say of him: "Mr. Gibson was ever ready to help others, and his cheerful disposition made and kept many friends throughout the city. He was a man of sterling worth, and in his business relations and personal friendships showed those characteristics which gave him the esteem of his fellow citizens and made him universally respected." A widow, one brother, Joseph Gibson, and three sisters, Mrs. George Taylor, and the Misses Caroline L. and Susan E. Gibson survive. ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

Mrs. James E. M. Weir

Mrs. James E. M. Weir died on Wednesday, Oct. 2, at her residence 8216 Ridge boulevard, Brooklyn, N. Y., of a complication of diseases. Mrs. Weir was 47 years of age. She had been sick since last January and confined to her home for the past three months, previous to which time she had, since her husband became an invalid, successfully conducted the flower shop of James Weir, Inc., corner of Fulton and Pierrepont sts., Brooklyn, for about eight years. A requiem high mass was celebrated on Friday morning, Oct. 4, at 9 a.m., in the Church of Our Lady of Angels. Interment was at Greenwood Cemetery on Friday. The funeral was largely attended and there were many beautiful floral offerings. Mrs. Weir was a native of Augusta, Ga. She is survived by her husband, two daughters and a son. The business of which she was the head will be continued under the management of Edward J. McCarthy who had been manager for some time before Mrs. Weir's death.

Charles Gustavus Roebling

In the death, on Oct. 5, of Charles Gustavus Roebling of Trenton, N. J., president of the John A. Roebling Sons Co., one of the world's greatest organizations of engineers, floriculture has lost an eminent enthusiast and patron.

Mr. Roebling was born in Trenton in 1849, and became engaged in the business of his father, the late John A Roebling, in 1871, becoming active in the progress of the plant from practically its infancy, until it reached the enormous valuation of fifty million dollars, furnishing employment for 8000 workers. For many years Mr. Roebling was head of the enterprise.

In the early eighties, Mr. Roebling, as a relaxation from the cares of business, engaged in floriculture as a hobby, specializing in orchids, and it was in orchid culture that he became best known to the trade in both America and Europe. He gathered together a collection of orchids which was recognized as the finest in America, and which compared very favorably with some of the best of the European collections. He spared neither money nor pains to secure the rarest of specimens, the collection eventually requiring about 12,000 ft. of glass to accommodate it. He was known as a successful hybridist, and not a few of his hybrids have found their way into commerce, notably Cypripedium Wm. McKinley, C. Pres. Garfield, C. Abraham Lincoln, Zygopetalum Roeblingianum and many others. Some of the varieties in his collection were considered as priceless, and he had at all times facilities for hybridization work such as few would consider possible.

He was well known as an exhibitor at our most important shows and won many prizes. He is remembered as the winner of the second prize at the big orchid show held in Boston in 1910, in competition with the largest commercial firms in the business. He was a regular exhibitor at the flower shows in New York, and any movement looking to the advancement of horticulture had his unstinted support. The town of Roebling, which he founded, very naturally benefited horticulturally through his interested effort, home plantings receiving his especial commendation and encouragement. Every year this prosperous little town held a flower show of no mean order. Of this he was patron and leading spirit. It evoked much enthusiasm among the population.

The deceased will be greatly missed in horticultural circles where he was greatly esteemed and looked up to as one who had done much for horticulture in this country. He was very easy of approach and was at all times ready to give time and attention to the many in the trade with whom he was acquainted. It was the privilege of the writer to enjoy business relations with the deceased extending over a period of nearly thirty years, during which time his constancy to his well-chosen hobby was most marked, and his faith in the ultimate appreciation generally of the benefit and pleasure to be derived from the study and practice of horticulture was remarkable in its strength.

Mr. Roebling was a member of the S. A. F. & O. H., of the Horticultural Society of New York, Mass. Horticultural Society and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Nathan R. Graves

Nathan R. Graves, horticultural photographer, passed away on Oct. 5 at his home, 88 Kingston st., Rochester, N. Y. He leaves his wife, four daughters and one son. Mr. Graves' success was due to his natural love for flowers and plants. He helped to make Rochester famous by contributing to many publications and magazines photographs of Rochester's parks and most popular streets. His photographs were used in the catalogs of almost every prominent seedsmen in the United States. His reputation for photographs of trees, shrubs and flowers was world wide extending to many of the foreign countries. His contribution of photographs to American horticulture are of priceless value to this great industry. The business since his illness has been under the supervision of Mrs. Greenwood, his assistant for the past ten years. As there are thousands of negatives and prints on hand, she and Mrs. Graves will continue the business. Mr. Graves was a member of the Rochester Florists' Ass'n and keenly interested in all its endeavors. He was also recently appointed official photographer for the Society of American Florists. His passing is an irreparable loss to American horticulture and particularly to this community. H. B. STRINGER.

At the time of going to press we were notified that Louis Schmutz, Jr., has passed away. Mr. Schmutz was associated in business with his father, Louis Schmutz, Sr., with greenhouses on Clarkson st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Report

$500 worth of bonds in Washington, the home of our president, and we will this year buy $500 worth of the Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds in Detroit, the home of your secretary, and $500 worth will be bought in Cleveland, the home of our hosts.

To show you the progress our little organization has made, let me tell you that in the month of September the secretary's office forwarded to the treasurer the neat little sum of $3879.50; pretty good for one month. This is the largest sum ever sent to the treasurer at one time. Our guarantee fund is intact and amounts today to $9000.

You may perhaps wish to know what we are doing with all the money we get hold of. Well, we "blow it all in" as fast as we get it, with the exception of our income towards the guarantee fund. All other incomes are spent for your benefit to the best of our ability. We have shown you results; we have that from your own figures returned in the questionnaires. If all your investments bring you as good results as those brought by your little annual dues in the F. T. D., you can safely congratulate yourself.

All the officers of the F. T. D. have done their work for your benefit and have done it voluntarily for the past eight years. They had to stand abuse, nasty criticisms and many other petty annoyances but they have fought your fight and feel that at last they are getting a little appreciation.

The F. T. D. Clearing House

The F. T. D. Clearing House has been very busy for the past twelve months but has not had any serious trouble because usually one letter from the clearing house brings results both with members and non-members; 90 per cent. of bills sent to the clearing house are paid. In most cases failure to pay is due to negligence, or possibly a little financial trouble on account of present conditions. One remarkable feature, however, is that we hardly ever get a bill through the clearing house from Canada or have to collect from our Canadian members and I do hope they will enlighten all American retail florists on this subject.

Hundreds of bills have gone through the clearing house. Our records are open only to our members as every discretion must be used to forestall legal trouble. Many retail florists and even some of our members have been taught to follow the straight and narrow path and the golden rule of paying bills promptly, and today many of them do not have their credit questioned for a minute.

It is a great deal better policy to cure such evil than to kill and destroy a man's business. Let us rather help a brother member, providing he is of the kind who deserves help, than to give him another kick if he has been a little more unfortunate than we have, and in nine out of ten cases we will be rewarded by his becoming an excellent member of our organization.

One of the questions left out of the questionnaire was: "Has the F. T. D. Clearing House of past due bills been of any benefit to you, and to what extent? I believe that this Clearing house system can be made of utmost value to our members. It is a step in the right direction, to bring about cleaner and better business relations. It will also have the most marked effect on all retailers who are not F. T. D. members and will help to win some of them over to joining our organization and working with us.

The correspondence in our F. T. D. files in regard to collections speaks volumes and no one not familiar with the work has the slightest idea of what an immense pressure we can put behind our organization, and I can safely say that the time will come when all good retailers must be F. T. D. members, not alone for the sake of sending and receiving orders but in order to establish credit with all F. T. D. members, and for their own protection. I can see the time coming when we will fill orders only for F. T. D. members.

The road we are traveling has not yet been touched by our American Engineer Corps but when they get through with their job on the other side they will see that we also get better roads in this country.

"Amount of Business Increase Gained Through Membership in the F. T. D. "

The answers to this question disclosed an extraordinary condition of affairs. Out of our entire membership not more than twenty-five can actually tell you what amount of out of town business they are doing annually. It is small wonder to me now that our organization is not more fully appreciated. The ones whose answers were in figures I can safely state are the retail florists whom you hear mentioned as being successful in all the different departments of their business.

Judging from the majority of the answers, there has been a considerable increase in the out of town business. Some day our members will get down to actual figures and we will be able to tell what has been accomplished. In most cases they have roughly guessed at it but as the F. T. D. has not got down to a guessing contest I will give a few specific figures. Here are the figures given by one retailer: 913 orders received, amounting to $3909.03, each order averaging $4.25; 773 orders sent out, amounting to $4829.27, each order averaging $6.25. This means a total volume of new business of $8738.30 for one year. Six or seven years ago I doubt whether this party had more than $500 or $600 worth of this kind of business. The party in question pays $20 annual dues. Naturally he is in a large city. If all F. T. D. members will keep close tab on their out of town business in this same city they could pleasantly surprise themselves, as their business in this branch is probably just as large, if not larger.

Do not think that because there may be a good many F. T. D. members in a town that any one florist necessarily gets the lion's share; if he does get it, it is for the simple reason that he sends out a great many reciprocating orders.

Study how you can manage to send out more orders than anyone else in your town and your figures will climb upward from year to year. Some of our members' figures run considerably over the $10,000 mark and even in some of the smaller towns members have big figures to show.

One man said in one of the trade papers, that the total of F. T. D. exchange orders amounted to $2,000,000 per year. He was merely guessing at the figure; I believe, however, that it is even more than that. At any rate he started something, for a number of our members wrote in to the F. T. D. office and said that they did not get their share. I had but one answer for all of them and that was: How much and how many orders have you sent out? Remember that in F. T. D. business you must first learn to put in your share of work before you can expect to get results.

Membership

Our membership has not increased a great deal and not at all the way it ought to, considering the great amount of new business we have developed, not alone for our own members but for all retail florists throughout the country.

It is strange that, on many occasions we have to send orders to or fill orders for retailers who are not members. Why can we not make them see the benefit of becoming members and why does it take so long for some of them to join us.

I have almost come to the conclusion that, even with the great publicity campaign of the S. A. F., which, I am very glad to say, our F. T. D. members are supporting loyally, a great many retail florists do not yet see the great benefit they are deriving from this great work and the money which is being spent by others. I think they ought to almost feel ashamed not to do their bit to help carry the burden.

The slogan "Say it with Flowers" has become a valuable asset to every man and woman who grows or sells flowers and no better advertisement could be gotten up for publicity from florist to the people. But we must adopt a different sort of publicity for ours, from florist to florist, and the proper slogan that come to my mind is: "Say it with a club."

There are several ways of carrying on such publicity. The most direct, and best of all is one that costs our members only a little cooperation and very little work.

How many times are you compelled to send an order to a retailer in a town where we have no member and how many times do you receive orders from retailers who are not members? Just there and then is the time for you to strike: write him a note and ask him why he does not join and work with us? At the same time put his address on a postal card and notify your secretary.

The second way of reaching the retail florist is by publicity through the trade papers, and every time one of our members states that his business from out of town sources has grown larger than it was the previous year he is setting some retailer thinking.

The third method is by keeping him supplied with our membership list and continuing to send him literature from the F. T. D. office. Some have taken three, four and five years but have finally joined us. A number of good retailers have promised six or seven years ago to join but are not with us yet.

We have lost members. Some are overseas and doing their best to help our country. Others have been forced out of business, some of these having been compelled to do so through loss of help. The answers to our questionnaire can tell volumes about the help situation. Our help is "over there" fighting the battle for us and it is our foremost duty to keep the "home fires burning" and keep things going so that when they come back they will find their places open for them again.

At all times be lenient with your fellow florist if he is the kind who deserves leniency; at the same time be on your guard, and watch the charges on your books. We all have to be a little more conservative in order to be fully prepared for the immense amount of trade which we will undoubtedly get after the boys come back.

Can any of us write a letter of appreciation better than to "Say it with Flowers"? Every kind of celebration will "Say. it with Flowers." To every convalescent sailor or soldier boy we will "Say it with Flowers."

Our membership represents in the neighborhood of 400 towns. Have any of you an idea as to how many towns we have in this great country? There are 2996 towns with a population of 1000 to 3000; 711 have 3000 to 5000; 599 have 5000 to 10,000; 351 have 10,000 to 25,000; 182 have 25,000 to 100,000; 42 have 100,000 to 500,000 and there are nine cities with a population of more than 500,000. I have more detailed figures which I will give you later.

Can you tell me that there is any town in the United States and Canada today that has not at least one florist? I doubt it. Now let us all get together and see whether we can not enlist some of them.

Ladies and gentlemen, I can read your answer. You will tell me that there are many small florists, who in your opinion, do not amount to much. However, do not forget that any or all of them can and will, sooner or later, send out of town orders for you and me to fill. Many times we need them for orders that we would not be able, for lack of time, to have shipped from some larger florist. It is time that, instead of finding fault with smaller florists' concerns, we helped and educated them to see things our way. I know that some of these so-called smaller town florists are on a better and more up to date footing than some of our well known and old established firms are.

The F. T. D. will not be satisfied until we have enlisted every good reliable retailer in every town, small or large. The F. T. D. will not wait for the local members' endorsement of a prospective member in any town as there is often petty jealousy shown by members, which prevents them from recommending new members. If you F. T. D. members and retailers only realized what cooperation and concerted efforts in our line of business by all retailers in one town could do, you would never talk of competitors again; there would not be such a thing; but only friends in the same line of business.

In a great many towns florists do not even know each other, for if they did they would find out soon enough that none of them are as black as the other thought they were. Occasionally an F. T. D. member will say that he will not have anything to do with Greek florists. Ladies and gentlemen, we have in this country no English, German or Greek florists. The time has come when we must think of all as American florists.

And are we not all working toward the same end, that is to increase the sale of flowers, or to get the public to "Say it with Flowers."

A good deal of criticism comes into our office on account of slow remittances. The cause of the trouble is that the credit system in the florists' business is about the poorest piece of guesswork that ever existed and only through steady and everlasting education can this ever be remedied. The greatest help of late has been the tightening of credits in all business branches and the average florist today is waking up to the fact that he is behind the time. There are still some of this kind; if you send one or the other an order, behold in about six months' time you may get a bill and then perhaps find that he has made a delivery for you. He will tell every traveling man that so and so owes him a bill. But why he does not send you a bill immediately after delivery is made, is absolutely beyond my understanding. Some even go so far as sending their customers a bill only once a year because they are afraid that they will lose a customer if they send a bill. Does this kind of florist ever figure that if he had all the money that is owing him by his customers loaned out at six per cent or invested in Liberty Bonds, he would have money enough to attend a good F. T. D. meeting, with money left and experience gained?

A number of suggestions for the good of the F. T. D. were received from members, to be passed on.

Vice-president Breitmeyer then addressed the convention, paying a high tribute to the work of secretary Pochelon and referring to the continued advancement of both the S. A. F. and F. T. D.

A telegram was read from Treasurer Rock regretting his absence and with sincere wishes for the success of the convention and of the Fourth Liberty Loan, and mentioning the fact that Cleveland was his original home town, which it would have given him great pleasure to have visited at this time.

Afternoon Session, Tuesday

At the Tuesday afternoon session it was announced that a telegram of felicitation from the F. T. D. had been sent to President and Mrs. Wilson, together with a special wire delivery floral remembrance at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, which the Washington florists wired back had been delivered as per order.

An address was made by Floyd E. Waite, director of the Parks Department, representing the Mayor, who was out of the State speaking for the Liberty Loan. Concluding his remarks Mr. Waite said that the florists bring light and sunshine into the souls of men and women everywhere, and therefore contribute to the strength and morale of the nation during the war. W. J. Gammage made an apt response.

The F. T. D. questionnaire was then taken up, but was not completed at this session. Various florists explained their methods of keeping track of orders sent out and received. Secretary Pochelon said his object was to bring florists to realize the great volume of business done as an argument for enlisting new members who cannot afford to stay out any longer. Messrs. Schling, Washburn, Feast, Rogers, Penn, Asmus, Baum, Breitmeyer, Gammage, McKenna, Harper, Brown of Cleveland, Brown of New York and others spoke of the system of keeping tab of orders, to be prepared by a special committee, for members desiring to purchase and make use of the necessary forms, etc.

On motion of Mr. Asmus it was decided that foreign members be received on the $5 per annum payment basis without guarantee. Secretary Pochelon, it was pointed out, had a number of foreign applications, which will be favorably acted upon.

The question of stimulating prompt payment between members was discussed fully and referred to the executive board for action.

Irwin Bertermann moved that a committee be appointed on relations with the S. A. F. to report at the next session. The committee was authorized and named as President Gude, George Asmus, Philip Breitmeyer and Irwin Bertermann.

Contestants for window displays in Cleveland were: Gasser Co., Smith & Fetters, Jones-Russell Co., Knoble Bros., Park Flower Shop, A. Graham & Son, Taylor Arcade Shop, and Wagner Avenue Flower Shop. The Committee on Awards for same, with W. J. Gammage as chairman, reported as follows: First prize, $100, Knoble Bros.; 2d prize, silver cup, J. M. Gasser Co.; 3d prize, $25, Smith & Fetters. The report was approved and prizes awarded were, by suggestion of President Gude, either in Liberty Bonds or Thrift Stamps.

The entire convention was asked to rise and announce their names in rotary fashion.

The nominating committee with Irwin Bertermann as chairman, reported for president Wm. F. Gude; vice-president, Phil. Breitmeyer; treasurer, W. L. Rock; directors, A. F. Borden, W. J. Palmer, J. W. Grandy, George Schultz, Chas. H. Brown, James S. Wilson, Vincent Gorley, J. W. Furrow, Sam Murray, three of the nine to be selected, with privilege of further nominations from the floor.

Phil. Breitmeyer urged a more adequate allowance of expenses for the president and secretary. This was referred to the board of directors, with power to act, on motion of Mr. Geraghty. Mr. Asmus suggested that secretary John Young solicit, on his travels, new members for the F. T. D.

Past president Adam Graham was recognized in the audience and invited to address the convention. He reviewed the wonderful progress made by the F. T. D. and recalled the meeting of the S. A. F. in Cleveland in 1896 when he was president and appointed Mr. Gude on the executive board, who next year became president. Mr. Gude acknowledged his debt to Mr. Graham for putting him on the S. A. F. map. Mr. Graham said in reply that it was not he, but Mr. Gude's own ability that caused this.

Evening Session, Tuesday

A presentation of film pictures, affording pleasure and instruction, showed F. T. D. officers, leading Cleveland florists at their daily vocation, newspaper retail florists' advertising, concluding the presentation with showing the growth of a marvellous fern arranged by Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, to whom was given a standing vote of thanks. This film show elicited continuous applause.

Herman P. Knoble then read a paper on publicity, which was earnestly listened to, it being one of the best papers ever prepared, and of which more will be published later.

Following this Major O'Keefe gave an extempore address on national advertising. Both gentlemen were given a rising vote of thanks.

Geo. Asmus then asked for contributions for the publicity campaign. The meeting then adjourned.

Wednesday Morning Session

The members met at 9 o'clock. Vincent Gorley of St. Louis presented an idea for a flower to be adopted for each month—a standard language of flowers. This suggestion was accepted and a committee of three appointed to work out the proposition.

The committee on the cost of doing business occupied a good portion of this session.

On motion of Mr. Geraghty the matter of admitting traveling men as associate members was referred to the Board of Directors.

F. W. C. Brown of Cleveland moved the appointment of a committee on better business to censor objectionable advertising and other questionable practices, said committee to bring in its recommendation at the next meeting.

With regard to the F. T. D. emblem, it was decided to continue the original design, improved. It turned out in discussion that the Detroit artist who drew the original Mercury was also awarded the $200 prize for the emblem selected by the committee, but now rejected in favor of the original.

The important step in the morning session was the adoption of Mr. Breitmeyer's motion that a conference be held between directors of the S. A. F. and the F. T. D., the latter with the power to endeavor to effect an agreement whereby the F. T. D. as an organization could pay modified dues to the S. A. F. on behalf of its members.

At this point thirty Columbia girls, draped with American flags, headed by Uncle Sam and escorted by a body of Marines, paraded the hall. Tumultuous applause ensued. W. C. Gloeckner of Albany, was announced the winner of the $50 Liberty Bond for best suggestion for improvement and betterment of the F. T. D., which suggestion is to offer $5 to traveling men for each F. T. D. member brought in from points where no member now exists.

New directors elected were A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Cal.; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y., and Chas. Grakelow of Philadelphia.

Exhibits

The Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, had an exhibit of supplies in Room 328 at the Hollenden Hotel. About everything in the supply line known to the trade was on display.

Henry A. Dreer Inc., Philadelphia, exhibited a handsome group of Crotons, ferns, Dracænas and other decorative plants in the Convention hall.

Chicago Flower Growers' Ass'n. exhibited vases of Milady, Russell and Columbia Roses around the speakers' stand.

Carl Hagenberger, West Mentor, O., had on exhibition Solanum Cleveland and decorative plants.

The Friedley Co., Cleveland, exhibited a group of Cyclamens, Begonias, ferns and decorative plants.

Nauman Co., Cleveland, exhibited Crotons, Ficus and ferns.

A few ribbon salesmen had exhibits in their rooms.

Knoble Bros., Jones Russell Co., and Smith & Fetters had each a table of novelties in vases filled with dainty and appropriate flowers.

The new Roses, Mme. Butterfly from the J. H. Hill Co., and Premier from the E. G. Hill Co., both of Richmond, Ind., were prominent features of the meeting and exhibition. One hundred of each in tall pedestal vases on each side of the stage gave inspiration to every one of the speakers.

A number of florists exhibited samples of advertising used by them in their local papers, including special advertising for all occasions, from January to December on which flowers are in extensive demand. This advertising also took in folders for general use by the retailers for mailing to their own trade. These advertisements were exhibited on panels that covered the entire walls of the meeting room. They were generally most creditable, showing much of the art of the florist blended and with that of the typographical expert. The panels were 80in. long by 54in. deep. There were about 25 in all, some being smaller. Those who had displays were as follows:

John M. Cassidy, Boston, Mass; A. Warendorff, New York (sample poster); Jacob Schultz Co.; Louisville, Ky.; Phillipe Bros., Newark, N. J.; Dahls, Atlanta, Ga.; Holm & Olsen, St. Paul, Minn.; Schiller the Florist, Chicago, Ill.; Jos. About 25 panels some smaller.)

Luncheon

An excellent luncheon was served by the local committee in the parlors adjoining the meeting room at the close of the opening session on Tuesday. The parlors were handsomely decorated with new Roses from J. H. Hill Co. and the E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind. The tables were decorated with Boltonia asteroides, a handsome vase in the center of each table and sprays scattered profusely among china and silverware.

During the progress of the luncheon Flora Handoff Andrews of considerable fame as a reader and elocutionist gave some humorous readings, recited many gems of poetry pertaining to flowers and gave a toast to our boys over there that was drunk amid great cheering.

Wm. F. Gude spoke a few minutes in favor of the Liberty Loan. He later introduced Seaman Jack Borker a quartermaster now stationed in the Cleveland harbor. His singing was highly enjoyed. Being recently back from England he sang American rag time songs as the English Tommy's do. He was given a rising vote of thanks for his entertainment and a dozen of the local florists each offered to donate for one month enough flowers for the Jackies' Canteen in this city thus insuring a supply of flowers for twelve months by which time the war will be over.

Reception by Mrs. J. M. Gasser

At 4 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the F. T. D. members were taken out in automobiles to the J. M. Gasser Co. range. The route was through Edgewater Park and Lake ave., finally crossing the bridge over Rockey river, affording one of the greatest drives obtainable anywhere in this land of impressive views, the Boulevard being lined with splendid homes and always Lake Erie in full view. The greenhouses and plants were in first-class condition although, as with all other florists, labor is almost unobtainable. Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums were largely in evidence, but many houses were given over to miscellaneous stock. The immense Lord & Burnham house, devoted to Roses, was a center of attraction. The range covers 342,000 sq. ft.

Retracing the way a stop was made at Mrs. Gasser's wonderful home, right on the lake, at the very spot where the greenhouses stood 22 years ago, at the time of the S. A. F. Convention. Here the visitors were received by Mrs. Gasser, Mrs. Pettee (her daughter), and Mrs. Bartels, and most hospitably entertained. On behalf of the visitors Wm. F. Gude and Adam Graham both made touching speeches, extolling the personality of the late J. M. Gasser, his humanness and the business ability which had guided him, and, since his death, Mrs. Gasser to the great success achieved in a business way.

The afternoon's outing was a delightful success, and Mrs. Gasser was heartily thanked by the delegates for extending the invitations to visit her at her home. As Mr. Gude well pointed out, the success attained here was open to any young florist starting in business, if he followed the course of the Gasser family in giving everyone a square deal, exacting the same for himself and pursuing his business assiduously.

Agricultural Committee Reaches England

The U. S. Dept. of Agri. announces the arrival in England of a committee of men familiar with food production and agricultural organization and activities in the United States. The committee will secure general information regarding food production conditions in England, France, and Italy, so that when they return, they will be able to reveal the needs more effectively to the leaders of agriculture in the United States and to farmers generally. They will also study the seed situation and the probabilities of securing supplies from Europe.

THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE has for some time advocated the adoption of the Laurel as the symbolic flower of America. Accordingly we are glad to note that the citizens of Berlin township, Pa. want the name changed so that it will be something more typically American; to attain this they are proposing to adopt the name of "Laurel" as being exclusively American.

Not Profiteering.—The profits of one big fertilizer company have been merely doubled in the past year, although the cost of fertilizer to the consumer has been increased more than five times. The increase in the manufacturer's profit is due chiefly to the greater use of sulphuric acid. A doubled war profit, due to largely increased sales in one line, as contrasted to a fivefold rise in selling prices, does not suggest any profiteering. It does demonstrate the magnitude of increased labor and material costs.—N. Y. Sun.

Coal.—Once more the weekly report of coal production shows a great gain. Better late than never, but it is no reason for relaxation of all possible economies and still less for any let-up in maintaining production. The total of 13,043,000 tons of bituminous is still below the best previous record, and the total output still falls below the estimate of immediate need by about 3 per cent. There is, moreover, much reason to believe that this estimate is very far below the actual demand, and this demand is steadily growing and must keep on growing while war needs continue. There is encouragement in the newest figures but no reason for optimism.—N. Y. Sun.

Practical Talks to the Management

Making Up—Watch Profits from Designs—Make Your Telegraphic Orders Simple and Clear—Should Price be Featured in Advertising?

W. CLEAVER HARRY

LET all the regular employees of the store learn to make up. By that I do not mean that they should neglect their regular work, the special work they have been detailed to look after but, in view of the present situation and circumstances, it is a good idea to break every one into the design department with the exception of the office force. Indeed, it is often true that much talent is found in the rank and file that is undeveloped because the florist does not avail himself of it. I strongly advocate this especially at the rush season—Christmas and Easter and other big days—as it is one department of the work with which everybody in the establishment should be familiar.

Most workers in the trade do not realize that the art of floral designing and floral arrangement, is one of the simplest and most easily acquired of arts. Almost anyone can master it and become remarkably proficient in a short time, providing he gets started right. There are certain best ways of doing everything which are based on the principles of that particular art. The man who does good work is both practical and artistic, although he often follows the principles unconsciously. He does things well, but it is often difficult for him to show others how. He frequently is hard to please, for instance, if one is stemming for him. If he possesses the artistic temperament those who work under him may never learn anything. "It takes time to learn how to make up" said an old, experienced worker, who considers himself a good designer, in answer to my question, "How long?" He had been working at making up for thirty years, yet judging from his work, I should say, if his statement is correct, he will never be a good designer.

More Profit from Designs

The future demand for made up work will be larger than ever. If the use of flowers for gifts should decrease, of which, however, we see no present indications, the florists will have to depend more on funeral work. Materials, from moss to wire frames, will cost more, but the supply will be adequate for the demand.

The cost of workmanship will be higher and time will be, and is, a more important item in the cost of floral work than ever before. Time has never been fully paid for by the customer, even in the first class establishments. Indeed, the cheap florist, who counterfeits good work, gets a proportionately higher price for his product than does the florist who conscientiously seeks to turn out only the best work.

When we speak of art, we think of something that is being liberally paid for. The price of a work of art should not be based on the cost of the canvas and paint, the wood in the furniture, or the number of Roses in a design. The florist's business was once on the level of the greengrocers and by Midwinter it may be a toss up as to which is the more artistic judged by the costs of production and distribution.

The retailer has underestimated his art. He seems to get high prices but these are largely an illusion when he comes to figure up every item that goes into the work. Let us therefore watch this department more carefully this season. Let us keep up the price and at the same time keep the cost down by making the most of the help and material available, for it is evident that funeral designs will not be by-product work to use up surplus stock this year.

Better Wording of Telegrams

When you send a telegraphic order, word the telegram so that the man at the other end can make out his order sheet in logical order and do so quickly. Don't leave part of the message to his imagination to fill out, nor obscure the order with unnecessary words. There is no sense in telling your correspondent to send a handsome wreath or fragrant Violets, yet I have had my time taken up with both these adjectives, at unfair prices. Without a doubt, the best order of arrangement for a telegraphic order is: first, when it is wanted; second, the kind of goods, followed by the price; next, to whom they are to be sent—giving full name and address— and closing with the text of the card to be enclosed. The message would then read: "Today wreath twenty dollars Mrs. Harry Davidison, sixteen twelve Erie Avenue, Card Office Carnegie Steel Company." In writing the address spell out the numbers or "1612 Erie Avenue" may be "16" or "12" when it reaches the correspondent. Do the same with the price and reduce the liability of error to the minimum. In dictating a telegraphic order for flowers never use a code, as the possibility of error is too great; the slight saving in expense is too small, in proportion to the risk of having the message go wrong.

Advantages of Stating the Price

The advertisement that does not give the price is incomplete. The national copy used in the Saturday Evening Post and other publications to feature flowers for the great gift days failed to give a price suggestion, or assist the interested prospective customers in placing his order. The S. A. F. publicity campaign wants dealers to tie up with it locally, but it is a poor rule that does not work both ways. The national copy did not identify itself with the average retail florist. [As we understand it the advertising to date promulgated by the publicity committee of the S. A. F. has been solely for the purpose of inciting a desire in the people at large to buy flowers.—Ed.] The only way to help the dealer is to show the customer how easy it is to buy from him. National copy, in order to serve its purpose, will have to adjust its text to help the retailers, instead of calling on the retailers to tie up with something that is up in the air. If it's "flowers for the masses," then name your prices, for "the masses" have the money. Nobody knows this quite so well as the so-called bon-ton florist, who has spent all his business life catering to the society folk. Today these florists' assets are mostly the overdue bills of first families; the bills of the papas of the débutantes. The other florists are busy as bees and have money to pay their bills, because they offer their goods to no particular class.

Quote prices in your advertising and in the show windows. Don't miss any opportunities to sell. It is not enough that you should just interest people. It is your business to keep sales moving. The following actual experience illustrates the point on price marking. A show window was filled with fine Sweet Peas, tastefully arranged in artistic vases and grouped in baskets and other receptacles. The colors were harmoniously blended and the whole effect was most pleasing. The window decoration attracted much attention but the sales of Sweet Peas were light. The crop was on and they must be sold. Someone, not a florist, suggested that a price card be placed on the Sweet Peas; to show that they were not meant merely as a decoration but were for sale. The following day the same stock was arranged in ordinary vases, with a handmade card reading "50c. per bunch" on each vase. The result was that sales emptied the window every day for nearly six weeks, the duration of the crop. To increase your sales and make quick turnover, state the price, for price is one of the principal reasons for buying.

Say It with Flowers—An Interpretation

By Dr. Thos. S. Blair

The following somewhat radical article is written by a man who evidently is keenly sensitive to the beauty of flowers and their inner meaning. Although he considers the slogan from the artistic viewpoint, yet valuable working hints may be drawn from his suggestions.

"Say it with Flowers"

Yes, "Say it with Flowers", but don't stutter it with flowers by chewing up a dozen kinds into a horror of diverse colors. Don't yell it with flowers, but tone down the high lights with a bit of shade and blending in. Never swear with flowers; unless sufficient green, blue or white is used to take off the vulgarity, badly arranged flowers speak a profaned "language of flowers."

To whisper with flowers is real art; it is like a delicate perfume; it comes like the gentle zephyrs of Spring, like the caress of the lover; it is the kiss of love, not of passion, to whisper with flowers. Violets and Maidenhair Fern whisper to each other. Lily of the Valley speaks in whispers. Rose buds always speak gently; don't spoil their language with the admixture of assertive blossoms.

Light and shade are the foundation of any good picture; the tint only brings out the perspective and atmosphere of good drawing. And green and white are the foundation of any good floral arrangement; tint them only to bring out the perspective and atmosphere.

Strength in design is like a man's hat—usually ugly; but give a woman that same hat, and she puts a bit of ribbon and veiling on it and it becomes a creation. So is a wire design or frame ugly; but it has potential possibilities seldom attained except by mixing in soul and a smile.

Many bouquets are like a shotgun prescription; they fail to hit the disease, for their many birdshot never hit like a rifle ball, nor do they penetrate far. The effective bouquet, like the valuable prescription, has few ingredients.

Funeral flowers should be like the picture of the impressionist—gently expressed in purples laid in fog; like the sun setting behind a bank of cloud but shooting up into the darkness above rays of hope and promise of the dawn to come.

A monochrome may be the very summation of art, and the best monochromes are green. Did you ever notice how many greens are seen in a landscape? Yes, dozens of them are there. But the florist seems to forget this. He needs to develop as many tones and tints of green as are possible in his range; if he uses them well in designing his work will have a distinction which the man who does not know how to use green can never successfully imitate. One can say a lot in green.

And the next most valuable thing in a bouquet is white, not paper or chalk white, but tinted whites, whites in varying values, whites of every kind. But the values in whites must be discreetly blended. Cut a few of every white thing you have and experiment in mixing them. You will find that floral horrors and floral poems can be made wholly from white blossoms. Make the white values blend with the tint in the colored elements of the design.

The "language of flowers" needs a grammar. Grammatical language flows smoothly and is a thing of beauty, especially if the words are simple and express real thought. "Say it with flowers" accurately, simply and to the point; for flowers will talk if we only help them a little.

We can pray with flowers, and we can sing with flowers; we can laugh and weep with them. We can show our culture or our vulgarity with these expressive emblems. But it takes an artist to do these things, even as it takes an artist to rightly use the brush and pigments of his craft.

The hand-me-down floral design is like canned music or the cheap chromo. The thing is too commercialized, too conventionalized, too standardized, too loud. We see awful things in the shops. Yes, they are awful! Forget the trade aspect for once and critically view your cherished designs disinterestedly; then laugh, for that is what you need to do. Discriminating patrons often laugh at your efforts.

Many florist shop methods were "made in Germany", and the German never was an artist in color or fabric. Take our designs and specialties for Christmas and Easter—nearly all Teutonic in expression. Branch out, Brother, branch out a bit. The German can sing, but he can't paint; hence his designs talk but are ugly, like his carpets and monuments. Did you ever visit a French florist. If not, do so, for you will learn much from him. He understands how to make a gesture speak, and his arrangement of flowers follows out the same national bent.

Then go and see the little Jap. This Oriental is a fair genius in arrangement, and he laughs at our crudities, as he has a right to do. The Oriental uses white for mourning, principally because black is ugly. What excuse is there, after all, for the widow's weeds. Weeds are ugly and they express nothing except waste of fertile soil. Why can't the widow "Say it in Flowers" in place of crepe?

Most floral arrangements are a generation behind public taste. True, a few artists cater to the rich; but why can't more of us cater to the good taste of the middle classes? If we ourselves know how to "Say it in Flowers" the people will readily enough listen to our slogan. Watch the nurses in a hospital tear apart the used emblems and formal designs sent in as a charity "after the ball is over", and re-arrange them in better taste than we did; then learn from these nurses, for they get results.

If the war exigency shuts off our wire, ribbons, etc., and makes us use flowers as flowers instead of as expensive accessories to undertaker goods, Christmas gewgaws, and artificialities generally, it may really promote floral art and make artists of the florists. "The play's the thing", not mere painted scenery and stage properties that are mere accessories to the artist. We are too much inclined to make the flowers accessory to the junk on which we hang them. Ribbons and wire can't talk. One never sees a pink bow on a telephone. Yes, "Say It in Flowers", not too much in ribbons and dyed and varnished accessories which are useful only in their place and ugly out of it.

Sometimes—only sometimes—we may "Say It with Flowers", fortissimo. To celebrate a football victory a Chrysanthemum bred up to look like a bunch of pink coldslaw tied to a stick will match the mood of the rooter, for it "says it" like a bass drum. Even the Tulips and Hyacinths of the howlingly swell type, looking like the art of a beer stein, may be used when the gay and festive is appropriate; but the wild Mariposa tulip is far more beautiful, and it is American, and the Indian Hyacinth (Triteleia grandiflora) is truly lovely, while the Sarcodes sanguinea is so transcendently brilliant and beautiful that the United States Government forbids its being picked. For genuine beauty in Tulips and Hyacinths, go to the wilds of the West.

To him who in the love of Nature seeks communion with her floral forms, to paraphrase the poet, they speak a various language. For his gayer hours they have a voice of gladness and a smile and eloquence of beauty and they glide into his deep and darker musings with a mild and healing sympathy that steal away their sharpness ere he he is aware. And when thoughts of the last bitter hour come like a blight over his spirit, and sad images of the stern agony and shroud and pall and the breathless darkness and the narrow house make him to shudder and grow sick at heart, he should go forth to the flower-decked fields and list' to Nature's teachings. Nature "says it with flowers."

There is no better time than RIGHT NOW to take up the study of landscape gardening, and it is fortunate indeed that such a book as Cridland's is obtainable for, on account of its simple explanations of details and its devotion to the requisites of small properties, it is of far greater value to the average nurseryman and florist than the usual "heavy" books on the same subject. The market the past week was active. Funeral work was heavy on Sunday, Sept. 29, and still continues. Store trade has also improved. Calls for cut flowers and blooming plants are increasing because outdoor stock is practically done. There is still a shortage of Roses and Carnations. Orchids find a ready sale at 75c. each wholesale. Chrysanthemums are becoming prominent, but only early varieties so far. Blooming plants in fair selection are obtainable, such as 'Mums, Cyclamen, Primula obconica, Begonia luminosa, Begonia Prima Donna and Gloxinias.

James Carnsew, of the Park Floral Co. store, is back on the job after a long spell of sickness.

O. H. Frank, representative for A. L. Randall, has gone to the Coast in the interest of his firm. Salt Lake City will be his first stop.

The Alpha Floral Co. has an attractive window display for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. Using Liberty Loan posters, small flags and a huge Fuchsia plant with a large sign reading: "The Most Wonderful Blossoming Plant in the World," applying to the Liberty bond. This sign was originated by Henry Penn of Boston.

The American Flower Shop has an artistic window display of plant and cut flower baskets.

Albert Geisert, grower for the Park Floral Co., received a letter from a French hospital, written by a Red Cross nurse, saying that his son Fred who had been in the front line had been wounded in both legs and both arms.

Henry Masten who was with the Alpha Floral Co. wrote a letter saying he is doing well and yearning to go. He is in the Naval Training Camp at Mare Island, San Francisco, Cal., but expects to be sent across any day.

W. W. Wilmore received a letter from his son Charles, who is in the U. S. Tank Corps, Training Camp, at Gettysburg, Pa., saying that his company went to New York City where they did some marching and were all taken to a theater in the evening. He is in the best of health and doing well.

George M. Quackenbush, one of the Boldt-Lundy store men, is enjoying camp life and is well and happy. He is at Camp Sheridan, Ala. C. F. E.

St. Paul, Minn.

Never before at this season has stock been so scarce; the demand far exceeds the supply and it is difficult to get stock from distant sources. All local stock is readily snapped up, even before it is in fit condition to cut, and prices are keeping up well. 'Mums are not yet in full swing; a great many have been planted but it is questionable whether there will be a glut. Carnations are coming in slowly; also good single Violets, and these are quickly taken up; even Calendulas and Mignonettes sell on sight.

In potted plants the stores have now a varied assortment of Cyclamen, early 'Mums, ferns and Primroses. The marked increase in trade is due probably to the cold snap, 8 deg. of frost having recently been recorded. There has also been considerable sickness and some funerals.

The Merriam Park Floral Co. is pressed very hard for labor, having only three men in place of twelve. Holm & Olson have also lost several more men who were called in the draft.

Sawdust and Shavings for Fuel

The Hiawatha Greenhouses are running full speed. After negotiations with various sawmills, Mr. Lindsey has stored the Winter fuel supply, consisting of shavings and sawdust. These, Mr. Lindsey claims, make an ideal fuel for his range. While this fuel requires a little more stoking, there is not the necessity for flue cleaning. This firm at one time ran a retail store in connection with the greenhouses but disposed of it and has converted both the St. Paul and the Minneapolis places into growing establishments for the wholesale trade.

Dean Bros., on Rice st., the one-time vegetable growers, are extending their plant business.

Landscape business and general planting will be in full swing shortly, as the leaves are about off the trees. A heavy rain on Oct. 4 and 5 will greatly facilitate the work.

From a letter received from Alfred Brown of Holland, Mich., it was learned that his brother Charles, who had been on the J. Ogden Armour estate and also formerly at Vaughan's, Western Springs, Ill., had enlisted with a Canadian regiment and had been killed in action just recently. E. C. T.

Liberty Loan

Kansas City's Fourth Liberty Loan campaign promises to go through with a flourish. The week of Sept. 30 was devoted to publicity and the greatest enthusiasm was displayed by the men and women who will act as solicitors, and by the citizens generally.

On Saturday morning, Sept. 28, all the whistles and bells in the city were sounded for 15 minutes, giving notice that the preparations for the campaign were on and reminding people that they must be ready to contribute to their utmost when the canvassing began. The solicitors held daily meeting for the purpose of organizing the work and receiving instructions for the big drive which started Monday morning, Oct. 7. On the afternoon of Oct. 5 a big parade was held through the downtown section of the city. All the workers, men and women, were in line, headed by J. W. Perry, head of the executive committee. Others who took part were members of the Seventh Regiment, National Guard, Home Guards, Boy Scouts, city firemen, policemen and a number of bands.

There is no variety in the way of stock on the market. Roses hold sway and are at their best. They are very plentiful, and perhaps because of that reason there have been many requests for Carnations and 'Mums, which, however, have not yet come in. Roses are bringing from 6c. to 20c. each, according to variety, Columbia being now the highest priced sort.

William L. Rock, president of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., expected to attend the F. T. D. convention, but was unable to do so on account of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, in which he is an active worker. Mr. Rock is head of Team No. 1 in Division 5. Mr. Rock is also a member of the Seventh Regiment National Guard, of which M. E. Carter, manager of the firm, is likewise a member. The regiment will hold an encampment in Nevada, Mo., for two weeks, beginning Oct. 12. Mr. Rock will go to camp for one week and Mr. Carter for the other. B. S. B.

Rockford, Ill.

Talk of the Town

Swan Peterson, at 513 W. State st., while not the largest has the neatest and most up-to-date establishment in the city. A couple of years ago the entire establishment was rebuilt and with good care everything, including the stock of plants is up to the best standard of perfection. Mr. Peterson is heavy on 'Mums and will go into bedding stock as soon as the crops are off. He will be able to run his establishment at full capacity during the coming Winter.

The H. W. Buckbee Co. has three stars in its service flag but still has sufficient help to keep the greenhouses running in good condition. J. T. Buckbee reports a good season. Part of the greenhouses is devoted to old time plants for catalog trade. Houses of Begonias in many varieties not often seen are interesting. Old fashioned plants such as Agathæa cœlestis, Justicia carnea, Mesembryanthemum, Plumbago capensis, Olea fragrans and other old time favorites are grown. In Geraniums old varieties, favorites of 30 years ago are to be seen—Mountain-of-Snow, Mrs. Pollock, Happy Thought, Bijou, Wm. Languth, and many others. A house of Fuchsias in varieties that had almost slipped memory is interesting, all so old that they are new to the younger generation in the trade.

The Cherry Seed Co. has been conducting a cut flower department in connection with its seed trade at 127 N. Main st. with apparent success.

The Midway Flower Shop at 903 E. State st. is the latest addition to the trade in Rockford. Business is reported to be good.

Norman Ostlin, who conducts a small range of greenhouses at 720 S. Fourth st., reports business good but complains much of the scarcity of suitable help for greenhouse work.

J. J. Soper also complains of the difficulty of getting help for ordinary greenhouse work at consistent prices.

Carl Begsterman, who conducted a flower store, and B. B. Pohlman who had small greenhouses doing a business in rooted cuttings, are both out of the trade.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

The demand last week surpassed all weekly records for this season, especially for large funeral pieces, due to the demise of several prominent citizens. There was no noticeable effect upon business as a result of the Liberty Loan campaign. Nearly all cut flowers have been short. Although Roses are of excellent quality, they are opening slowly, due to the dark, cool weather. The retailer who does not grow his own flowers is at the mercy of the grower and wholesaler. Columbia and Russell sell as fast as they arrive. Some especially good Hoosier Beauty, Shawyer and Milady command satisfactory figures. The supply of Carnations is inadequate. Many local growers have disbudded their stock to strengthen the young plants for the coming season. Lilies are hardly to be reckoned with, the supply probably never having been so small at this time nor the demand so heavy. Prices of Carnations are surprisingly good, considering quality. A few late Asters are coming in, but outside of these, the Aster and Gladiolus season is over. 'Mums are coming into the market very gradually this season, last week saw the first pompons. Some good double pink varieties also made their debut October 1. All varieties clean up well each day, at good figures. Dahlias are of splendid quality, but not plentiful. Orchids are increasing slowly and prices remain stiff. Snapdragons are in better supply than most other flowers. Marigolds, Cosmos and Calendulas make up the variety of outdoor flowers.

Some fine, large, dark red 'Mums made their appearance last week. Green goods and foliage wreaths were in great demand. The call for blooming plants is increasing, with only a small variety to choose from, principally Begonias, Aster and Lily plants.

At Home and Abroad

Visitors who called on the craft were: I. M. Bayersdorfer of H. Bayersdorfer Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., and M. I. Hollander, representing the Duro Paper Box Co., of Chicago, Ill.

Edgar Wennighoff sent out many large funeral pieces the past week, but reports the supply far inadequate to the big demand. He has a fine crop of single and double 'Mums. His brother, A. S. Wenninghoff, has charge of the growing end of the business.

The Flick Floral Co. has several large decorations booked for the Style Show this week. Large ferns and palms, Autumn foliage and baskets of 'Mums will be the main flowers used.

Seitleitz, the florist, of Lima, Ohio, is shipping excellent Shawyer, Russell and Killarney Roses to this market.

A. J. Lanternier and Co. sent out a handsome casket blanket last week, composed of Lilies, with a cross of Shawyer Roses in the center. They are specializing in Magnolia wreaths during the shortage of cut flowers. D. B.

Cleveland, O.

Stock Scarce

This market is in the midst of a pronounced scarcity of stock. As yet very few Chrysanthemums have arrived and receipts of Carnations are very light. The former are very late this Fall, due to the unseasonably cool weather in early September, and it will be November before they begin to arrive in sufficient abundance to meet the demand. Asters are practically over, likewise Gladioli, and to make matters worse, many promising crops of Dahlias were seriously injured by frosts the beginning of the month. Easter Lilies are exceedingly scarce and are eagerly snapped up at $15 per 100. Miscellaneous stock commands a ready sale at good prices.

Notwithstanding the shortage of stock the volume of business exceeds that in early October of last year. This is explained in part by the fact that everything coming into the market is absorbed at good prices. Local florists are also buying more heavily in the home market because of the great delay of shipments coming from a distance. Demand is general, being equally strong downtown, the outer portions of the city and in the neighboring smaller towns as well.

Where are those fellows who a few months ago predicted poor business ahead? We all recall their dismal prognostications. They haven't been heard from lately, perhaps because they are too busy filling orders.

The acute scarcity of stock is only a temporary condition, as favorable weather, which is sure to follow, will hasten the 'Mums and greatly increase the cuts of Roses, Carnations and all other flowers.

Notes

Louis Hody formally opened a retail store, Oct. 5, at 726 Broadway, Lorain, Ohio. Mr. Hody has purchased the well-known establishment, long operated by F. J. Stehle, on Oberlin ave., at which place the greater part of the stock will be produced.

H. P. Merrick, of the Lord & Burnham Co., has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade, on account of illness which has confined him to the house for several days.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the rooms at the Hollenden, Oct. 4, at which F. T. D. convention business was given chief attention.

Joseph M. Stern and Jay Stranahan, of the Joseph M. Stern Co., dealers in artificial flowers and florists' supplies, have returned from an extended business trip in the Northwest.

H. B. Wilkinson, proprietor of the Penn Square Flower Shop, now makes his calls at the market in his newly purchased automobile. J. McL.

Cincinnati, O.

The Market

Oct. 7.—Roses are in a good supply and sell well. In fact everything available is cleaning up readily. Carnations are somewhat scarce and a great many more could be used. Lilies are again in fair supply so are Dahlias. Few Asters are coming into the market. The current week will probably see the last of them. Some Gladioli still available are proving good property. Cosmos sells fairly well. A few single Violets are finding their way into the wholesale houses.

Straws in the Wind

J. A. Peterson & Sons have an excellent large lot of Cyclamen for their trade later in the year. They are some of the best that firm has ever had.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer and their son Jim, of West Palm Beach, Fla., have passed through Atlanta, Ga. on their way home in their new Buick.

C. E. Critchell is attending the F. T. D. meeting in Cleveland, O. this week.

Recent visitors include Chas. Baum of Knoxville, Tenn., and Mr. Miller of Washington, D. C.

Geo. Klotter has begun to cut single Violets.

Roy Rudolph is shipping excellent yellow 'Mums to C. E. Critchell.

Fred Brueggemann of P. J. Olinger's place at New Castle, Ind., who was in this city recently, reports the outlook at the greenhouses as encouraging.

TEDDY.

Hailstorm at Wichita, Kan.

A severe hailstorm hit the east side of the town on Sept. 25 and broke from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. of the glass in the greenhouses in its path. Chas. P. Mueller and other members of the Florists' Hail Ass'n were among those in the path of the storm. J. G. E.

—The fruited branch submitted for identification is a Crataegus, but just which one of the several hundred species it is we cannot determine unless we have the flowers in their season for examination, as well as the fruit and foliage which were present on the branch. Big Four Meet in Riverside

The week of Nov. 10 promises to make horticultural history in Riverside, when seedsmen, plantsmen, fruit growers, entomologists, research men and official horticulturists will attend the eighth annual convention of the California Ass'n of Nurserymen, a meeting of the County Horticultural Commissioners Ass'n, the fifty-first annual Fruit Growers' and Farmers' convention, the Potato Growers' conference, and the plant quarantine conference, with delegates from all the States, British Columbia, Eastern Canada, Mexico, the Philippines and Hawaii. The programs in process of formation promise to be of more than local interest, particularly that of the economic entomologists, in which "Quarantines, Their Purpose and How They May Best Be Imposed and Enforced," will be the address by Frederick Maskew, chief deputy quarantine officer, San Francisco, Cal. The nurserymen's sessions will be largely confined to trade matters.

Passing of Louis J. Stengel

Louis J. Stengel, almost the last remaining figure in the early Southern California nursery industry has passed beyond. He was not of the original pioneers—the men of 1850 to 1870; but of those hardy men who were active from the middle eighties until the late nineties. He specialized in forest trees, being especially interested in the Eucalyptus, which he grew for years in large numbers, supplying the trade in all sections of the State. Mr. Stengel was born in Germany 75 years ago, but when a lad of 15 came to America, making the 68 day voyage in a sailing vessel, and arriving at Boston in time to celebrate his first Fourth of July in 1858. Soon after he joined the United States cavalry and served in Oregon as an Indian fighter. A bullet wound in his foot was a memento of those days. In 1866 he was given a contract to carry the mail between Kiamath, Ore., to Eureka, Cal., an 104 mile route which he covered with a horse and a pack mule in 24 hours. For 30 years he conducted a nursery in Los Angeles. He leaves a widow, a daughter Lillian and three sons, Carl, Elmer and Louis.

An Omission in Law

George H. Hecke, State horticultural commissioner, writes from Florida, requesting that I place before the trade some correspondence from F. M. O'Byrne, nursery inspector of Florida. He asks that nurserymen carefully observe the legal requirements of quarantine in that State. Mr. O'Byrne says in substance: We have seen what appears to be a growing tendency on the part of California nurseries, which have secured Florida permit tags, to allow shipments to go forward to Florida points without attaching a Florida permit tag to them. This necessitates careful inspection on arrival at the point of entry and a letter to the firm calling attention to this omission. Please advise California nurserymen, urging upon them the necessity of properly tagging shipments of nursery stock consigned to Florida points with a Florida permit tag, and the necessity of sending an invoice covering such shipment to the undersigned. You might advise them that

Market Notes

The rain has at last arrived and cooled the atmosphere so that everyone feels better and business is coming into its own again. The rain will naturally cut off a great deal of the supply of outdoor stock, but on the other hand, the available stock coming out of their own gardens that the flower buyers have been making use of has also been cut off. The local crop of 'Mums is hardly to be considered, but as the California stock is coming up well, we can manage very richly. Some of the varieties, such as Turner, do not ship as well as the more sturdy types. Carnations are fairly plentiful but are used up clean. The cut of Dahlias is prime, and so long as the stores are not oversupplied, they can handle them at a fair profit, epecially in the better keeping varieties. Minna Burgle is the one, money-making red, and in pink we have Delice.

News of the City

W. G. Wood writes that he is leaving Frisco for Baltimore, Md., via the Canal. He says that business seems good in Frisco and that they have a fine display of flowers there. He sends his regards to all the boys.

E. H. White is another of the boys who will leave for the service soon. He barely avoided this draft on the strength of harvesting his crop of Dahlias.

E. A. Shepard also of the White Floral Gardens, has arrived safely overseas.

Two employees of Clarke Bros. Greenhouses at Mt. Tabor were recently arrested and held under the seditious utterance charge. There is no ground for the charges except that they objected to buying Liberty bonds. Their religion is the entire difficulty as they are perfectly harmless.

A. Herbert is back on the job again and getting stronger every day.

Herbert & Fleischauer of McMinnville state that their Aster crop was very successful, and although the flowers were not as fancy as they have been in the past, considering the weather condition, which was contrary to what Asters require, they made a pretty good showing. The draft and help leaving for Portland is depleting the population of the surrounding towns. Mr. Fleischauer says that outside of his wife and himself there is but one other worker on the place, and the larger part of the crop of Aster seed is still to be harvested. H. NIKLAS.

The Market

Oct. 8.—Men whose predictions come true are considered prophets, and those whose forecasts fail are, happily for them, soon forgotten. Was there anyone in August of this year whose prophetic vision was strong enough to see in the wholesale cut flower market of New York City in nearly October, No. 2 grade Roses selling at 4c. to 6c.; Lilies 15c. to 20c.; Carnations 4c. to 6c.; Dahlias 6c. to 12c.; Mums 25c. to 75c. each; Lily of the Valley $10 to $12 per 100 and Cosmos 20c. per bunch. Any florist a few weeks ago prophesying any such condition in prices would have been sent by his fellows in the craft to Bellevue Hospital "for observation," but, for all of that, these are the prices of today, Tuesday, Oct. 8. The cause of this unexpected rise in prices of the past two weeks are a rather short supply, heavy buying by florists from Boston and vicinity and a somewhat better demand from florists in New York City and nearby towns.

American Beauty Roses are in moderate supply and are in fair demand at about 35c. each for selected specials. The other grades are realizing corresponding prices. Hybrid tea Roses are in medium supply. The demand is largely for the No. 2, No. 1 and extra grades. The top grades are not abundant, but are in lesser demand and consequently not realizing relatively as high prices as the lower grades. No. 2 grade blooms are selling at from 4c. to 6c. and fancy and special grades at from 6c. to 15c. each.

Carnations are in fair supply. They are moving well, select blooms selling at from $4 to $6 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are in larger supply and are moving moderately well at about 50c. each for the best blooms. The supply of white Lilies is not large and few pink Lilies are arriving in the market. The demand for the former is very active and they are selling at from $15 to $18 per 100 with a few smaller sales at $20. Lily of the Valley is in small supply and is moving well at from $8 to $10 and occasionally somewhat higher prices per 100 for the choicest blooms.

The outdoor grown miscellaneous flowers are no longer arriving, as they have been cut down by the recent frosts, although a few Dahlias and some Cosmos which have escaped freezing, are seen, and are meeting with a good demand at unusual prices. 'Mums are in much larger supply and are meeting with a strong demand at from $2 to $6 per doz. with some smaller sales of exhibition blooms at a higher figure. Greens, especially boughs of Oak foliage, are meeting with a stronger demand.

The Florist Club, as announced in detail in our previous issue, will meet at its rooms on Monday evening, Oct. 14, at 7:30 o'clock. This meeting promises to be of unusual interest.

This week William Kessler had the first single Violets we have seen this season. The variety was Princess of Wales, grown by W. Bowman of White Plains, N. Y. He had also Golden Glow 'Mums from the greenhouses of Chester Hunt's Sons, of Staten Island, and Carnations of excellent quality for this time of year from Ryder Bros., of Wantagh, L. I.

In the pictorial section of the New York World of Sunday, Oct. 6, there was a group picture of those "Active in the movement to beautify camps with flowers." The group comprised A. L. Miller, Charles H. Totty, Capt. F. S. Moreau and Charles Schenck.

Some "near to" exhibition blooms of October King and Queen Mary 'Mums from the greenhouses of Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., were seen at J. S. Penrich's, 51 W. 28th st. this week.

The Wholesale Cut Flower Protective Ass'n has purchased, through its treasurer, E. C. Horan, of the Florist Club's Liberty Loan committee, $200 worth of the Fourth Liberty Loan bonds. This speaks well for the organization which is in no way a money gathering, or making one, but a merely defensive one.

Among the recent callers in this city were Frank Dolansky, of Lynn, Mass.; L. J. Reuter, P. Welch, Mr. McDonald and Mr. Snyder of Boston, Mass.

Fourth Liberty Loan

A meeting of the Florists and Allied Trades Liberty Loan committee was held on Friday afternoon, Oct. 4, at the S. A. F. offices, 1170 Broadway, New York, at which considerable quiet optimism ruled as to the prospects for this committee being enabled to turn into the Government a favorable report of the bond purchases made by the florists and allied trades. Encouraging reports were received from members of the committee with others remaining to be heard from. The one thing which the committee endeavors to impress upon the trade above all others is that it is looked upon as the duty of every one in the trade, or connected therewith, whatever the line may be, to subscribe to the largest possible number of Fourth Liberty Loan bonds he possibly can, and to make the subscription through the trade's own Liberty Loan Committee so the total amount of bonds purchased may be put to the credit of the trade.

The gentlemen of the committee are actively engaged in soliciting among the trade of New York, and without doubt, every man connected therewith will be called upon in due course, and before the 19th of October. It is desired, however, to get the loan taken up well in advance of that date. For that reason prompt returns should be made.

Another meeting of the committee took place on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 8, at the offices of the S. A. F., 1170 Broadway. G. W. Allen, with the Equitable Trust Co., bond adviser of the committee, presided. There were present the following members of the committee: Chas. Schenck, chairman, Herman Warendorff, Frank Traendly, Chas. A. Dards P. Gerlaird, A. T. Bunyard, Albert Friedman, Emil Schloss, H. F. Winter and A. S. Nash.

Vice-president Morris K. Parker of the Equitable Trust Co. was to have spoken, but, being unable to be present, his place was taken by Edgar Higgins, New York bond man of that company. Mr. Higgins gave a forceful talk, bringing out especially two points: First, that it is absolutely necessary to raise the amount of the loan. If it is not raised through bonds it will have to be raised by taxation. Second, that no matter how great a sacrifice one makes to buy bonds it is not as great as that being made by our soldiers abroad.

The members of the committee reported progress and showed by their remarks that they are putting every effort into making the best possible showing in an endeavor to have the quota of the florists and allied trades fully if not oversubscribed. It was remarked that some members of the committee do not attend the meetings and it was urged that these absent members make a special effort to be present and give their assistance. Tuesday's meeting was called at the request of Governor Strong of the Second Federal Reserve District, for the purpose of speeding up the loan, and the necessity of every member of the trade in Greater New York subscribing to his utmost and through the local committee is most urgent.

We give names and addresses of purchasers of Liberty Loan bonds through the committee. The total amount of all subscriptions, including not only those of $500 and over, but also those of less than $500, bought through the committee is about $135,000 up to Wednesday noon, Oct. 9.

It was due to the efforts of Frank H. Henry of Henry & Lee that the subscription of $25,000 was secured from the Railroad Co-operative Building and Loan Ass'n, which is the second largest association of its kind in the country. In view of this association's lining up and placing its purchase through the New

DON'T FORGET IT

Confidence is a firm's best asset and it certainly applies to our business in a very large degree.

We can say, however without fear of contradiction that no one has ever felt that their confidence was misplaced when they consigned their flowers to us. Consign that next shipment to us and acquaint yourself with our service.

Special opportunity for a couple of Good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

Boston

Oct. 8.—Conditions at the wholesale cut flower market continue good. The heavy demand from the city is lessening somewhat but the influenza is spreading to the small towns and country places and shipping business is very heavy now. Cut flowers are becoming more plentiful, but even with the increased supply there is hardly enough to fill the demand. There is a nice supply of American Beauty Roses and the quality is superb; prices are from 20c. to 60c. apiece. Hybrid tea Roses are more abundant and seldom have such fine Roses been seen as are being sent to the market at this early date. Prices still continue good. Nine inch Roses are selling for 8c. each and from that price up to 25c. In fact a good way to state the price is to say that Roses are selling at 1c. an inch.

Carnations are much more plentiful and quality is improving. Prices are as high as ever were paid in October; they are selling from 6c. to 10c. apiece. Some flowers of Laddie have been sold for 12c. each.

Cattleyas are more abundant and there is a good call for them, selling at $9 per doz. Lilies are more plentiful and are in good demand at 18c. to 25c. each.

Asters are of poor quality but are selling well from 6c. to 10c. each. Material that would hardly be looked at in ordinary times brings a good price today. Snapdragon is selling well at $1 per doz. Dahlias sell well and have not so far been injured by frost.

There is an increasing supply of 'Mums and they are of good quality, selling at $2 to $4 per doz. Cosmos is of good quality and sells well. The native Asters from the woods are selling well and are being used by all retailers.

Asparagus is not over abundant; the price has not advanced, but the bunches are smaller, and there is a good deal of complaint heard about the size. 'Mum plants are now in the market. Ferns are selling well. With the exception of the above the only other plants offered at this time are Dracænas and Crotons.

Wholesale houses have a heavy demand for flowers from out of town. The quantity of flowers coming from home growers is not sufficient to supply the demand, and quantities have come from New York and Pennsylvania.

The vegetale exhibition of the Gardeners and Florists' Club, scheduled for Oct. 8 and 9, has been postponed until Oct. 15 and 16.

People are Saying

George Hamer, assistant manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, is convalescing and will soon return to work.

Carl A. Borowski, of Roslindale, Mass., died at Camp Devens, on Sept. 26, of influenza. Before he joined the Colors he was associated with his father and brother, J. Borowski & Sons. He was an expert Cyclamen grower. He was 29 years of age.

During the past two weeks Patrick Welch, of Welch Bros. Co., has been kept busy visiting cities procuring flowers to fill the demand. He bought large quantities which helped the retailers. The company is receiving fine shipments of American Beauty and all kinds of hybrid tea Roses, also Lilium longiflorum and good 'Mums.

Thomas Roland is fortunate to have a fine cut of hybrid tea Roses. On Monday, Oct. 8, his morning shipment was 6500 good flowers.

James Galvin, head salesman at H. M. Robinson & Co., has been sick for the past two weeks, but is getting better and will soon be back to work again.

W. H. Elliott has the first 'Mum plants in the market. The variety is Bon Ton. He has also a good cut of Roses from his Madbury Rose Farm in New Hampshire.

The demand for funeral work at Penn's store continues to be large. The designers are working much overtime. He is featuring a Liberty Loan window where several captured German weapons will be on exhibition.

Tight Market

Oct. 8.—The present stringency of stock has surpassed all records of former years. It is only with the greatest difficulty that stock can be secured to fill partially the orders received. In the past, on tight markets, all stock has been sold; nothing went to waste and prices were satisfactory, but under conditions today the dealers cannot get stock at any price and consequently they are losing business that would otherwise be done if more stock were available.

The demand is excellent, showing no falling off in either shipping or local trade, but unfortunately most orders are only partially filled and some not at all. There are many reasons given for the scarcity of supply; frost cutting off the Aster crop, Roses pinched back for later blooming to follow 'Mums, late planting of Carnations, due to scarcity of labor, the closing of many growing establishments, unfavorable weather, etc.

The supply of Roses is far short of the demand; those that come in are easily disposed of at from $3 to $15 per 100.

Carnations are well on the short side; no dealer can fill all the orders received and while the stock is not as yet quite up to the standard as to stem and other qualifications the blooms are already bringing Winter prices of from $3 to $5 per 100.

There are still some Gladioli; the poorest are selling at $3 per 100 with some fancy varieties bringing as high as $8 per 100. Asters are nearly gone, although a few are to be seen, but even the poor stock is bringing full value because of their adaptability for funeral work. Lilies, Valley and orchids continue on the short list and all that come in are sold at good prices, without a murmur from the purchasers.

'Mums, which started the season well a couple of weeks ago, are not coming on as quickly as desired. A cold September is said to be the cause of the supply not being larger. Good stock is selling at $4 per doz. A little California stock comes through in poor condition, thus assuring the dealers and growers that it will cut no figure in this market this year.

A peculiar feature of the market is the large quantity of wild flowers offered by many of the wholesale houses. They help to meet the shortage of stock. More than one wholesaler said Saturday that all the stock he had in his ice boxes was "weeds" but that he was selling it just the same.

Boltonia asteroides, B. decurrens and B. incisa form a large part of this hardy stock. Next come the hardy Asters, Starworts, Michaelmas Daisies, in a wide range of color, Chelone gentianoides, with its purple Gentian-like blossom, Cimicifuga or Bugwort, with its tall, graceful, yellow spikes, Rudbeckia conspicua, Kochia scoparia and Rosa rugosa, and many other odds and ends of field flowers that heretofore would have found no place in a well-balanced market. The supply of ferns is unsteady; rains, slow picking and delayed transportation cause occasional shortage.

General News

Several of the cut flower stores on the West Side are offering for sale a collection of home grown Tulip bulbs from the grounds of Peter Pearson on Gunneson st.

Wm. Langhout has been admitted to bail by the Federal Grand Jury.

F. Blondeel, who conducts the Avenue Flower Shop, at 811 Lake st., in the Oak Park neighborhood, reports a large demand for Holland bulbs, that so far he has been unable to supply.

T. E. Waters and E. C. Pruner are representing the Poehlmann Bros. Co. at the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, Ohio. Gus Martial of the supply department has been laid up for a few days with a bad cold.

Rolf Zetlitz, of Lima, Ohio, has been in the city a few days looking out for a foreman grower for his establishment. He expects to be called for service in the U. S. Army soon.

Mrs. Frances Spikermann, Sandwich, Ill., who conducts the Sandwich Greenhouses, donated cut flowers and plants to a booth at the county fair, conducted under the auspices of the Red Cross. Her donation realized $178 for the cause. Her youngest son Frank is a wireless operator on the U. S. Cruiser Alabama on the Great Lakes. Her oldest son, Dr. Arthur Spikermann, is in the Army Service at Ft. Sheridan.

Geo. and Charles Armbrust have continued to conduct the business of their father, Nicholas Armbrust, at Randolph st. and Harlem ave., since his death on May 23. The oldest son George has seen service on the Mexican border but was granted his discharge.

E. H. Humiston, of the Chicago Feed and Fertilizer Co., has returned after an extended trip through the principal Eastern States. He says that under existing conditions there is no complaint to be made concerning business. The supply of animal and poultry food offered by the company is in better demand than ever.

The sale of the Fourth Liberty Loan bonds is progressing well. From recent estimates Division 19 B, which includes the florists, seedsmen and nurserymen will go well "over the top." The Kroeschell Bros. Co., with which President Lautenschlager of the Florists' Club is connected, has subscribed $3000, this including their own subscription and that of their employees.

Philadelphia

Scarcity of Stock

Oct. 8.—The market continues bare, with not enough flowers coming in to meet one-half the present demand. This is a very unsatisfactory condition, but, unfortunately, is beyond control. Practically everything is sold up before arrival, and fortunate indeed is the man who is able to fill over one-half his orders. High prices prevail and in many cases orders have been turned down as the florists could not fill them, being unable to obtain flowers. Nothing further can be said about the market in regard to the stock, as everything that resembles a flower is in demand. The demand for green corresponds.

Notes

The seed houses are awaiting the arrival of the French and Dutch bulbs which are now to be expected any day.

Duncan Macaw has put one over on his friends, but he has been very quiet about it. Last June he became a benedict. Belated congratulations!

Charles H. Grakelow and Theodore Schober are both reported as being dangerously ill with Spanish influenza.

One of the victims of the influenza epidemic is Herbert Hetsel Meehan, son of Chas. E. Meehan, only 20 years old, who died Oct. 3. The sympathy of the trade is extended to Mr. Meehan in his bereavement.

J. W. Shinn of Mt. Holly, N. J., is meeting with an unprecedented demand for Dahlias, his entire cut being sold weeks in advance.

Harry Betz has contracted for the entire cut of Dahlias from the fields of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverview.

All branches of the trade report being handicapped by illness of their help.

Robert A. Craig reports a good demand for Cyclamen flowers and Croton foliage.

Rodman Eisenhardt of Torresdale is sending in the first of the single Violets. He is the leading grower of Violets in this section.

Paul Berkowitz reports September as one of the busiest months for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. in the line of artificial flowers.

Henry I. Faust of Merion has a superb lot of Poinsettias. To conserve coal he resorts to oil heaters in keeping off the chill during the cool nights we are now experiencing.

Arthur Lanser of Ardmore will close down his greenhouse for the Winter.

The greenhouses of George Anderson are being dismantled; the material was purchased by a house wrecking concern.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association

Report of Cleveland Meeting concluded

Wednesday Morning, Oct. 9, 1918

Vincent J. Gorly of St. Louis championed the adoption by the F. T. D. of a formulation of the language of flowers and selection of a flower for each month to have a standard significance, something in the same way that the jewelers have adopted a standard of gems for the months and as expressive of certain sentiments. Mr. Gorly offered as a suggestion the following:

Let us Adopt a Standard Language of Flowers

JANUARY—Carnation—True Friendship.
FEBRUARY—Violets—Love, Faithfulness.
MARCH—Daffodils—Breath of Spring.
APRIL—Sweet Peas—Love, a Kiss.
MAY—Lilies—Purity, Sincerity.
JUNE—Roses—Fond Remembrance.
JULY—Calendula—Fidelity.
AUGUST—Gladiolus—Beauty in Retirement.
SEPTEMBER—Aster—Loyalty.
OCTOBER—Dahlia—Elegance, Confidence.
NOVEMBER—Chrysanthemums—Love, Devotion.
DECEMBER—Lilies of the Valley—Confession of Love.

On motion of F. C. Weber of St. Louis, the idea was referred to a special committee of three to work out and report at the next annual meeting. President Gude appointed: Vincent J. Gorly of St. Louis, Mo.; W. W. Gammage of London, Ont.; W. J. Smyth, Chicago, Ill.

Faulty Telegrams

The question of misinterpretation of orders through faulty wording of telegrams was an interesting topic; it brought out some amusing as well as embarrassing experiences, and afforded an opportunity for several of the members to illustrate the readiness with which they met unlooked for situations and made the best out of what otherwise would have been a bad complication. In one case where through delay in delivery of telegram a funeral order was received too late, the ready witted florist met the situation by turning the amount of the order over to the widow whom, it seems, was in great financial distress, and his action was warmly approved by the sender when apprised of it.

Give Leeway when Forwarding Orders

The matter of giving proper leeway to the florist filling an order was brought up and it was shown how, in many cases, it was possible to please all parties by the florist sending the order not being too specific as to the exact flowers that it would be filled with when such flowers were not obtainable.

Points on Salesmanship

Interesting points were developed as to salesmanship, one of the best of these being scored by Mr. Knoble of Cleveland who explained how he handled the customer who did not know exactly what he wanted by suggesting the higher price first and then gradually adjusting to meet the wishes of the customer and at the same time make the order one practicable of fulfillment satisfactorily to all concerned.

The Necessity of Being Resourceful

Max Schling related in one case where he had received a reply from the florist who had been requested to make the delivery that they were "all sold out." By the time this reply was received the funeral was over. But Mr. Schling was equal to the emergency and at once telegraphed back to have the flowers placed on the grave and notify the family that the telegram had been delayed, an arrangement which proved perfectly satisfactory to the sender. Mr. Schling illustrated at length how a florist who is resourceful can meet any emergency and be equal to the occasion.

President Gude related a case where, through unavoidable delay, it was found impossible to deliver in time for the burial services, but in this case he found that the internment was to take place in a distant city, and he at once wired his F. T. D. correspondent at that point and succeeded in having the floral remembrance delivered at the grave so that the order was substantially carried out to the sender's satisfaction.

Space will not permit us to detail all of these interesting matters which only those can get the full benefit of who attend the F. T. D. conventions. Many members present expressed their conviction that they had received valuable suggestions at the convention, in inspection of the advertising displays and otherwise, that had more than repaid them for the cost of the trip.

It developed in some of the discussions that there was considerable variation between prices, especially for American Beauty, in various parts of the country, so that this sometimes led to misunderstandings in the filling of orders. It was suggested by some members that the trade papers be asked to report the state of the market in various cities in order that the florists might have some guide. On the other hand it was stated that it was impossible to arrive at any prices in some localities, particularly New York City, except from day to day.

The Guarantee Fund Not a Cure All

The interest taken by those present in these matters of detail was a further proof of how valuable the F. T. D. business is fast becoming and therefore that a great interest is taken in the best manner of avoiding misunderstandings and furnishing the greatest possible satisfactory service to patrons. It was conceded on all hands that it was necessary that florists shall use ordinary business sense and discretion and learn how to do business properly. Some few instances were given where florists, particularly in smaller places, had a great deal to learn in this respect.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association

The roster of officers and directors for 1919 is as follows:

WILLIAM F. GUDE.....President
Washington, D. C.
PHILIP BREITMEYER.....Vice-president
Detroit, Mich.
WM. L. ROCK.....Treasurer
Kansas City, Mo.
ALBERT POCHELON.....Secretary
153 Bates st., Detroit, Mich.

For Term Expiring 1919

KARL P. BAUM.....Knoxville, Tenn.
WM. J. SMYTH.....Chicago, Ill.
T. J. WOLFE.....Waco, Texas

For Term Expiring 1920

H. G. DILLEMUTH.....Toronto, Ont.
H. P. KNOBLE.....Cleveland, Ohio
EDWARD SCEERY.....Paterson, N. J.

For Term Expiring 1921

A. F. BORDEN.....Los Angeles, Cal.
W. J. PALMER.....Buffalo, N. Y.
CHARLES H. GRAKELOW.Philadelphia, Pa.

There seemed to be a disposition on the part of some to look to the guarantee fund to straighten out all difficulties that might arise through misunderstandings and take care of transactions even with non-members. This it was recognized was quite impossible, because while the guarantee fund is an exceedingly valuable part of the whole scheme of the F T. D. it cannot be expected to be a cure all for every business trouble or misunderstanding that may arise.

Cost and Overhead

H. P. Knoble, Chairman of the Committee on Cost of Doing Business, was called upon to make a report but declined to do so at this time, because, owing to unsettled business conditions due to the war and constant fluctuations in cost of materials, he thought at the present time it was impossible to make a definite report, The subject of overhead costs is, however, of such great and vital importance that even the mention of it could not fail to bring out discussion, and although Mr. Knoble stated that he had no specific report to make, quite a discussion followed on the subject of costs and overhead and this was discussed from different angles, some of the speakers failing to recognize the great and general principle involved, namely, "in time of peace, prepare for war," which in this case should be reversed to read, "in time of war, prepare for peace." This work of cost-finding will not be abandoned by the Association and, no doubt, later a determined attempt will be made to work out a basis of overhead costs, that is to arrive at a clear understanding of just what items constitute overhead and what items should be properly chargeable to operating expense. It is absolutely necessary to arrive at an understanding on these matters before informative comparisons may be made as between members and localities. THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE predicts that the F. T. D. will eventually work out a satisfactory solution so as to be prepared at the close of the war to make practical application of the same.

The discussion of Mr. Knoble's report was participated in by Messrs. Anderson, McKenna, Gorly, Harper, Penn and Breitmeyer. Valuable suggestions were made as to means of reducing cost of labor and economy in use of materials. One way of handling the labor situation was suggested to be paying the employees more money and employing a less number of them to do the same work, the increased compensation being an incentive to the employees to put forth greater effort.

Returning of Delivery Boxes

One fruitful source of saving was instanced in saving delivery boxes by offering a small bonus for their return in good order to the messenger boys and others delivering the boxes, it being understood of course that no boxes would be returned unless perfectly agreeable to the customer after the safe delivery of their contents. Great savings were reported in this direction. The general consensus of opinion was that owing to enhanced cost of material it was absolutely necessary to make a new alignment as between cost of materials and selling price. While no specific prices were agreed on or even suggested, it was generally recognized that there had been entirely too much looseness in the past on the part of florists in neglecting to properly take account of those items that go to make up overhead, such as depreciation, proper salary allowance to the managing head of the business, rent, etc. An instance was given of one florist who in telling what his profits had been for the year, confessed that he had made no allowance for rent, because he owned the property. Other instances were given of a like absence of proper business understanding and intelligence with regard to cost of doing business.

Wednesday Afternoon

The closing session on Wednesday afternoon was held with Vice-president Breitmeyer in the chair, the first matter taken up being contribution to S. A. F. Publicity Fund.

Secretary Pochelon called attention to the fact that not only was publicity necessary along general lines but also there was greatly needed publicity from florist to florist. Secretary Pochelon thought that the film that had been shown illustrating the publicity work in Cleveland and the general cooperative spirit of the florists there was a lesson to all, and he hoped that it would be shown in other cities, if possible accompanied by a traveling representative who could intelligently talk about it and press home its lessons.

On motion, the Board of Directors were empowered to contribute to the National S. A. F. Publicity Fund whatever sum may seem wise in their discretion.

At this time Mr. Dillemuth called especial attention to the suggestion made by Mr. Washburn, that all orders received both from members and non-members shall have the name and address of the customer who placed the order included in the telegram sent; one of the reasons advanced by Mr. Dillemuth being that a means would thus be afforded for a speedy correction of any misunderstanding or error that might occur in transmission, or where some emergency might arise that it would be necessary to have the further instructions of the sender of the order.

Mr. Geraghty thought that something should be done to further safeguard members of the F. T. D. in their dealings with non-members; in reply to which the Chair stated that there were some matters that would have to be necessarily left to the exercise of ordinary business judgment and for the proper conduct of which the individual florist himself must be responsible, a view which was strongly shared by Mr. Wilson of Des Moines, Iowa.

On motion of George Asmus a committee on Final Resolutions was appointed. The Chair named as such committee Messrs. Asmus, Geraghty and C. H. Brown. Their report follows:

Resolved: That the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association in annual convention assembled at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 8 and 9, 1918, tender by unanimous vote the thanks of the convention to the following for courtesies received at their hands while here:

To Floyd E. Waite, representing his Honor, Mayor Davis, for address of welcome; to the Cleveland Florists' Club for luncheons and other courtesies; to Mrs. J. M. Gasser, for reception and luncheon at her beautiful home, assisted by the ladies of her household; to the Woman's Florists' Club of Cleveland; to Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson for publicity work and splendid exhibit of advertising matter; to the Hollenden Hotel Co., James Thompson, manager; to the Argus Co., for motion picture arrangements; to Major O'Keefe and Herman P. Knoble for valuable addresses on national publicity and general advertising, respectively; to John T. Kirchner for palms; to the E. G. Hill Co., for displays of Roses; to the Joseph H. Hill Co., to H. A. War conditions make it impossible at the present time to get raw stock. On this account, Cycas Leaves in the future will be very scarce, and the price must rise accordingly. Take advantage of our low prices, while we have some on hand.

WAX FLOWERS

MR. FLORIST:—Why don't you do the same as other successful florists are doing? Work in artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces. No one can tell the difference between our artificial flowers and the natural when worked in together. We have spent a fortune in perfecting our artificial flowers so that they will look like the natural. For your own sake, just give us a trial order amounting to $10.00 or $15.00. If the goods are not to your liking, return them at our expense. In these times of war, the best florists are using these flowers on account of the scarcity and high prices of natural flowers.

HOW ABOUT YOUR EMPLOYEES?

It is a generally accepted fact that employees of any company who have been encouraged to be careful in their expenditures, to save their money and to invest it judiciously do better work, have greater pride in their jobs, and greater loyalty to their employers.

The United States Government now offers employers an unusual opportunity for the systematic organization of their employees for THRIFT through the founding of War Savings Societies.

GROUP SAVING through War Savings Societies bolsters up esprit de corps. It encourages economy in personal and company expenditures. It develops loyalty to company and country.

The organization of a War Savings Society among your employees will be direct help in winning the war, not only because it helps directly in Government financing, but also it releases men, money and materials for essential war work through the saving on non-essentials.

Perhaps you haven't thought of a War Savings Society for your employees in just this way before.

Why not organize a company of savers among your employees under your leadership and turn it over to the Government?

We will be glad to give you full particulars if you will write.

Reminders for the Coming Week

Keep on planting Freesias as long as you can obtain good bulbs. If a part of a Mum bench can be had you can't do better than to plant Freesias in it. They will not flower all at the same time and are bound to prove a profitable crop. Are the Stevias all staked properly? It may cost you now a little over a dollar to provide a suitable support for the plants which will prevent the loss of ten times that amount in broken flower stems later on. Many growers find themselves short of variegated Vincas this Fall. Take care of what you have. If short you can even make good use of plants which have been in window boxes, vases and hanging baskets during the Summer. Cut them back, divide and plant in pots or along the edges of a Carnation bench. Still time to make cuttings. How about those small ferns for dishes? It will pay to purchase another lot of seedlings now and pot them into 2½in. These will come in handy for Midwinter use. Don't depend on long distance shipments later on any more than is absolutely necessary. Smilax cut down will give a good second crop of strings if attended to at once. Give the bench a good mulch and proper cultivation after cleaning the surface. Avoid late watering in the palm and fern houses. The plants can get along with a much lower temperature if no excess moisture is on the leaves at sundown. This holds good with almost any greenhouse stock.

Money Maker for Easter

Mrs. Sanders Marguerites

Well grown plants of Mrs. Sanders Marguerites in full flower for Easter week are among the most desirable of pot plants not alone as specimens but when grown on in 3½in. and 4in. pots and used either as made-up plants in 8in. and 10in. pans or in plant arrangements in baskets or hampers. To talk about this next April won't do much good, so let's do it now and get ready with putting into the sand a nice lot of strong, healthy cuttings. I mention healthy because if you start out with cuttings affected by the blight to which some of these Marguerites are subject you only waste time and labor. Either use good stock or purchase such if you are short. The little plants should be carried along in a 50 deg. house and shifted twice between November and March; that is, if 4in. stock is wanted. For larger plants more frequent shifting is necessary, or two or three plants can be put into a pot. However, for early flowering stock, a little potbound stock is best. It will bloom earlier than plants which have had plenty of root room. I am positive that every retail grower can dispose of a large number of these Marguerites to good advantage; but the only way to do is to grow the plants for the purpose of having them at their best for Easter. Don't trust to good luck or be of the opinion that among the plants intended for Spring sales there will be enough to pick out from by the middle of next April ready for Easter sales.

Cold Storage Lilies

Plant a Few

At this writing it is almost impossible to buy around the Chicago market at any price either Lilium giganteum or L. rubrum. While this is partly due to the unusual demand for anything in the way of flowers it also proves that not nearly enough are being grown by the smaller retail growers. Yet there isn't an establishment where during the Summer and Fall months these Lilies couldn't be profitably handled and with much less work and bother than a lot of other things usually found. The day for set floral designs is not over yet and won't be for some time. What more showy or useful material could one use in a pillow or a wreath than either one of those Lilies? Even now it isn't too late to get some Lilium rubrum and L. giganteum and start them into growth. You will sell every flower to advantage later on, but bear in mind that it takes a house of 60 deg. for L. giganteum. L. rubrum can get along with a little less. Take advantage of the offers of cold storage stock. It may be long before we get more; so it looks as if there will be a good market for all of the flowers grown between now and next Summer. You can grow these Lilies with as little handling as any plant we might mention. This means a lot under present conditions.

Get Ready for Dutch Bulbs

There isn't really much use writing about Dutch bulb stock until the bulbs have reached our ports. To get the invoices is encouraging but it may be weeks before we get possession of the bulbs themselves. That means a short period for retailing them. This side line with many florists has been a paying proposition in years past and I think it well to keep on pushing it even now when most of us are in need of every bit of business possible. Keep on talking bulbs for outdoor planting to your patrons, just as if you had them or were sure to get them. Land the orders and live in hopes that they can be filled before things freeze up. That much for this end of it. As for ourselves nothing should be left undone to get everything ready for planting whenever the bulbs do come. Get the flats in shape, have them ready, and so with the soil. It takes good soil to grow good bulbs. Get away from the idea that anything is good enough. Bulb pans from 6in. on up to 10in. are excellent for almost any sort of bulbs. Don't look around for pans when you need them, get them now and have them on hand when the bulbs reach you. Why not plan to plant a good number of Darwins outdoors in frames for late flowering. With the help of sashes you can get them to come into bloom several weeks earlier than those of your customers' gardens. By making use of shade frames you can have a lot still in good condition a week or more after the others are all through flowering.

Flowering Shrubs for Easter

Pot Them Up Now

I am inclined to think that flowering shrubs grown in pots for next Easter will prove a paying item. It isn't that these plants sell at sight when offered but like Astilbes, Cinerarias or Calceolarias they are useful for decorative purposes and thereby help to sell other stock. One may also use the flower spikes to good advantage. For best results in forcing Lilacs on any other flowering hardy wooded plants, as we class them under shrubs, pot grown stock is the proper thing. Yet fairly good success may be had by lifting field grown stock of early Spring and Summer flowering sorts now and potting it up in large pots. Use a heavy soil and pot as firmly as possible without breaking the pot. Follow by a thorough soaking and place in a deep coldframe. For the next month or so keep the stock well watered for this will encourage root action. Spiræas, Forsythias, Prunus triloba, Double Flowering Almond and Lilacs are among the most desirable sorts. If you have stock on hand it will pay to lift a good batch; if not, let your nurseryman supply them, but don't allow the plants to lie around and dry out. They may remain in the frames until the middle or end of February, after which they should be brought in to a 40 deg. house and allowed to come along slowly for a week or two.

Cold Storage Spiræas

For Midwinter Flowering

You should plant at least a few cold storage Spiræas. Whether they come in just in time for Christmas or not doesn't matter. If well finished plants can be developed they are bound to pay. The stock not sold in pots may be used for decorative purposes and if cut in time both flowers and foliage may be used. Plant the clumps in liberal sized pots and place under a bench in the Chrysanthemum or Violet house. Keep well watered. As soon as growth begins place on a sunny bench in a house of 55 deg. Heavy fumigation hurts the soft foliage, so it is better to use a nicotine spray to keep the plants free from greenfly. While one may prolong the flowering period of these Spiræas it won't do to keep the plants in too low temperature in the early stages of growth; that is with cold storage stock; it is likely to cause stunted leaves and short flower stems later on. When the plants once start into growth keep them going. If any holding back is to be done do it when the plants are well advanced. Just before the buds begin to open is a good time to place them in a cool house.

Vegetable Crops for Forcing

Parsley—Hints on Growing Radishes

Planting Parsley in Greenhouses or Frames

Parsley that was started during the latter part of August should be large enough now for planting in greenhouses or frames for the Winter crop. The plants should be watered well before they are transplanted and if considerable soil remains around the roots of each plant when they are lifted, there will be no check in growth.

The soil for Parsley may be about the same as for Lettuce. It should be quite fertile if a steady growth is desired. It is worked up fine and leveled off for marking before the plants are set. The methods of marking the soil before planting may be such as those suggested for Lettuce in this department of THE EXCHANGE early in September.

The soil on the benches or beds where Parsley is to be grown should be moist at the time of planting. Some growers make the mistake of planting on ground that is too dry and as a result the first watering merely moistens the surface and the soil around the roots is too dry. This frequently occurs in soils that are a little too heavy and in those deficient in organic matter.

In planting, care should be taken not to cover up the central bud. The planting distances may be 6in. x 6in. up to 8in. x 8in. The bed is watered after planting is completed. As the season advances, more rapid growth may be secured by watering the Parsley with liquid manure, but this should not begin until two weeks after planting.

Another method of forcing Parsley is with the use of plants which were grown outside during the Summer. Some growers sow the seed in the open ground in the Spring and by proper thinning and cultivation, strong plants are grown before Fall. Before the ground freezes, these roots are lifted and prepared for forcing by cutting back the leaves nearly to the crown. The roots are then planted at the proper distances and under favorable conditions will immediately start new growth.

This is a simple method which anyone can use. If only a few plants can be secured from outside they may be lifted and used for forcing with little trouble. If frames are used for Parsley a little more attention is needed than in greenhouses. When really cold weather comes, some growers sprinkle a few leaves over the Parsley in frames for protection, in addition to the sash. With some plants from the outdoor crop, and the younger crop started in late August or early September there will be Parsley to sell through most of the Winter.

Radishes

Cause of Cracking

As Radishes reach maturity, it frequently happens that many will be cracked when they are pulled for marketing. This makes the bunches less attractive for sale. This cracking is caused usually by overwatering as the crop reaches maturity; it is also sometimes due to irregular watering. The crop needs a moist soil and thrives in a moist atmosphere, but too much water in the soil usually causes a heavy top growth. Rapid growth due to high temperatures and plenty of moisture in the soil, may also cause many of the Radishes to crack.

Radishes for Thanksgiving

Radishes intended for Thanksgiving Day trade should be sown about Oct. 21 to 24. This applies to the round early varieties. The seed should be covered about ½in., and sown at an even depth to insure a uniform stand. Thinning to the proper distances should be done promptly as soon as the plants are well started.

Horseradish is used extensively as a relish or condiment. The Winter's supply may be secured from the roots which will be dug this Fall. Although Horseradish is planted in the Spring and will endure Summer heat, it makes its best growth in the cool weather of the Fall. For this reason it is best to allow the crop to grow as long as possible in the Fall, but the roots should be dug before the ground freezes.

The roots may be removed with little damage by running the plow down both sides of the row about 6in. away from the roots. With the ground loosened in this way they may be plowed out easily. In light soils it may be possible to plow out the roots without throwing the soil away from both sides of the row.

The large, fleshy root is used to make the relish or condiment, and the small roots which are trimmed from the side are used for propagating the crop the following Spring. When the small roots are trimmed off, the upper end should be cut off square and the lower end, toward the tip of the root, should be cut slanting. This is done in order to enable one to tell which is the top end, when the roots are planted the following Spring. If they are planted with the lower end upward, the new roots will be irregular and undesirable. Frequently the pieces of root are practically of the same diameter for their entire length, as they are cut for propagating, usually 5in. or 6in. long, so that unless they are marked in some such way as suggested it would be difficult to tell the top end.

The best roots for propagating are between ¼in. and ½in. in diameter. They are usually tied in bunches and stored in a cool place where they will not dry out until Spring, when they are planted outside. The large roots may be dug in the Spring instead of in the Fall as they will stand Winter freezing, but since the soil is wet in the early Spring it is difficult to dig the roots.

European Notes

Climatic conditions remain very much as last reported. While we do not get a great quantity of rain our plants are daily ever thoroughly dry. Growers of Mangel and Radish seed feel rather unhappy at present but when we have passed the Autumnal equinox it is quite possible conditions will improve. In any case it will not be wise to reckon upon a surplus of either of these two very important crops.

Spinach, which has now been cleaned in, has given only moderate results; the loss of bulk in the drying has caused quite a serious shrinkage. At the same time the high prices obtained last season lead to a largely increased acreage being planted, so that there will probably be enough to go round.

Although no official figures are available there is a report that the restrictions on the export of the Dutch Spinach seed crop may be relaxed so far as the round seeded varieties are concerned. This will generate a lot of yearling seed, but owing to the wretched weather at harvest time last year the color of the seed and the germination leave much to be desired. Some seed of the 1916 crop is still on hand, but if it has to be kept until the spring of 1919 before it is sown it will be of very little value. It is a great pity that the authorities prohibited the export of the seed at a time when it was sorely needed and would have found a ready sale at a remunerative price. For this compulsory loss, the grower and the merchant have no redress, and the country has not benefited.

Francis C. Stokes, of Moorestown, N. J., who has come to Europe in the interest of his own and some other American firms, has arrived in London from France. European Seeds.

Large Arrivals of Dutch Bulbs

The arrival of Dutch bulbs at an Atlantic port was reported in our issue of last week. One ship brought over 10,000 cases of these bulbs, only 4000 cases of which were cleared through the Customs up to noon, Monday, the 14th. On the pier where these bulbs were unloaded much confusion exists. A representative of Van Waveren & Co. and 18 longshoremen worked all Liberty Day helping to get through the Customs and away from the pier the bulbs belonging to this firm. Representatives of Vaughan's Seed Store succeeded in getting some of their bulbs away and forwarding them to Chicago. The work of clearing these bulbs through the Customs, and getting them away from the pier, for obvious reasons goes on slowly. It is reported that the bulbs, as far as they have been examined, are entirely dormant and in good condition. The shipment includes all kinds and the usual varieties of Dutch bulbs, but the higher priced sorts of forcing Tulips and mother bulbs of Narcissi are reported to be in short supply.

A second ship bringing Dutch bulbs has arrived at an Atlantic port since the one above mentioned, but all papers in regard to these are missing, and since the last mail received from the port of shipment was dated Sept. 21, and the bills of lading on this ship were dated Sept. 28, it is probable, it is said, that a week to ten days will elapse before the papers necessary for the release of the bulbs will be received. It is thought that these two ships have brought at least two-thirds of the crop of Dutch bulbs. A third ship known to have bulbs on board is expected. There were up to Tuesday of this week at noon no further arrivals of French bulbs other than the 500 cases which reached an Atlantic port several weeks ago.

K. Van Bourgondien & Sons, Arlington, N. J., report the arrival at an Atlantic port of their Dutch bulbs.

John Buckman and C. Gloeckner, representing Henry F. Michell Co., 518 Market st., Philadelphia, Pa., are in the city this week to attend to the shipments of Dutch bulbs of the above mentioned firm.

As regards sales and shipments there has been very little business in the seed stores of this city for several weeks, but the arrival of Dutch bulbs is expected to put some life into trade.

Seed House Declared Solvent

A petition for a receiver was filed against the Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., 128 Chambers st., on Oct. 5. The same petitioners, without any conditions or consideration being demanded, are now petitioning the court for the dismissal of their petition, as the Boddington Co. has been found on examination of its books to be solvent by a considerable margin. Under a recent election Arthur T. Boddington was elected president of the company.

Chicago Seed Trade

Vaughan's Seed Store has received a large shipment of Lilium candidim northern grown stock, via Bordeaux. Cold storage Lilies and Daffodils are moving well. Salesmen on the road report a good demand for Gladioli bulbs for next season's planting. I. Rosnosky represented this house at the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland the past week.

The W. W. Barnard Co. reports a good demand for Christmas greens for which it is now booking advance orders. C. O. Wilcox of this firm will leave this week for an extended trip through the Southwest from which section there is a large demand for Onion sets, truck and garden seed for immediate use.

Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store has returned from New York where he attended the meeting of the Wholesale Seedmen's League. J. C. Vaughan attended the celebrations at Springfield last week incidental to the Illinois centennial anniversary.

C. Westerbeek and A. G. Pruyser, representing Westerbeek & Klyn, Dutch bulb growers were recent callers on the trade of the city.

The Adams Seed Co., of Decorah, Ia., is enlarging its establishment. Numerous improvements are to be carried out for the convenience of handling trade.

Crabbs-Reynold-Taylor Co., of Crawfordville, Ind., is preparing to do an extensive seed business the coming season. It has recently installed store fixtures from the Walker Bin Co., of Penn Yan, N. Y.

Confirmation of Cablegrams

The Post Office advises that it will expedite the handling through the mails and the Censorship Service of confirmations of cablegrams if they are mailed in separate envelopes, conspicuously marked, "Confirmation of Cablegram," instead of being enclosed in envelopes containing other matter.

Holland Growers' Protective List

The Exchange has learned through reliable sources the following facts concerning the Dutch bulb business. Holland bulb dealers have always had a protective list. Drummers took orders for long credits, nine to ten months, and these often resulted in bad debts. The situation becoming strained the dealers combined in an association to improve conditions. They argued that they, not the buyers, should have the use of their money. Also they sought to prevent damage done to the business by price cutting. In this direction there seems to have been no limit; if a salesman could not get an order for $50 he would sell for $45, or $40, or inferior stock or cheaper varieties might be substituted. Thus the business was injured. So the association agreed upon minimum selling prices below which no member is allowed to sell.

The association also made a general list of people who have not paid promptly. They agreed to set final dates of payment. If buyers do not pay they will bring such cases for decision before a court of justice composed of members themselves. Honest but slow buyers will not be discriminated against unjustly, but those cases which show that buyers simply don't or won't pay will not be sold to. The members of the association have, therefore, agreed not to sell to such people at all. If a member is caught selling to these undesirable firms he will be subject to a substantial fine, and may be prevented from buying bulbs from Holland growers. Bulbs will, therefore, be sold only to people who are prompt in payment and worthy of credit, hence fewer bulbs will be exported and there will be less chance to suffer losses as under former conditions.

Since a limit will be put upon the dealers' prices, it is predicted that better classes of bulbs will be exported, there will be fewer complaints and everyone will benefit. This will also prevent the shipping of unsold bulbs on speculation, the arrival of thousands of cases to be auctioned in America. Thus damage to the trade at both ends will be prevented.

In view of these developments, it is suggested that American dealers combine so as to protect themselves against Holland dealers, not all of whom are beyond criticism. Foreign dealers make honest mistakes; therefore why not form a dealers' protective association in America and have an appointed court of justice to try cases? Thus dealers abroad would know that Americans also seek to improve conditions. Both associations could cooperate, each could have its list of undesirables, the Hollanders to be offset by the American, in which instances of inferior goods, overcharges and similar mistakes could be taken care of. The effect of such a combination of Americans would help the trade fully as much as the Hollanders' association, without which, according to our information, it would have been impossible under business conditions to ship bulbs out of Holland to America this season.

New Potato Disease

The new Potato disease, recently discovered near Hazelton, Pa., and described and illustrated on page 581 of THE EXCHANGE of Oct. 12, is claimed by the New Jersey Agri. Exp. Sta. to be the European Potato wart disease, which is known in Canada and parts of New York State. A bulletin of the station states that the section in which the disease was found is not a Potato growing country and that the infection has been confined to small plantings. However, it is wise to be careful as to the source of Potato seed and to avoid planting any that has been mixed with infected tubers.

How Many Employees Have You?

Under this caption Charles A. Dards, retail florist of New York City, who has voluntarily given up much of his time to the sale of War Savings Stamps on behalf of the Government, published an advertisement paid for by himself and to which we wish to refer our readers. It will be found on page 568, issue of Oct. 12.

There is no doubt whatsoever that systematic giving lends itself to far more satisfactory results than giving up money under pressure at irregular periods, and Mr. Dard's appeal to florists, nurserymen and seedsmen to band their organizations together is right to the point. It does not make any difference in the idea as to how many men are working with you, be it five men or one hundred men. Organize them so that they will give definitely out of their earnings, on pay day each week. With this money make a purchase weekly or monthly for the amount collected of War Savings Stamps and as each man earns a stamp turn it over to him. This will be found satisfactory and the payments will come so easily that the amount out of the weekly envelope will not be missed.

The same idea applies to the voluntary contributions for the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus or the Salvation Army. Have your employees consent to give from 10c. each week up out of their earnings, hold this sum until you have the total of the month's collections and then send your check in to the society on whose behalf this money has been collected. Just as with the single individual, so with groups of individuals: systematic saving or giving will invariably give more satisfactory results.

We will willingly give space to reports from our readers in cases where this method has been practiced or is going to be started after reading Mr. Dard's appeal.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

To those who have interested themselves in the way things are managed by the National Cash Register Company, Dayton, Ohio, one phase of their activities stands out which commends itself to every business man, irrespective of the size of his establishment and the number of employees.

We have in mind the human support given by this company to its vast army of salesmen. These men, through every conceivable and reasonable encouragement, are put in that frame of mind from which the qualities of best salesmanship are the natural result.

The National Cash Register Company, by its work in this direction, shows itself to be a strong advocate of the theory that in the make-up of most men is the desire to make good.

You must know that the old adage of "spare the rod and spoil the child" is not quite so believed in today and, after all, the principle involved in both cases is closely related.

The following five "bits of wisdom" on leadership, issued recently by the National Cash Register Company, may be as old as the hills to you, but the points raised are as new as if appearing for the first time, if you have not practised them:

LEADERSHIP

1. Successful leadership always requires tact. If the Chief has the gift of leadership he will praise here and condemn there.
2. To the enthusiastic and energetic person, nothing is so deadening as to be ignored. It is enough, for most men, to know that their work is observed and measured and that, if found of value, it will be appreciated.
3. If the Chief of Service criticizes the results of his juniors or colleagues TOO EXACTINGLY, he will soon lose that COOPERATIVE spirit which is so necessary to successful work.
4. An organization based on the recognition of the actual results accomplished must be far better than one in which these are ignored.
5. That organization is best that requires least attention from the head.

Creative impulse and instinct of service will impel to action, reward or no reward. Their recognition is due the public.

The National Cash Register Co., by the way, advertised largely in magazines with general circulation until some few months ago, when it was decided to use the trade press as the shortest route to the business man.

Washington, D. C.

Local florists are doing a large funeral business. Early in the week there was a shortage of stock, coupled with which was the shortage of men. The result was that one of the largest concerns handling several hundred orders daily was compelled to refuse orders at times during the first two or three days.

Wholesale houses clean up their consignments as quickly as received and at that have not nearly enough to go around. Prices have jumped considerably, but stock is generally good, aided as it has been by favorable weather. All retail stores are compelled to remain closed until 10 a.m. to help keep the street cars less crowded, but in face of the added work one firm reports closing at 2 a.m., only to reopen the store at five o'clock for the next day's business.

Some exceptionally fine Mock Roses are offered—long stems, fairly large flowers and good foliage. They are bringing $25 per 100 and are considered worth the money. The market cleans good Radiance quickly at up to $20 per 100 for the best. Ophelia with 2ft. stems brings $20. American Beauty Roses have been moving at as high as $9 per doz. wholesale. These are very good, although the price is considered rather high.

All Roses are bringing good prices. For instance Ward with 12in. stems brought $8 per 100; Maryland sells quickly at $12, and short stemmed White Killarney and Ophelia at similar prices. Elanore Parker looks good.

'Mums bring $3 per doz., with white and yellow October Frost and Unaka in the market. There is a flood of Cosmos which is in the way with the class of business now prevailing. Not nearly enough Dahlias to go around; these flowers are counted upon to fill the shortage of Roses and Carnations. They bring from $3 up. Many growers are entirely cut out. A frost recently played havoc with the Dahlias.

Violets are in and selling well. A large consignment of Valley is expected to reach here next week and orders are being taken on the basis of $10 per 100. Trianæ Cattleya orchids have gone to $12. Dendrobium formosum is quoted at $6. Some excellent Gladioli Francis King is to be had at $10 per 100.

Viewed from the Monument

John Sharper, of Oxon Hill, Md., is reported as having recovered from an illness.

Mrs. George Dalgleish is in the George Washington University Hospital recovering from illness.

Many local florists sent funeral pieces expressing sympathy to the widow of Michael Treisea, who died recently. The deceased occupied a stand for many years near Seventh and D sts., N. W., and held the respect of all in the florist business. He must have had a premonition of his passing for less than a month ago he took legal steps to have his property placed in shape so his wife would be protected.

E. A. D.

Kansas City, Mo.

Business has been so heavy with the Kansas City florists that they have been working day and night. The epidemic of Spanish influenza which has been sweeping the country has been felt in this section within the last 18 days.

No change has taken place in the local market. Roses are still the only flower being considered. There is a big cut of these and the demand is heavy. Prices range from 6c. to 20c. apiece, as previously. The florists report business almost equal to holiday times and as there is a shortage of help it has been necessary for everyone to keep on the rush and work overtime in order to get out orders on time. Practically all the orders are for hospitals or funerals. Orders for out of town have been heavier than ever known at this time of year.

The Truth Concerning California

MULTITUDES of folks in the East have a desire to emigrate to California, the land of heart's delight, by the sunset sea, to make a living cultivating the soil. To do so intelligently and successfully, those who have no knowledge of the conditions, as they exist here, would do well to learn about them before making the change.

The problem of local deliveries has been somewhat trying. Some of the florists have been meeting the difficulty by combining their deliveries, those fortunate enough to have drivers and delivery boys helping out those whose forces are short.

Flowers, Fruits for Sick Soldiers

A number of Kansas city business men have taken up the task of making life more cheerful for the sick soldiers of the Army motor school who are at the Army or civilian hospitals. These sick soldiers are being supplied with Oranges and flowers. The City Club is receiving contributions for the work. The president of the club started the fund with a check for $25. Other checks have been promised by telephone and the public has been appealed to through the newspapers to aid in the work.

Bryson Ayres, of Independence, Mo., a seedsman and florist, is arranging to get the flowers. Fruit dealers have promised to let the committee have Oranges at wholesale. Army officers at the school approve of the movement.

About 7000 persons gathered in Convention Hall Sunday afternoon, Oct. 6, to pay tribute to Paul Temperli, veteran of the French Foreign Legion, who died at the Christian Church Hospital, on Oct. 3. It was the first international military funeral held at Kansas City since the beginning of the war and the first funeral ever held in Convention Hall. Paul Temperli was one of the 63 members of the French Foreign Legion who visited Kansas City to help the Fourth Liberty Loan. There were many beautiful floral offerings on the stage, including an effective wreath furnished by A. Newell. It consisted of Magnolia and Cycas leaves, with a spray of Cape Flowers and Baby's Breath, and was tied with a big bow of red, white and blue ribbon and bore American, English, French and Australian flags. The body was sent to St. Louis, whence it will be sent to Washington for burial in Arlington Cemetery. After the war it will be taken to France. B. S. B.

flowers and are working day and night, being hampered by sickness among the office force.

Kerr the Florist reports that Mr. Eichling and Mr. Walker are ill. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, with Clarence L. Brock, superintendent of parks, were invited to a birthday celebration on Sunday, Oct. 13, at Willis, Texas, the home of Mr. Cluxton, the Bluebell King of Texas. They expected to go in automobiles if not prevented by the heavy heavy rains. The celebration was to be a double one, Mrs. Kerr's birthday falling on Oct. 15 and Mr. Cluxton's on the 14th. The R. C. Kerr Co. is managing to supply the flower demand, and this is considered excellent in view of the fact that it is a new concern.

Mr. Hewitt, of the Brazos Greenhouses reports that he and his force have been working day and night to keep up with orders. His grower, Martino Bellieri, is sick.

The meeting of the Houston Hort. Society, to take up the matter of making Houston a Crape Myrtle city was not held, as the weather was inclement and besides a number of the members were ill. President Mitchell will probably not call a meeting until next month, in accordance with the request of the city authorities that all gathering be suspended for the present.

Clarence L. Brock was in charge of the decorations for the convention of the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, held this week at the Auditorium. Kerr the Florist furnished the emblematic flowers and other decorations.

C. L. B.

Fort Worth, Texas

On Nov. 19 to 21 we shall entertain the Texas State Florists' Ass'n in convention and have a flower show. We were a little afraid of a show at this time but our local people and the Red Cross leaders all said hold this show by all means. All profits go to the Red Cross which will assure us a good attendance. We want all florists to feel invited to help a good cause and bring their stock to this show. This will not be a small town affair but a real show with good exhibits and plenty of them. We have also added a canary bird section that will be of interest to some of the trade who handle birds. We will have many birds and some experts who will be able to give them attention if they need it. Almost all of our premium list is War Stamps and Liberty bonds. All the live boys in the trade are coming and we are going to show them a good time.

If you want to buy anything or have something to sell be on the job with us. Come and watch us say Red Cross with flowers. W. R. CUNNINGHAM.

BAY CITY, TEXAS.—A. Merzrath, proprietor of the Bay City Greenhouses has just completed a new 18ft. x 50ft. A. Dietsch house, which he is stocking with seasonable goods for the Christmas trade. Business is fairly good and Mr. Merzrath has every reason to believe it will continue so, as the harvests have been spendid in this section.

Dahlias in the West

The season for Dahlias now closing has been the best we have had for a number of years, due largely to the fact that we have had a more generous rainfall, or rather that the rainfall has been distributed better than usual; therefore, as a whole, we have had cooler and damper days. Blooms have on the average been much larger and more numerous. This condition I think has been general throughout the mountain area. At the present date (Oct. 10) Dahlias are still in their glory. Early in the season we had some white fly that did more or less damage, but have had no red spider to contend with this year.

Denver, Col. W. W. WILMORE.

Your Back Orders

Keep your temper, gentle Sir,
Writes the Manu-facturer
Though your goods are overdue,
For a week, or maybe two,
We can't help it; please don't swear:
Labor's scarce, and needles rare;
Can't get wax, can't get dyes;
These are facts: we tell no lies.

Harry's drafted, so is Bill;
All our work is now up hill,
So your orders, we're afraid,
May be still a bit delayed,
Still you'll get them; don't get vexed,
Maybe this week, maybe next;
Keep on hoping; don't say die,
You will get them, bye and bye.

New Primula Malacoides

It is just as essential in Business as in War to be prepared for the future.

Your Business is largely what you make it.

The first step in selling is to have something worth while to sell, with a conscientious belief that it is all and more than you represent it to be. This is the case with the New Rohrer Primula Malacoides.

Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink and Light Lavender. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

PINK and LAVENDER $6.00 per 100; $55.00 per 1000 2½-inch pots

Buffalo, N. Y.

Stock of all kinds is scarce. Prices are high and there is a clean-up on everything, floral work being in heavy demand. Outdoor flowers are about over. 'Mums are coming in, among the first being Smith's Advance, Golden Glow and Unaka. There is not enough stock to supply the heavy demand at present.

What People Say

The Colonial Flower Shop recently furnished many floral pieces for the funeral of Frank Miami, a prosperous newsboy, who formerly had a stand at Main and Mohawk sts. The young man, who was in the Navy, died of Spanish influenza at Great Lakes, Ill.

Miss Bessie Bellanca of the Colonial shop was recently visited by Miss Nina Morgana of Buffalo, soprano, who is giving concerts with Caruso and his company.

The Elmwood Floral Co. is moving its greenhouses from Bird ave., Buffalo, to Williamsville, N. Y.

L. H. Neubeck is cutting early 'Mums. He reports that they are selling as fast as cut.

"In these days the boss has to do all the work," said the proprietor of a local greenhouse. "When you hire a man, you don't have a chance to say, 'We pay so much.' He starts the conversation with, 'How much do you pay?' If the amount you mention doesn't please him, he walks away."

Buffalo's downtown florists are losing considerable money on account of a city-wide street car strike, still in progress at this writing. To give an idea of the losses in all lines of retail business down town, it is estimated that all retail places, flower shops included, are showing a decrease in trade amounting to $50,000 a day. Thousands of employees of local plants working on war orders are on the absent or tardy list daily during the strike and their losses in wages each day is estimated at $10,000. Employees in the florist business, who are not fortunate enough to own automobiles, are traveling to and from work on motor trucks and jitneys or over "the shoe leather route."

Buffalo trade in general and the downtown flower shops in particular has received another setback on account of the spread of Spanish influenza in this city. The epidemic, however, is causing some extra funeral work.

JOSEPH A. McGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

Perhaps never in the history of the trade has the retail business been so large as that which it reached the past week, due largely to the quantities of flowers sent to the sick.

H. A. Schroyer's right hand man, B. H. Sterneman, is down with influenza. As it is impossible to get a man to run the delivery car, Mr. Schroyer has been making deliveries himself of those orders for which he could not get messenger service, and practically covers the city every day.

At the B. F. Barr establishment there has been work every day from 7 a.m. to 12 p.m. Mrs. Spero, the head of the store, was ill the latter part of the week and Mr. Barr had to take charge himself. At the greenhouses six men are down.

T. J. Nolan was in Lancaster with a line of baskets from the Burlington Willowware Shops, of Burlington, Ia., the firm he is now representing.

Two fairly heavy frosts have cut down the supply of outdoor flowers but most of the Dahlias were protected ,and these, with 'Mums, keep the flower shops a blaze of color and cheer many a sick room, helping the patients to recovery as much as do drugs and doctors.

H. K. Rohrer, who is managing the H. D. Rohrer greenhouses, reports that they are getting pot plants through via parcel post in fine shape with no complaints. It is a fortunate thing that we have this service to fall back on in these trying times of transportation.

The Florists' Club has called off its meeting, in compliance with the request of the Board of Health.

Leaf Coloration in Trees and Shrubs

The crowning glory of some plants lies not so much the flower or fruit as in the brilliant coloration hich is attained by their leaf in Autumn. The tree ad hills of Pennsylvania and New York at this time resent a study in colors more charming perhaps than any other season of the year.

Plant life contains many mysteries which, even after ıe scientist's lengthy explanation, still remains be-ond our grasp. The life germ hidden in the elements ' the seed, the many colors to be found in flowers, the onderful color transformations that occur in the leaf affle our limited understanding. We know of course ıat certain chemical changes in the composition of the af takes place to produce this coloration, and to ring about the change certain conditions of sunlight, mperature and moisture are necessary.

Happily our scant knowledge of these things does not mit our enjoyment of the matured production. In ır Eastern and Northern States there is a regularity f Autumn coloring which is not generally obtained sewhere. Apparently weather and mperature conditions are more ıvorable here to the bringing out f the rich hues in the leaf. Every eason is not alike in this respect f course, nor can it be said that ıe same brilliancy is noted every ear in the same particular trees nd shrubs. Probably the conditions ıat suit one plant do not fit an-ther so well; hence we see a dif-rence in degree of color in them ccording to the season. An over-igorous, sappy growth, the result f a wet, warm Autumn, or too rich soil perhaps, is not conducive to ıe bright colors resulting when the rowth has been well ripened by a eriod of dry, warm weather, gradu-lly followed by nights of almost cold temperature.

I think we may safely say, how-ver, that the best Autumn display made by trees and shrubs in-igenous to this country. Some few xotics are beautiful in the posses-ion of this trait, however; especially ; it found in those coming to us rom the colder parts of China and apan, whose climate, travelers tell s, so much resembles our own.

None of us would want to under-stimate the vivid Autumn colors ound in many forms of the Japan-se Maples, or that furnished by the aluable Manchurian Maple, Acer Ginnala. The Maidenhair Fern Tree, too, must not be forgotten for ts rich golden color prior to the fall of the leaf, while n exotic shrubs, Spiræa Thunbergii, Euonymus alatus, Viburnum tomentosum and Berberis Thunbergii afford ively color effects in the landscape. The popular Ampelopsis Veitchii, "Japanese Ivy," almost equals our ative Virginia Creeper, while the Crimson Glory Vine, Vitis Coignetiæ, can hardly be excelled among vines or color, the large, orbicular leaves turning in the all the richest shades of scarlet and crimson.

To return to our native trees, however, what can ex-el the Autumn leafage of Sweet and Sour Gum, Red nd Sugar Maple, Red, Scarlet and Pin Oak, all of hich light up the landscape in burnished shades of rimson, bronze and gold? In self-yellows we have the nighty Tulip Poplar (Liriodendron tulipifera), Hick-ries, Honey Locust, Birch and Elm. Among our maller growing native trees none can surpass the Dog-wood (Cornus florida) for beauty of foliage. It is eautiful in three respects: Spring sees it clothed n the white and pink garb of its blossoms while in the Fall it assumes a dress of crimson leaf, intensified y the erect corymbs of scarlet berries, which, unless aten by the birds, will persist long after the leaves ave fallen.

One other small tree worth special mention for its Autumn beauty is the Sorrel Tree (Oxydendron ar-oreum) which, like the Dogwood, has a pleasing habit of growth. The bright red color of the leaf is made more conspicuous by the greenish white flower buds that terminate the branches, these buds being already formed but closely sealed until the tree's season of flowers next year. In native shrubs that are conspicuous in Autumn colors we have a wide and varied collection. Foremost are the Sumachs, Rhus typhina, Rhus glabra, Rhus Copallina and Rhus aromatica, all being among the first to turn color in the Fall, and when planted in mass formation are strong features in natural plantings.

Some of the Viburnums should be mentioned; especially good are Viburnum cassinoides and V. acerifolium, the former with bronze red, the latter with yellow foliage. The bush Blueberry, Vaccinium corymbosum gives us high colors, as does also the Chokeberry (Pyrus arbutifolium) while Virginian Willow (Itea virginica) Amelanchier (Shad Bush) and some of our native Roses, all swell the ranks of Autumn color shrubs. Pre-eminent among vines and climbers is the common Virginia Creeper (Ampelopsis quinquefolia) which in rich colors can now be seen rambling over walls, hedge rows and fences alike, while many a tree trunk is brightly ornamented with the creeper's festoons of crimson and bronze. Confused with it sometimes, in the wild state, is the dreaded Poison Ivy (Rhus Toxicodendron), the foliage of which also has beautiful colors that have often lured the unsuspecting to gather them for decoration, with painful results. Every child, however, after the difference is pointed out ought to be able to discriminate between the two vines; the main difference in the leaf, which is easily distinguished, is that Poison Ivy has three leaflets on the one stem while the Virginia Creeper has five.

Sophora japonica

As a Summer flowering tree the Sophora stands alone. The panicles of Pea-shaped, greenish white blossoms, about 12in. long, fairly cover the entire tree and the translucent, waxy, Bean-like seeds which follow make a most attractive sight in October, as they glisten in the sunlight. The Sophora is excellent as a flowering lawn tree, but as it is invariably low branched it is not well adapted for use as a street tree. If, however, this tendency could be overcome—possibly by allowing the seedlings to remain crowded in the seed beds and thereby forcing them to grow upright and form leaders, and the falling blossoms were not objectionable—better it could be considered in the street tree class and regarded as a unique subject for highway planting. It does well under city conditions; is not bothered by insects and is easily raised from seed.

Cratægus pinnatifida

(This Week's Illustration)

Cratægus pinnatifida, while not one of the native sorts referred to by Mr. Farrington in his interesting article on Hawthorns in THE EXCHANGE of Oct. 5 is an attractive species, as will be seen from the illustration herewith. C. pinnatifida is a shrub or small tree, growing to a height of about 20ft. It flowers in June, the blossoms being white. It is really an oriental sort, being native to North China and Eastern Siberia to Korea, and it noteworthy for the great number of its varieties.

Some Hardy Ornamental Flowering Trees

(Part of an address by John Dunbar, Asst.-Supt. of Park's, Rochester. See Nursery Department, issue Oct. 12)

There are many beautiful flowering Cherries. The small fruited Cherry from Northern China, Prunus tomentosa, is extremely handsome when in bloom. It flowers usually about the first of May, and every branch is covered with great numbers of white flowers faintly tinged with pink. It usually forms a broadheaded tree, sometimes much broader than high. Sargent's Cherry, Prunus serrulata, var. sachalinensis, introduced from Japan by Dr. Sargent in 1892, is perhaps one of the most important trees ever introduced from Japan. It grows into a handsome tree and the large pink rose tinted blossoms, 2in. across, are very conspicuous. Prunus subhirtella, and the var. pendula are beautiful Japanese Cherries. The last named has become extensively dissemminated in parks, cemeteries and gardens.

White Fringe and Flowering Chestnuts

The White Fringe, Chionanthus virginica, is a beautiful American small tree, or sometimes an arborescent shrub with long drooping clusters of white flowers. It is found native from Pennsylvania to Texas. It is quite hardy in Rochester and vicinity. It is rather slow growing, and takes 15 to 20 years to attain the size of a well developed specimen. When a good sized individual is covered with the showy panicles of pure white, drooping blossoms it is undeniably beautiful. It is always characteristic throughout the Summer and Autumn, with its bold, ample leaves. It requires a deep, moist, sandy loam to be at its best and prefers a Southern exposure with plenty of light. It is readily raised from seeds and the fact should be borne in mind that the individuals are either staminate or pistillate; that is, staminate plants, while showy in flower, of course produce no fruit.

We must not omit the Red-flowering Horse Chestnuts, for they are conspicuous objects in bloom. Æsculus carnea and the forms Plantierensis and Briotii, with varied reddish colored blossoms are highly desirable. The last named has notably conspicuous red flowers. A shrubby species lately discovered in the South, A. austrina (A. discolor, var. mollis) has beautiful scarlet flowers and has proved hardy here; even during the last severe Winter it was not injured.

Federal Horticultural Board

Probably the final meeting of this board, in connection with its proposition for the exclusion of nursery stock and florists' plants, scheduled for Oct. 18, is being held at Washington, D. C., as this issue goes through the mails. The decision may be withheld for some time but will be looked forward to with concern by all interested.

The one book pre-eminently practical for use by florists and nurserymen as a guide for all laying out work is Cridland's Practical Landscape Gardening. Price $1.90 from this office.

If Your Exchange is Late

Do not write complaining of the delay as it is beyond our power to prevent it. The Post Office is undoubtedly doing the best it can for all under circumstances of unprecedented transportation and mail conditions. If your copy does not reach you after a reasonable waiting notify us and we will mail you a duplicate.

The Coal Situation

Hearing comparatively few complaints in recent days the natural conclusion is that the majority of growers have been enabled to lay in a supply. Where difficulty still exists, after patient recouse in turn has been had to local dealer, local fuel administrator and state fuel administrator, if your cause and complaint is a justifiable one, then your final recourse should be to the National Fuel Administration at Washington, D. C. Use the wires and send in a full statement of your predicament. Meantime scout your section for anything that can be burned in a furnace to afford a temporary relief. Finally, bear in mind that we are at war, that the war has to be won, therefore our own private inconveniences and hardships, as they arise, should first be met to the best of our ability before we trouble Government officials.

F. T. D. Window Displays Assured

In their letter to Albert Pochelon, secretary of the F. T. D., offering $100 annually for a convention window, Kennicott Bros. Co. of Chicago stated that they made the offer because the F. T. D. represents the first exclusively national organization representative of the interests of the retail florists. The idea of their offer is to stimulate the local retail florists to take an active interest in the decoration of their windows for the occasion, thereby bringing the services of the F. T. D. to the attention of the local public. A significant paragraph in the Kennicott Bros. Co. communication is the statement that 55 of the new F. T. D. members of the past year—one-half of 1917 and 1918—are valuable wholesale customers of theirs.

The Cleveland Movie Show

The films shown at the recent F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland on the Tuesday night held the audience engrossed and the applause following practically every film exhibited demonstrated the appreciation of the efforts of Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson and the committee under whose attention the films had been produced. One of the most amusing of the films was that tending to show the F. T. D. business done by the Jones-Russell Co., whose store is at the point where Huron road joins Euclid av., coming to a point at its apex and giving the company unsurpassed opportunity for window display. The screen opened with one of their shop windows splendidly displayed and passers-by hurrying along. Presently comes a telegraph messenger boy followed by another and still another, then in groups, and finally the whole push in one bunch came rushing madly into the store. In the office is shown one of the partners accepting the telegrams from the boys, with a broad smile on his face. This film received rounds of applause. Later was illustrated the delivery of a rush F. T. D. order. There were some fifty films shown in all.

THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE suggests that these films be exhibited at every florists' club meeting possible throughout the country this coming Fall and Winter. While they would be shorn of their local flavor they would, we have no doubt, prove educational and entertaining.

WANTED—EVER SO MUCH

Acacias	Bay Trees	Hollies
Araucarias	Buxus	Hybrid Tea Roses
Azaleas	Ericas	Rhododendrons

Advertiser is willing to pay any price asked not exceeding five hundred per cent. above the ruling prices of 1916

Due to the absolute indifference manifested by the rank and file of our florists, landscape designers, park and cemetery superintendents, private estate owners, and others, advertisements of the above character will be plentiful when the piping days of peace return if the Federal Horticultural Board puts into execution its Plant Exclusion program June 1, 1919, as it most assuredly will unless, within the next two weeks, individual letters of strong protest and by the score are received by the Board.

As was noted in our issue of Oct. 12 a conference on plant exclusion by the Federal Horticultural Board was called to convene at Washington, D. C., Oct. 18. Received too late for publication in that issue was a telegram from C. L. Marlatt, Chairman of the Board, to the effect that it was inadvisable to postpone the conference on account of the local health conditions. The intentions of the Federal Board had been fully presented, it said, and persons who did not care to attend were invited to submit criticisms or suggestions in writing with the guaranty of the Board that these would be given full consideration.

TO "EXCHANGE" READERS

One Hundred Million Strong

YOU are a fighter in this great American Army—the army that is going to win the war. And you have a record to be proud of.

YOU have helped to raise and train and ship to France nearly two million American fighting men.

YOU have bought the bonds that bought the guns and shells with which they are winning battles.

YOU have saved food voluntarily to help our Allies.

YOU—and your soldiers—have turned the tide of battle towards victory.

You still have before you the crowning task—to WIN.

You can do it.

Buy Liberty Bonds—buy to your limit—buy for Victory, and—all of us together—we can't help winning.

Many of our Florists' clubs have sent in strong letters of protest against the proposed ruling. All efforts to move the Board to reconsider its proposed rulings have been unavailing to date, possibly because the protests received were looked upon as coming from organized opposition and not from individuals. In point of fact the Board now proposes to exclude all the plants covered by June 1, 1919, whereas, at the hearing of last May it was the expressed intention to give growers here the time and opportunity to import sufficient of these stocks whereby they could lay the foundation in this country for prosperous nurseries which would quickly rival those of Holland and Belgium, particularly, in their ability to turn out all these plants in quantity sufficient to meet every demand. Under present day conditions it is practically impossible to import any plants, and there is but the slightest likelihood of imports by or before June 1, 1919.

As to the present day facts: if our readers will, in gr numbers, show their interest in the situation, and ask th a reasonable time be given, after the ending of the war, procure the supplies necessary not only to keep the dustry alive but to allow of adequate preparations where to establish nurseries of the character desired in favor locations here, the Federal Horticultural Board might inclined to grant the extension. Such letters of prote should be forwarded within the next ten days, and a dressed to who will make it his duty to see they are promptly plac in the hands of Mr. Marlatt, Chairman of the Fede Horticultural Board, or they can be addressed to th gentleman direct.

These individual letters of protest should be written fr each man's standpoint pointing out wherein the restricti is going to be detrimental to his business.

We confess our ignorance, but on the plants named this article, and brought in from the highly developed a carefully guarded nurseries of England, France, Belgi and Holland, we are unaware of any disease or destructi pest which is working any more havoc in this count than the various diseases and destructive pests found florist's flowers originating in this country.

It is too late now to go into the reasons why Pl Exclusion as affecting so-called florists' decorative plan has been brought to its present threatening point. T trade is confronted with a condition which will shor become a fact, unless it at once vigorously protests agai rulings the putting into effect of which, in the man proposed, must inevitably lower for years to come t magnificent appearance of all our great public show grou to say nothing of hundreds of thousands of private ho grounds of all grades, which have made American ho culture what it is, as well as effectually stamp out import industry which has been in vogue for a hundr years or more.

F. T. D. Convention Report

Board of Directors' Meeting

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held imm diately following the adjournment of the Convention, unanimous vote Albert Pochelon was re-elected secreta and W. L. Rock Treasurer for the ensuing year.

On motion it was ordered that $2500 be appropriat toward the S. A. F. publicity fund, $1500 of the same come out of the F. T. D. treasury and $1000 to be return to the S. A. F. when received from that organization.

Membership Dues in the S. A. F.—A Momento Question

On motion of Mr. Knoble, it was declared to be the poli of the Board of Directors that the F. T. D. organizati pay into the treasury of the S. A. F. and O. H. a sum equ to $3.00 per capita of F. T. D. members, providing an agre ment can be made with the directors of the S. A. F. a O. H. to invest this money so received in the latte publicity fund. It was understood that action on t above will have to be in the shape of a constitutio amendment, to be ratified by the general convention, b in the meantime, by further motion, the secretary w empowered to receive applications for membership in t F. T. D. until such time as the preceding recommend tion can be acted upon by the membership of the F. T. J along the lines outlined, as a constitutional amendmer It was predicted by Secretary Pochelon that this acti would result in a large accession of membership in th F. T. D.

Prior to this declaration by the Board of Director considerable discussion had taken place on this subje during the business meetings Tuesday and Wednesda On behalf of the F. T. D. it was stated that it had becon a very moot question for some time past as to how th association could increase its membership in the face of th objections made by florists approached to take out mem bership, many protesting vehemently against bein arbitrarily compelled to join two organizations in ord to get the benefit of one. Therefore, the present acti is taken in an endeavor to create some way whereby will be possible for the F. T. D. to add to its membersh through an arrangement whereby all new members of th F. T. D. become automatically members of the S. A. without the applicant having to make personal applic tion for membership in the S. A. F. as well.

The $50 Award Suggestion not Concurred In

The prize suggestion with reference to making a speci allowance to traveling men for bringing in new membe was brought up and was not concurred in by the Board.

The late Mrs. James E. M. Weir

A vote of thanks to Treasurer Rock was adopted by unanimous vote for efficient services.

The Board made an appropriation covering the office expenses of the secretary and also the expenses of officers and directors in attendance on board meetings, the latter being along the same lines as now prevail in the S. A. F. and O. H.

The Wednesday Luncheon

At the noon luncheon tendered by the Cleveland Florists' Club addresses were made by crippled soldiers in khaki just returned from the front. Private O'Hearn, of the Canadian army, who had lost his right arm, gave an interesting and detailed account of the methods employed by the Intelligence Department of the Army in making scouting expeditions in No Man's Land, making maps and obtaining all details in regard to the enemy's trenches, and so forth. His story was on entirely new and unpublished lines, and alone worth the trip to Cleveland to those interested in war history. He was followed by Private O'Sullivan of the American army who had fought and been crippled at Chateau Thierry, who also recounted his experiences at the front.

The company was wrought up to a high pitch of enthusiasm, and at the psychological moment President Gude, after referring in feeling terms to the sacrifices made by our boys "Over There," made an urgent appeal for subscriptions to the Liberty Loan, in response to which all present at once came to the front and almost all of the tables contributed a full one hundred per cent. The list of bond purchasers at this luncheon follows, aggregating $8800. Practically every individual purchaser had already bought previously "until it hurt." Here's the list:

David F. Klein, Arthur S. Cohen, Jas. M. McLaughlin, Sam Seligman, L. C. McFarland, A. T. De La Mare, Mary E. Walker, Chas. J. Graham, John Walker, Geo. M. Geraghty (Canadian), Mrs. Norman I. Stewart, Charles H. Brown, E. C. Pruner, Max. E. Gottlieb, Henry Smith, D. A. Brown, J. W. Rodgers, C. S. Harper, Albert Pochelon, W. J. Smyth, Philip Breitmeyer, A. R. King (Canadian), Ira C. Harper, Frank B. Smith (Canadian), Joy Floral Co., W. Gude, The F. T. D. Association, Patrick F. O'Keefe.

Henry Penn, Hester A. Getz, Amelia E. Gude, Vincent G. Gorly, Jno. A. Lambert, John E. Quallick, H. P. Merrick, John Young, Wm. C. Gloeckner, Fred C. Weber, Jr., Frank J. McCabe, H. G. Dillemuth (Canadian), Schiller, The Florist, Paul Klingsporn, De Forest W. Ludwig, Chas. F. Feast, H. P. Knoble, Payne Jennings, Guy E. Davis, Arthur Langhans, J. J. Salmon, Henry L. Blend, T. E. Waters, Irwin Bertermann, Geo. A. Washburn, Sam Freund, Frank Schram, H. B. Jones, Frank J. McKenna (Canadian) Frank A. Friedly, L. F. Darnell, Henry C. Forster, Geo. R. Doemling, E. H. Mann, Ed. A. Fetters, J. Rosnosky, F. E. Deckregg, De Forest Wicks, H. W. Schluroff, F. C. W. Brown, Teddy Nelson, W. H. Anderson, J. S. Wilson, H. B. Howard, Baum's Home of Flowers, A. H. Vogt, J. F. Sullivan, Jas. J. Karins, Fred H. Lemon.

The individual sales ran from $50 all the way up to $1000.

At the J. M. Gasser Co. greenhouses at Rocky River, Cleveland, visited by the F. T. D. on the Tuesday afternoon, under the escort of F. C. W. Brown, its manager, the most conspicuous object on the grounds was the newest greenhouse, 61x400ft. erected by the Lord & Burnham Co. The plans had been completed to install a duplicate of this house in 1918, two more similar ones in 1919, and the final two in 1920, but the war has caused a temporary cessation of the plans in this direction.

So favorably impressed were they with the work of the F. T. D. that James J. Salmon & Son, of Akron, Ohio, although non-members, voluntarily made a contribution of $10 to the association for the general good. Upon suggestion of Secretary Pochelon this money was applied to the S. A. F. publicity fund.

Obituary

Mrs. Joseph Koppelman

Mrs. Joseph Koppelman of Providence, R. I. died last week of influenza. She leaves three children and her husband who is senior member of the firm of J. Koppelman & Co., wholesale florists.

Alexander Mead

Alexander Mead, descendant of one of the oldest families of Greenwich, Conn., and senior member of A. Mead & Son, died last Sunday, aged 83. For 60 years he had conducted the florist business. His son, daughter and sister survive him.

The late Theodore Schober

Theodore Schober

The many friends in the trade of Theodore Schober, manager of the Wyncote establishment of the Joseph Heacock Co. will regret to hear of his unexpected death. Mr. Schober died of pneumonia on Oct. 8, in his 45th year. He was unmarried and made his home with his widowed sister at Wyncote. He had been sick only a week. Mr. Schober was the prime mover in establishing palm growing at Wyncote and had made it practically his life's work. He had been with the Joseph Heacock Co. for more than twenty years. He was quiet and unassuming, a man well liked and held in highest esteem by all who knew him. He was an active member of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and was one of the few who seldom missed a regular meeting. Funeral services were held on Sunday Oct. 13.

Charles Brown

Chas. Brown, who for the past 38 years has been a florist in Canton, O., died at his home in that city on Oct. 3, aged 67. He is survived by his wife. He came to Canton 48 years ago and was employed by the late President William McKinley. Ten years later he started in the florist business which has grown to considerable proportions. He was a member of the Canton Lodge F. and A. M., the Knights Templar, Knights of Pythias, K. O. T. M., and the Nordes Order, R. H. K. The funeral services were held Sunday, Oct. 5, in charge of the Masons with internment in Westlawn Cemetery.

Mrs. Brown's intention is to continue the florist business under the direction of Mr. Larson who has been the directing spirit of the establishment for several years. It is rather a singular coincidence that two of Canton's leading florists should pass away within two weeks and be buried on successive Sundays.

A. T. Pollard

Private A. T. Pollard, proprietor of the Pollard Flower Shop in Canton, O., who, on account of joining the Colors, advertised his store for sale in our columns Aug. 24 last, died suddenly at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., on Sunday, Oct. 6., of pneumonia. Private Pollard was connected with the 9th Co., 3d training battalion, 158th Depot Brigade, since Sept. 5. when he was inducted into the service. He had been ill but a week. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pollard, and his brother, Miles Pollard, were at his bedside for a few days preceding his death.

A. T. Pollard started in the florist business at the age of 16, and at 18 years of age he was manager of one of the leading flower stores in Worcester, Mass., where he was born and lived until 1910 when he came to Canton, where he achieved quite a success. Besides his mother and brother he is survived by a sister Miss Lillian Pollard, who is an employee of the Ordnance Department at Washington, D. C.

The funeral was held at Canton, Sunday afternoon, Oct. 13, the delay being caused by the illness of the soldier's mother. The funeral was held from the First Christian church, with interment at Westlawn Cemetery with full military honors, and was attended by representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary and Adcraft clubs and the Canton guards, as well as all soldiers in the city on furloughs. Byron David Halsted

With the passing of Dr. Byron D. Halsted, (on Aug. 28), the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station lost a faithful servant who had won honor, respect and affection from all of his associates. His unremitting search for truth added richly to our knowledge of plant diseases and of plant breeding. A pioneer in the field of mycology, he laid the foundation for much of the present-day information on plant diseases, and on this foundation his colleagues helped him to build effective methods of control. When failing health compelled him later to give up work with the microscope he devoted himself assiduously to the study of heredity and environment as factors in plant production, and, in spite of bodily suffering, retained his interest in his chosen work until the very last. Had he lived until Feb. 1, 1919, he would have completed thirty years of service with the New Jersey Station.

Born in Venice, Cayuga County, New York, on June 7, 1852, Dr. Halsted lost his parents in early childhood and was brought up by relatives. He graduated from the Michigan Agricultural College in 1871, but remained there for two years longer in order to complete his graduate work for the master's degree. He then taught school for two years, entered Harvard in 1875, and was not only the first of Dr. Farlow's students at Harvard, but also the first to take a doctor's degree in cryptogamic botany. This degree was granted to him in 1878.

Two years after leaving Harvard he became managing editor of the American Agriculturist and remained in journalistic work until 1885. In that year the late Prof. Charles E. Bessey, on being elected Professor of Botany at the University of Nebraska, nominated Dr. Halsted as his successor at the Iowa Agricultural College. After a teaching experience of four years at Ames, he was called in 1889 to Rutgers College to become the Botanist of the Experiment Station and Professor of Botany in the College.

Dr. Halsted was associate editor of the Bulletin of the Torrey Botanical Club from 1890 until 1893, and of Systematic Flora of North America since 1895. He won the silver medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1877. The scientific societies in which he held membership included the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Science (president 1897-1899); the Botanical Society of America (president 1900-1901); and the Society of Plant Morphology and Physiology. He was the author of "The Vegetable Garden," 1888; "Farm Conveniences," 1888; "A Century of Agricultural Weeds," 1891; and of numerous technical papers in bulletins, reports and journals.

Dr. Halsted was a very enthusiastic botanical collector and a great many new species were brought to light as a result of his enthusiastic work. He described a number of new species and sent many more to Ellis, Everhart and other mycologists. There is scarcely a mycological collection of any importance in the country that does not contain specimens collected by Dr. Halsted. He was among the first to report the introduction of several foreign diseases into America.

New York Florists' Club Meeting

$40,000 Subscribed to the Fourth Liberty Loan

A regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held at the Grand Opera House building, Eighth ave. and 23d st., fully in keeping with the times, must be chronicled.

It was said that the majority of the seventy odd men present, had, before coming to the meeting, bought Liberty Bonds to their utmost. Corporal J. A. Murphy of the Canadian Army, however, convinced a large number of the members that they hadn't "touched bottom" by many a dollar.

Addressing the club for a full hour, in a style which did not mince matters and which has become familiar to most of us these days, Corporal Murphy told of life in the trenches with all its horrors; of men going for days without food; of German cruelty in all its diabolical phases. All of this, related by a man who had been through it and would, in all probability, walk with a stick for the remainder of his life, brought home to his hearers the absolute necessity of further subscriptions and the members, although far from making up a large attendance, responded quickly and freely. The Lord & Burnham Co., through Thos. Boothe de Forest, opened the subscription by an offer of $5000 providing the amount was matched by those present. This was quickly accomplished, as was an additional $15,000 offered by the said company. A list of the subscriptions taken up at the meeting follows:

Lord & Burnham Co., $20,000; the N. Y. Florists' Club, $4000; H. Gessner and John Scheepers each $2000; Traendly & Schenck, $1500; The Farmers' Bureau, Inc., Gustav M. Koppel, Joseph J. Levy, H. M. Robinson & Co., Joseph Margolis, Charles Robinson, Florence R. Clarke and the Duckham-Pierson Co., each $1000; E. T. Hart, $800; Roman J. Irwin, $650; W. A. Manda, Henry Weston, August Rolker & Sons, Charles H. Totty Co., Schloss Bros., Ribbons Inc., Julius R. Ross and E. M. Ives, each $500.

J. Walter Reimels and Maurice Levy, each $350; Joseph A. Manda, $250; William N. Hackland, Margaret R. Kelly, Leo Klein, Albert Baron and A. Vlachos, each $200; Lizzie D. Baruch, Philip H. Cox, P. W. Popp, Milton Selinka, Charles Schwake, Robert Seligman, A. J. Manda, Cyrus Price, Stelcanos Chresomal, L. D. Entsch, William Manheimer, M. Vlachos, James Hughes, Herman Lee, and Jean Darmi, each $100; T. W. Langan, Louis T. Rodman, Ada Luxenberg, John J. Gunther, Viola Cohn, Speros Nanekas, Peter Coronges, Alura M. Beardsley,

Corporal J. A. Murphy

Anargeros Bros., William H. Long, N. A. Doganges, Chris E. Zervakes, and Christatos & Ballas, each $50. The total amount subscribed was $46,550.

For his work, which was so much appreciated, Corp. Murphy was given a standing vote of thanks, a generous supply of flowers and a trip home by auto.

During the regular business of the meeting, Pres. Schenck told of the work of the committee on the Liberty Loan having been interfered with because of the sudden rush of business experienced last week, although one of the committee, F. H. Henry of Henry & Lee, has been responsible for the securing of subscriptions to the extent of $40,000.

C. H. Totty and August Rolker, in talks regarding the exclusion of plant importations, urged every member to write a letter of protest to Washington, addressed to William F. Gude, the Washington representative of the S. A. F. and O. H. Further efforts to secure a less drastic bill will be made in a conference at Washington this week, which President Totty, J. D. Eisele of Dreer's, and others who care to, will attend.

E. R. Hanft, 325 Fifth ave., whose nomination was pending was duly elected to membership. A. J. Radice, 55 West 26th st., was proposed for membership and usual course taken.

It was generally considered that the exhibits for the evening were noteworthy. The following awards were announced:

W. A. Manda, 125 varieties of Tradescantia, silver medal; collection of Hexinia Sallieii, highly commended; Dracæna Rothiana and Anthericum Mandaiana, cultural certificate; Dahlia Mandaiana, awarded club certificate last year, vote of thanks. Babylon Dahlia Gardens, Babylon, L. I., collection of Dahlias, vote of thanks. G. Schlegel, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn, S. G. Millosy, gdr., new Dahlia, Mrs. George Schlegel, awarded preliminary certificate last year, vote of thanks. P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y., collection of Dahlias, silver medal; five vases of Gladioli, vote of thanks. Chas. H. Totty, Madison N. J., vase of new Rose Premier, vote of thanks.

W. A. Manda in giving his reasons for his fine display of Tradescantia said that he believed it particularly advisable to emphasize home production at this time, so as to lessen the effects of the coming plant exclusion. Mr Manda further urged the growers to make every effort possible to keep all houses running by gathering wood and other suitable fuel material. There are ways and means as Mr. Manda indicated in his story of the wife of a former European orchid grower, who had saved her husband's plants during the Franco-Prussian war by burning up everything at hand, even the household furniture.

Secretary John Young, in paying tribute to the F. T. D. as a live organization with a big purpose, commented on the manner in which the recent two-day convention at Cleveland had been conducted, and made mention of the support given by the F. T. D. Association to the national advertising campaign. He said he would be glad to make personal calls on retailers desiring information regarding the workings of the F. T. D.

Resolutions on the death of James Dean and A. V. D. Snyder were read and the Secretary was instructed to pass these along to the families concerned. It was also agreed that resolutions of sympathy be drawn up in connection with the deaths of Louis Schmutz, Jr., C. B. Weathered Jr., and C. G. Roebling.

Dayton, O.

Dismissal of the bankruptcy petition filed against the Miami Floral Co of Dayton, O., by the Schloss Brothers Ribbon Co., has been directed by R. E. Cowden, referee in bankruptcy, who virtually holds the plaintiffs did not present sufficient evidence to win their contention. The defendant company, due to losses sustained last Fall by heavy frosts, has been in the hands of a receiver.

Market Report

Oct. 15.—Beginning with Monday of this week there has been an increased supply of flowers, especially of Roses. Prices have dropped somewhat. Am. Beauty Roses are moderately plentiful and prices are much the same as last week. Hybrid Teas are of unusually good quality and much more abundant. Prices for 9-in. roses are now 4c. apiece; other grades correspondingly higher. The biggest demand is for short stemmed Roses. The bright, crisp weather of the past week has improved both supply and quality. Prices are 8c. and 10c. each. The supply of Cattleyas is moderate and there is a good call at $7 to $9 per doz. Asters from out of doors still sell well at 4c to 10c. Some out of doors Gladioli sell at 4c. each 'Mums are much more plentiful than last week and many more colors are now selling from $2 to $4 per doz. Wild flowers of almost any kind and color find ready sale. Asparagus is in good supply and is cleaned up daily. Chrysanthemum plants are the only plants being offered. Ferns, Crotons and Dracænas are selling well. R. C.

Toledo, O.

Early frosts with a combination of unusual conditions brought about a situation beyond parallel in this city. With hardly any flowers on hand, and none to be obtained came the climax of perplexity with an abnormal demand for funeral work that has persisted for two weeks. Florists had the choice of either turning down orders or relaxing their usual standards for a time by using weeds, artificial flowers, Oak and Galax leaves. Practically no out-door flowers were to be had except those that could be cut for the asking. Roses were in short crop and there were scarcely any Carnations. Too early for 'Mums. Under the circumstances retailers divided up available stock. It was surprising the artistic pieces that were turned out. The public soon became aware of conditions and was satisfied easily with a few flowers. Retailers who have been slow to raise prices to a profitable level have been forced by market conditions to get better prices and to their surprise hear no complaints from the public.

Gathered Here and There

In the present Liberty Bond campaign this city was again the first of its size to go over the top, its second consecutive victory. The organization here is doubtless the best in the land for on the day of the campaign every individual had been solicited to buy bonds by house to house canvassers, a special sales committee to sell more wealthy persons and a corporation group of salesmen to sell corporations. Every prominent florist in the city has been taking active part.

Schramm Brothers have had a run of funeral work for the past two weeks such as they have never before experienced. They have turned out many Galax and Magnolia wreaths but have been chary of the use of artificial flowers.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman, of "The Flowers," has been swamped with funeral work and like many other florists has been having difficulty in obtaining enough suitable stock to fill orders.

Helen Patten, though busy with funerals, is never too busy to neglect the Red Cross in which she is an untiring worker. She is closely identified with every movement of patriotic women in this city for helping soldiers and to win the war.

Frank Kaminski, Lagrange st. florist, has sold his interest in the business to his nephew and has retired. He had no complaint to make about business.

Krueger Brothers, Toledo's largest Rose growers have separated. Will Krueger has taken over the growing end, while Henry has taken charge of the retail store at Clark and Nevada. The other brother took a cash consideration for his interest. F. M. S.

Over-Propagation Makes Poor Dahlias

My Dahlias made a very soft sappy growth in late Spring and early Summer due to the wet weeather. In August the extreme heat simply cooked this soft growth, and in many cases burned the leaves to a crisp.

In the vicinity of Boston and Providence, where cool nights and damp sea breezes are usual the plants were not so badly effected. To the south through New Jersey, etc., the plants were affected worse, in many cases completely ruining them.

While the plants were in this condition the white fly descended on them in clouds checking all new growth. I then sprayed three times with a strong solution of Black Leaf 40 and soap. After the second application (in the meantime we had a good rain) the plants showed a marked improvement. After the third the fly seemed to disappear almost entirely. The plants started to make a fine new growth. While they did not come along soon enough for the exhibitions, we have had good blossoms in the past two weeks.

I cannot agree with Mr. Fuld that the white fly was to blame for the trouble, but I do think it held the plants in check after the heat finished its work.

For several years I have noticed plants with stunted growth, and curled, yellow leaves, of which Mr. Fuld speaks. I believe this due to some root trouble; for I have taken a clump, which appeared to be perfectly healthy and was healthy the previous season, made several divisions of it, placed these in different parts of the garden, and in many cases have seen every one of these divisions come up stunted, the plants of other varieties surrounding them being perfectly healthy.

I have also tried these roots a second season with the same results, it being practically impossible to eradicate after once getting into the stock. These stunted plants are often covered with flies, in fact, seem to form a breeding place for the fly. Is it not a fact that insects attack unhealthy plants of any sort in preference to healthy ones? I believe one of the greatest causes of this trouble is over-propagation from cuttings, the stock not getting its needed rest and thereby weakening it. I think we are blaming this small insect for many troubles by no means due to it.

C. Louis Alling.

Rose Buds Ruined

The buds of my entire Rose crop, consisting of 3000 plants, including Ophelia, Hadley and Columbia, are being eaten by some insect; as soon as a new bud shows itself it is ruined. I am sending you a few of the defective buds and a small vial containing some of these pests. My opinion is that they are thrips, but as I have never before been troubled with such pests I do not know just how to combat the trouble. The plants in general look fine and healthy. I fumigate every other day with Tobacco dust and Cayenne pepper; also I cut all the new buds but do not seem to be able to overcome the trouble.

I had four benches of old stock and planted my new Roses before cleaning and starting the old ones. Perhaps the trouble began from these old, rested Ophelias. I shall appreciate any advice you can give.—J. M., Ohio.

—It is impossible from the description and the condition of the samples received to state what is the trouble, but as the plants are healthy and growing well it should be comparatively easy to remedy the trouble.

Thrips will cause the buds to come deformed, but they do not eat off the buds in the manner that grasshoppers do. Fumigating with Tobacco will destroy thrips and I would suggest doing this for three nights in succession and then omitting it for two weeks and watch the result.

There are good grades of Tobacco dust sold for this purpose. Some varieties of the dust are not as good as other sorts and if used too freely may cause deformed flowers. The various nicofume papers sold are safer to use for this purpose. Ophelia often produces a number of deformed buds, especially on the strong growth, or if they are allowed to become too dry at the root. Cut off all deformed buds to the first good eye at once and you will get a new crop of flowers about Thanksgiving. If the trouble persists consult your nearest agricultural college experiment station. Eben Holmes.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Never in the history of the Pittsburgh cut flower business have flowers been so scarce and in such demand. This is partly due to many deaths. No florist can get enough flowers to fill his orders. Price is no object as anything will sell. Lilies have advanced to $20 per 100, and Am. Beauty Roses from $35 to $60 per 100. Roses are selling from $4 to $15 per 100. Carnations at $4. A few small Gladioli are coming. They clean up quickly at $4 per 100. A small shipment of Asters received one day last week sold for as much as a large shipment at the glut period. Shipments of Dahlias helped out, but many customers were disappointed and many did not get their requirements. Prices, $8 to $12 per 100. Yellow and pink 'Mums have sold at high prices. Ordinarily they would lie around at 10c. to 12c., but 25c does not seem too high now. Evergreens of all descriptions clean up well. We hope for more stock next week. Any grower who has stock to offer can realize fancy prices in Pittsburgh.

City Notes

H. L. Thompson, of Rochester, Pa., has been ill with pneumonia the past week.

De Forest W. Ludwig, B. L. Elliott, A. E. Gibson, E. J. McCallum and Harry Ackerman attended the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland. They say the meeting was the best ever held by any of the florists' associations. They saw few flowers in Cleveland.

A meeting was called last Monday by the growers of Pittsburgh district to form plans to present to the local fuel administrator in regard to obtaining more fuel for the coming Winter.

Nick Keonis was called to Chicago last week on important business. He says the flower market is as bad there as in Pittsburgh.

The Pittsburgh market is fortunate in having a grand supply of fancy Dahlias.

The McCallum Co. has issued a fine new catalog which goes into the mail this week.

Pete Harris has been on the sick list.

Edw. Blind is cutting fine white 'Mums and good Lilies.

Development of Wall Garden

An innovation in park gardening under construction at West End Park will be completed in time for the "Flowers that bloom in the Spring." Under supervision of Superintendent Geo. W. Burke of the Bureau of Parks, and Foreman Neal McCallum of the West End Park, the stone foundation is being laid for a wall garden along Herschel and Kerr sts., at the northwest corner. The dimensions of the wall are planned to conform with the grade of the streets, the highest point being 11ft. at the junction of the two, and the lowest 7ft. The primary function of this new wall garden is to supply natural conditions essential for the perfect development of the alpine plants, the roots of which are finicky in requiring moisture rather than real water. This requirement is supplied through moisture which exudes from a stone wall, the formation of which permits the rain to run off instead of being absorbed. Owing to the number of so-called alpine flowers, remarkable variety in coloring and formation is shown in the blooms, the long list including Edelweiss, Cheddar, Scotch, Alpine Fire, Moss and Marden Pinks, Bindweeds, Candytuft, Campanula, Cinquefoil, Columbines, Flax, Gromwell, Harebells, Iris, Houseleek, Jacob's Ladder, Lilies, Lungwort, London Pride, Loosestrife, Geraniums, the true Geranium, Sandworts in variety, Primrose, Rock Cress, Gold Dust, Live-forever, and Stonecrop in variety.

A quantity of seed has already been planted, the remainder being in readiness for the Spring flowering. Mr. McCallum collected these seeds largely from Highland Park and other botanical parks of Rochester, N. Y., Highland Park having the finest collection of hardy shrubs in the United States, with the one exception of the Arnold Arboretum in connection with Harvard University. While the West End Park is a city tract, it is distinctive. It includes 17½ acres, 10 of which are laid out by Mr. McCallum to represent an old fashioned English garden. Within the park with its picturesque setting, overlooking in the distance the Ohio Valley, is the largest collection of herbs and medieval plants in Western Pennsylvania, with many of the old time English posies.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

Never at this season have conditions been so difficult as at present. The supply of flowers is far below normal, on account of the unseasonably cold, dark weather, and prices on all flowers have soared to meet the increased funeral demand. There have been few social functions, with the exception of an unostentatious wedding or two, and with the ban now placed on all public meetings by the Indiana State Board of Health, from Oct. 13 to 21, there is not likely to be much activity.

The quality of all greenhouse flowers is excellent, except in such cases where flowers have been cut too close to supply the demand. 'Mums are a leading feature, some excellent varieties in pink and white being offered, although yellow 'Mums have been the largest yet shown. Pompons are of very good quality, although they are not yet as plentiful as double varieties. Prices on Carnations are higher than usual, considering size of the blooms, and length of stems. Cattleyas are becoming more plentiful, and are increasing steadily as the season advances. Roses are in perhaps the greatest demand of all. While the quality is good, they are showing the effects of being cut too close. Columbia is proving a winner. It commands as high a price as Russell. Few Easter Lilies are being offered, and stock commands high prices. The supply of L. rubrum is also short. Some good 'Mum plants being offered sell quickly at substantial prices. The Aster season is over, only a few stragglers coming into the market. Yellow Daisies, Snapdragon, Miniature Roses, and Sweet Alyssum are being used for fine work. Greens are in fair supply, but there has been a tremendous demand for them for funeral work.

Echoes from the Trade

Private Walter A. Knecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Knecht, died Oct. 12 at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

Judge and Mrs. W. J. Vesey have gone to Chicago, Ill., and vicinity, on a week's motor trip.

H. R. Smalley, Allen county agricultural agent, has gone to Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., to attend the 21st annual meeting of the agricultural extension workers of Indiana.

Were it not for funeral work occasioned by the prevailing epidemic, the florist business would suffer considerably from the closing order sent out by the Indiana State Board of Health, regarding all public meetings.

Large Unaka 'Mums are attracting attention at the store of the Freese Floral Co.

Although cutting a large quantity of 'Mums and Roses, the A. J. Lanternier Co. was compelled to refuse orders last week as not enough stock could be received to fill them. D. B.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are in fair supply. They, together with everything else in the market, are cleaning up as fast as they come in and many more could be sold by the wholesalers if they could be obtained. The Carnation supply is still very short. Dahlias have been fairly plentiful and have been meeting with an exceptionally good market. Some excellent Harrisii Lilies may be had. 'Mums are becoming more plentiful daily. They find a good market. Cosmos is selling well. Single Violets and Pansies may be had.

Ferns have been rather scarce during the past fortnight. The demand for them has been so heavy that the regular shipments are unable to take care of needs. At the end of last week Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri as well as Smilax ran short.

R. Witterstaetter was taken ill with influenza but, fortunately is now recovering.

William Shafer has been sending some excellent Lilies to C. E. Critchell. They are helping out greatly in the present scarcity of flowers.

The Woman's Motor Corps, of which Miss M. M. Carroll is a member, is busy with Liberty Loan work.

Recent visitors were N. O. Selby, Middletown, O.; James Frost, Greenville, O.; J. R. Goldman, Middletown, O.; Fred Rupp, Lawrenceberg, Ind.; J. T. Herdegen, Aurora, Ind., and Andrew Hauge, Fairmount, W. Va.

National Publicity Campaign

The completion of our campaign fund of $50,000 is lagging—lagging at a time when interest should be most intense. It is not due to lack of enthusiasm, for the florists who have subscribed are most enthusiastic, and we know that this feeling also extends to many who have not subscribed. Those who have ignored our appeal must admit that the 800 or more members who are loyal to our trade interests are worthy of commendation without limit—the volunteers who in an emergency have gone "over the top," some of them as many as three times. The future trade is safe in such hands.

It is not too late to join these protectors of our industry. They will welcome any who have not yet subscribed. This campaign is welding bonds of friendship among the best florists and the best are those who can look over their own shoulders, who place their calling squarely in front of them, unprejudiced by petty jealousy, and who are dominated by that altruistic spirit which makes for the good of all rather than the individual.

Where do you stand, Mr. Reader? Are you with the protectors, or are you an onlooker? The latter, is it because you are careless, content to see the other fellow passing out good money in order that you may with him benefit in the excellent results promised by the campaign? Or is it because you have not realized what this publicity movement means to you or your business? If the latter, won't you just drop the secretary a line with the request that he give you particulars and send you material which will enable you to see for yourself that you can become a working factor in this organized effort to increase the sale of flowers, and thus enable our industry to weather the storm threatening it. Yours is only a pro rata help. If your business is small, a large contribution is not expected. Give what you think you can afford, even $5 a year. It will show your good spirit, and your interest in what is good for the business from which you make your living. Do this now, without delay.

The most extraordinary market conditions existing in the past 20 years have been prevalent throughout the past ten days. Markets in the big centers ran wild and the sky seemed to be the limit for the prices asked. In fact wholesale prices went so high that retailers in some of the surrounding small towns could not ask a high price commensurate with that paid. Good Columbia and Russell Roses wholesaled up to $40 per 100 and retailed up to $9 per doz. Carnations were readily taken at $6 per 100 and retailed at $1.50 to $2 per doz.

Those whose credit was weak or who were not regular buyers in the big markets were cut off without ceremony, and those favored with orders certainly had to pay. It is a pleasure, however, to think that the florist business both wholesale and retail has been forced on a higher basis. Let us hope that it will remain so. Growers and storemen in the smaller cities were soon cut short so the larger dealers were appealed to to fill orders on any consideration. The demand for funeral flowers came from every small hamlet and city over the State. The condition has been eased somewhat but will no doubt remain lively for some time.

Chrysanthemums which have wholesaled up to $6 per doz. are appearing in larger quantities and will do more to relieve the market than anything else. Even the green goods market was overturned so not a single fern leaf or bunch of Asparagus was obtainable for three days.

Herman Piel and the families of Chas. Ealand and John Grande have been on the sick list. Mr. Grande has managed his business alone in consequence.

Clarence Thomas and Irwin Bertermann have returned from Cleveland, O., well satisfied with the good work accomplished by the F. T. D. I. B.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

One sharp frost and all the outdoor flowers are gone so there is a marked shortage of all kinds of stock. Couple this with a heavy funeral demand and the situation is just right to mark quotations one or two notches higher. As this has been done prices are good for the time of year. Another good item is that quotations on custom funeral work have advanced 25 per cent. (that is, meaning the agents in small surrounding towns) and now the practice is that the making up and greens are charged 30 per cent. extra, so if one buys 2 doz. Carnations or Roses for a bouquet 30 per cent. is added on to cover expense of green, making up and packing. Little things like these help carry the overhead expenses nicely, and no kicks to speak of result. S. B.

Florist Club Meeting

A good attendance and many interesting subjects characterized the Oct. 3d meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club. An appropriation of about $1000 was made for newspaper and street car sign advertising to push 'Mums. It was also decided to have an exhibit and a discussion on 'Mums from grower, wholesaler and retailer at next meeting. A theater party is also planned by the entertainment committee.

Market Condition

Never has such a shortage in flowers been experienced as the past week; the demand was likewise unprecedented. Carnations and 'Mums are late with practically none coming in and not enough Roses to meet the demand. Many orders had to be turned down. Retailers likewise suffered, having refused many orders that could not be filled for funeral work. Many substitutes for flowers were used to relieve the shortage—Magnolia wreath, Cycas, Oak spray and artificial flowers. With 'Mums coming in soon the market will again become normal although most growers look for a shortage for some time. Some nice Cyclamen plants are coming in and selling on sight. Plants in general, such as rubbers, ferns, Pandanus, Crotons, find a ready sale. C. C. P.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

Advertising is Keynote of Business Success

Herman T. Knoble of Cleveland, O., discusses newspaper advertising—Condemns, illustrates and ridicules haphazard and bad methods—Emphasizes and outlines good ones—Throws sidelight on store conditions. Insists on having none but well posted people answer telephone and wait on patrons.

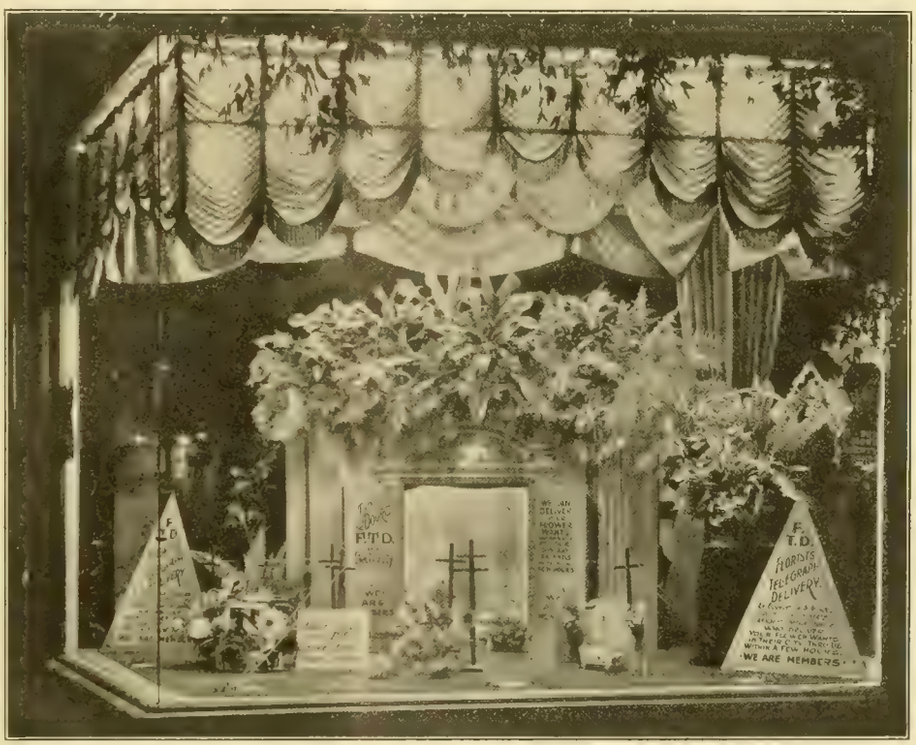
When I was asked to address the F. T. D. convention on "Publicty," I figured that in order to make the proposition easiest from the standpoint of analysis, I should secure samples of advertising from the members. Among the numerous samples received was some wonderful copy, some very poor, but most of it good; I then proceeded to prepare my address.

What are we trying to imply in the public mind with the phrase, "Say It with Flowers"? Briefly I might say, encourage them to the further and greater use of flowers. Let us go about it in this way: When we make up our minds to go in business, we analyze the location, the city, our finances, and in general all of the conditions that would go to help us succeed in our undertaking.

We will take it for granted that each and every one of us is a thorough artisan and mechanic and knows his business well. We will also grant that each of us could sell customers coming into our stores all that they are willing to buy. With all of these conditions assured, there is then only one thought in our minds; namely, to get the prospects to sell to. How is that best accomplished? I maintain that advertising is absolutely and unqualifiedly the keynote of success, really true success, I mean, in this and kindred businesses.

When you analyze this from that angle, it is manifest that something must have stimulated you to seek this true success, so I will read you what spurred me on to advertising.

I remember distinctly when I went into business, among the many questions which I asked myself, this particular one struck me most forcibly, "Where would you buy flowers if the occasion presented itself, and what would you ask for when you went to your florist?" I had frankly to say to myself, "I do not know of any florist in this city, and I hardly know what to ask for." Being a student of salesmanship, and knowing that advertising is salesmanship written, I answered this question in this manner: "Why don't you tell all of the people of Cleveland where you are, what you are, what you have for sale, what it costs, how to order, how you handle the charge account, and how you will make the delivery?" In other words, I decided to advertise my business to the inhabitants of Cleveland, because I was satisfied it should pay, providing I carried out in the actual workings of the business what I told them in the written word.



F. T. D. window by Knoble Bros., Cleveland, O., which won the first prize of a $100 Fourth Liberty Loan Bond, offered by the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.

Many Ways of Advertising

Advertising can be done in many ways. For the sake of analysis I will name a few: newspaper, direct-by-mail, billboards, street cars, window displays, motion picture theaters, location, store arrangements, deliveries, and social contact. I am going to confine myself particularly to newspaper advertising. When President Gude asked me to discuss advertising, and in order to make the proper kind of display for this convention, suggested that I write every member of the F. T. D. to submit samples of advertising, I felt that I would be well repaid for the effort. It gave me an opportunity to analyze the advertising of some 600 retailers. Studying these ads. closely revealed to me the fact, very much to my regret, that there are none too many in this business who have given this subject serious consideration. The majority in this particular business do not take this subject of advertising sufficiently seriously. They go about it in a haphazard sort of manner as though it has absolutely no bearing upon the ultimate success of their business. Now advertising is as essential in the conduct of the business as the buying of elegant flowers or as the payment and settlement of bills, the make up of the store as it should be, and many of the items that enter into any other successful business. But we are prone to forget that. We think that advertising is one of the small things. This is a mistake. I do not criticize destructively in this connection. Let me suggest that any criticism is only intended constructively, and does not apply to many of those whose advertising is here exhibited.

Wrong Methods

It seems that many of our business men take care of the watering of the plants, the changing of the arrangement in their stores and the filling of orders, while they leave the office boy or delivery boy to do the advertising. That is a lamentable condition which really ought to be corrected. Worse still, they turn it over to the average advertising solicitor and say, "Here, John, write an ad. Give me a good showing, and see that the copy is fine." This is all wrong. The average advertising solicitor comes into your store or mine and says: "We are going to run a special page to feature a lot of special things. I know you are busy, so let me write you some nice advertising copy and put it in this paper which is going to be an elegant thing." You say, "All right." So he starts off with something like this: "Flowers are most divine. They create a delightful atmosphere. Truly and really they should be in all homes," etc., etc., —something along that line, and perhaps not really as good as that. Nine times out of ten it is a lot worse. Before he gets through he has exhausted the dictionary, used up a lot of big words whose meaning he doesn't know, and those whom he addresses understand still less; yet he expects the layman to read that and be stimulated through it to buy flowers. That is not advertising at all. It is simply a vehicle through which he hopes to take your money and give you nothing in return.

The average newspaper man would prefer not to take your advertising under such circumstances because he knows he is not in a position to give you a return for the expenditure. I think that the majority of good business men know that an investment of that character is the poorest one that can be made.

To illustrate: If a customer comes to your store, would any of you as the proprietor or manager of that store think it advisable to send the porter to wait on that customer, or would you think it advisable to go yourself, or ask your best clerk? You know that when a customer comes you use every effort to sell him what you have, at a profit, and satisfy him. You know too that to send the porter to wait on this customer would be a serious mistake. Then why delegate the writing of the copy for your advertisements to the newspaper solictor, the truck driver or the porter? Each case would be equally ridiculous. Advertising should be the most carefully thought out and planned unit of all the units that go to make up a retailer's business.

Men and women, take this suggestion seriously into consideration. Those of you who have never done any advertising follow this simple suggestion: Go back to your store and sell yourself a box of flowers for a sick friend, or a plant to be used in your home, or anything else that you have, and as soon as you have made that sale to yourself, write the entire transaction verbatim on paper! You will be surprised to see what an excellent advertising manager you really are. That is all there is to advertising. The idea of clothing your advertisements in flowery language is all bunk. You don't use flowery language to your customers, so you should not use it in the newspapers. Moreover, it is equally wrong to use slang, localisms, or funnyisms in your ads. None of these have any place in a well constructed advertisement. You wouldn't use them to your customers coming into the store, why should you attempt to use them to your anticipated customers all over the city?

Care Needed in Arrangement

You cannot be too careful in the arrangement of your advertisements. Tell the people exactly what you would tell them if they came into your store and stood before you. The only precaution that you should observe is that you should be just a little more careful in the selection of your words. You know that often an oral deliverance does not sound so well the next morning when it is printed. Therefore, you must be careful in the selection of the words you employ in an advertisement. The writing of the advertisement is not a hocus-pocus, legerdemain proposition; it is simply an effort to repeat on a little more careful scale and on paper, the same thing you do when your customer comes into your store. If you will tell the people what you have for sale, how much it costs, why they ought to have it, and how you can get it to them, they will spend their money and you will get returns. But you must be sure that you have the right kind of an advertisement.

Essentials for Success in Advertising

To be successful in advertising, many things are absolutely essential, let me name a few of them. See that your windows are washed every day and properly arranged, occasionally with some special added attractions, plants well selected and carefully watered. Keep your store scrupulously clean, the jardinières and other things in elegant condition. Change the water in your flower jars in the cooler at least four times a week. Be prompt in sending out invoices, careful in delivering orders when promised. If you have a conservatory attached to the store, keep it in decent shape, the plants in healthy condition. See that the delivery euipment is clean and in good repair. The flowers that you handle should be the best. They need not be the most expensive varieties; the shorter and cheaper grades are just as well in many cases.

Instruct Your Telephone Operator

Be extremely cautious in answering the telephones. Above all have those parties entrusted with the telephone calls thoroughly acquainted with the business and its workings, so they are in a position to talk intelligently to customers. If there is any one thing that gets me "peeved," it is when I call up a place and the reply is "Hello! Well?" or something equally commonplace, monotonous or nonsensical. In our place we insist upon the operator answering, "This is Knoble Brothers." Then the party who is calling knows who he is talking to and is sure he has the one he wants. When customers 'phone and get the proper kind of reply, they will favorably remember your place, because so few in this business and in the world in general really pay attention to such details, so those who do are recognized as being just a little better than their neighbors. They stand out prominently over all the rest, and will reap returns proportionately. Let everybody feel that he is interested in the place. Let him think and breathe advertising with you; have extra copies struck off of the advertisements and distribute these around to the employees so they may see what you are doing, and keep in touch with the work.

With an institution such as I have just described you are bound to become successful and if you will prepare the matter which goes into your newspaper advertisements with the same caution that you wait on your customers personally, the circuit of success is assured.

Hallowe'en

Thursday, Oct. 31, Hallowe'en, will soon be here. Hallowe'en window scenes in flower stores are now in order, and will remind the public of the approach of this evening of pranks and merry making parties, and a sign, "Hallowe'en Flowers," will suggest the use of flowers on that evening. Meantime, you can devise several ways of using these flowers in a manner appropriate to the occasion. If you will read Robert Burns's poem "Hallowe'en," it will suggest material and arrangements for your window scene.

Impressions of the F. T. D. Convention

By JAMES McLAUGHLIN

The annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association in Cleveland, Oct. 8 and 9, afforded the writer his first opportunity for viewing that enterprising body when assembled in convention. Perhaps the term convention does not properly apply—business meeting being more applicable, because at this gathering the spirit of business was manifest even to the minutest detail. How well indeed is the association officered! Notwithstanding the presence of so many able men in the ranks, his tact, zeal, diplomacy and personal popularity make Wm. F. Gude the ideal president. And the gavel is particularly well wielded in the hand of Vice-president Philip Breitmeyer, whose knowledge of parliamentary practice and whose devotion to the F. T. D. principle are decided assets to the association. Secretary Pochelon's interest in the work amounts to a complete obsession. No single person has done more for the association—the history of the man is the history of the organization; he is its greatest enthusiast; its most indefatigable worker; its safety valve in times of danger. The continuation of this triumvirate in office is an excellent comment upon the intelligence and discernment of the rank and file of the F. T. D.

It is worthy of note that the men connected with the F. T. D. are those who have achieved a goodly measure of success, which, to the writer's mind, is a cogent reason why practically all florists favorably situated should join. Successful business men are worthy of emulation.

The Canadian delegation, headed by Geo. M. Geraghty, was indeed a clean-cut bunch of fellows, all of whom took a part in the proceedings. There were ten of them, which speaks well of the interest of our northern neighbors in the work of the F. T. D.

"Say It with Flowers" and "Buy More Liberty Bonds" were the watchwords of the convention, the latter vying with the former in all the addresses. The S. A. F. publicity campaign slogan is a business producer and cannot be given too much prominence, while the purchase of Liberty bonds by florists is a fitting recognition of the generous treatment accorded them by Uncle Sam in the dark days of war.

There were few women present. Women members of the organization, as well as wives of florists, were conspicuous by their absence. Entertainment was also tabooed. Action was the keynote of the entire meeting, which is proof positive that the F. T. D. is strictly a business organization, convening annually for the discussion of business matters—a condition that augurs well for the future of the profession.

The Publicity Display

That florists are more generally using printers' ink was borne out by the display of specimens of individual house advertising shown upon bulletin boards extending around the entire convention room. Types of publicity employed effectively by F. T. D. members throughout the country were exhibited in a manner that attracted much attention, inviting both comparison and discussion. This was one of the many features of the meeting, the study of which alone was worth a day's journey. More than ever before, wideawake florists realize that the expansion of their business is largely dependent upon the intelligent conveyance of their message to hitherto untouched portions of the public which, if done in a convincing manner, is bound to result in substantial profit. There is some expense involved, of course, but commensurate with the benefit derived it is negligible.

The F. T. D. Windows

Thanks to the valuable prizes offered by Messrs. Kennicott Bros. Co., Chas. H. Grakelow and Sam Seligman, window trimming among Cleveland florists was given great impetus. The entries for the prizes were numerous, but, in addition, practically every retail florist in the city displayed an F. T. D. window. The Kennicott Bros. Co. prize of $100 was very justly awarded to Knoble Bros., whose attractive window clearly illustrated to the public mind the aims and objects of the association. The J. M. Gasser Co. showed the proposed new F. T. D. emblem done on a mammoth scale, the immense globe being covered with green Oak and the continents composed solidly of yellow Immortelles. Great white plaster of paris wings were attached, and the cluster at the base was made of Russell Roses, the whole being assisted much by beautifully lettered signs. It was an eloquent plea for the new emblem. This window drew the Chas. H. Grakelow silver cup. The Smith & Fetters Co. had in one of its usually good displays advertising the sending of flowers by wire, which won the Sam Seligman prize of $25. Unfortunately, this window was thought too flat for the taking of a photograph that would do it justice. Effective window trimming in the Sixth City has been greatly benefited by the presence of the F. T. D. convention, and without doubt the benefit will endure.

Florists in Moving Pictures

For the first time in their history, Cleveland florists, as well as F. T. D. officials, were given a chance to see themselves as others see them, upon the moving picture screen. This was a card that the Cleveland boys had up their sleeves and, consequently, little was said about it in advance. The original plan was to open the meeting with it, but delay in its preparation compelled its postponement until the opening of the evening session. The idea is novel and is capable of great development. The success of the project is due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. "Mary Pickford" Wilson. It is to be regretted, however, that in its very success lurked certain dangers—it is rumored that such successful men as George Bate and H. P. Merrick are seeking conferences with leading movie magnates.

Floral Decorations

There were no trade displays at the convention but there were some vases of Roses and groups of plants sent in for their decorative effects that are entitled to notice. The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., sent a vase of its superb new Rose Premier, which elicited much favorable comment. Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Ass'n brought a vase or two of the fine Roses for which his house is noted. Through courtesy of Jimmy Karins a choice assortment of Dreer's Crotons were sent in. Kirchner's Palms were banked effectively about the assembly room and Carl Hagenburger's cultivated native Asters graced the luncheon tables. The Friedley Co. and the Naumann Co. also arranged some fine plant displays which added much to the general attractiveness. It is needless to say that the Cleveland Florists' Club is extremely grateful for this kind and thoughtful assistance.

Annual F. T. D. Window Display Assured

Kennicott Bros. Co., of Chicago, have given assurance that at every annual convention there will be F. T. D. window displays, having offered a permanent yearly donation of $100 for that purpose. They request that theirs will always be made the first prize for the best window displays, under condition that not less than ten retailers annually would strive for first honors.

ethical character, and moved the adoption of the following, which was carried by unanimous vote:

We, members of the florist profession assembled in convention at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 9, 1918, desire to express our disapproval as members of the trade, speaking in our collective capacity, of all practices that are unethical and that tend to degrade and lower the standard of florists generally, unbusinesslike practices that we cannot too strongly condemn; and we therefore recommend the appointment of a committee, to be known as the Better Business Committee, which committee shall bring in recommendations on this head.

While the foregoing resolution was of a general character and intended to pave the way for the formation of a definite code of ethics in the trade, it was understood that it also had a personal application which was well known to the members present, many of whom were not slow to express their opinion privately in strong condemnation of the practices referred to.

President Gude later appointed the following committee under this resolution: F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, Ohio; H. G. Dillemuth, Toronto; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.

Original F. T. D. Emblem to be Retained

The committee on "Emblem" was given a unanimous vote of thanks for its "thankless" job in passing upon the many designs submitted. This "proposed" emblem, by the way, was the only film shown on the screens on Tuesday night which did not come in for a round of applause. The committee undoubtedly did its best but all the 187 designs submitted failed in their motive. Then, too, the original design has certainly established itself in the favor of the members.

The committee appointed to award the $50 offered by the association for the best suggestion for its improvement and betterment regretted that so very few members showed an interest therein, the suggestions being quite limited in number and scope. It did its best, however, in concluding to award the prize to the following:

"My suggestion is, offer a prize of $5 or more to each traveling man in the trade for every member he brings into our organization from a town or city in which we are not now represented."

Mr. W. C. Gloeckner, of Albany, N. Y., received the award, he walking up to the platform and showing the president and officers of the F. T. D. his duplicate copy of the above suggestion.

We note that at a subsequent meeting of directors of the F. T. D. this suggestion was not concurred in. Therefore, it will not go into effect.

Savings on Delivery Boxes

Herman P. Knoble's suggestion to save at every point possible brought out the fact that one concern paid its delivery boys two cents for each box returned in good condition. This was a worthwhile saving when it is considered that many florists use $5000 worth of boxes a year. Another member instanced one transaction wherein he saved $24.40 out of $28 on return boxes, paying his delivery men a $3.60 bonus to accomplish this. This same gentleman added: "Most of our losses come through our own carelessness. Due to shortage of labor we are now making four boys do the work which eight did previously. The art of making money lies with yourself."

The Artistic Florist Not Attacked

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Dr. Thomas S. Blair's highly caustic article in the last issue of THE EXCHANGE under the head of the retail department, surely deserves recognition. In the first place it is indeed most unfortunate that the art of floral arangement is not so magnificently patronized and appreciated as any other line of artistic endeavor. This alone accounts for the necessity of the floral artist working toward the fulfillment of his customer's wishes rather than according to his own artistic inspiration, granting, as our worthy Dr. Blair apparently does not, that some florists are so favored. Few shops outside of the largest cities have among their customers people whose artistic appreciation of flowers goes as far down as their pocketbooks. A big majority want to know just how many Roses are to used in their $20 wreath, how much fern, etc., ultimately hardly being satisfied to allow sufficient margin for frame and covering.

The florists of today are working a campaign of education and should be highly commended for their efforts which are being made single handed and without millionaire patrons such as every other branch of art possesses.

With direct reference to our friend's suggestion of plentiful use of green in shades properly blended, let me cite an instance which I observed. The customer, a lady of supposed refinement and good taste, ordered a blanket which was made of Adiantum Croweanum and Farleyense, and a cluster of Cattleyas near the center. It made a beautiful effect and I daresay artistic. Our good lady failed entirely to appreciate the arrangement and could find value in nothing but the Cattleyas. This is only one instance and doubtless not nearly as pointed as experiences many of my colleagues could quote.

Finally, let me say that the league of florists will, I am sure, be highly appreciative of any educational suggestions our good friend may make or persuade his followers to endow us with, but it seems to me very unwise for him to attack a profession concerning which his detailed knowledge is obviously so superficial.

STANLEY G. BARNES.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 13, 1918.

As to Non-Essentials

Last Winter a good many people thought the Government should pick out the businesses not essential to winning the war and shut them up out of hand, so that all capital, labor and material might be applied to essential businesses. Very little study was needed to convince the Government that the matter could not be handled in any such rough-and-ready fashion. Since then it has been steadily expanding its war work, and that expansion has necessarily trenched more and more on businesses that could not engage in directly essential work.

Finally it has come to a point where, without any arbitrary classification by the Government but simply by the expansion of most essential industries, some businesses are pinched almost to the point of extinction. The other day Chairman Baruch, of the War Industries Board, asked Chairman Harding, of the War Finance Corporation, to take up the matter of giving support, in the form of loans or credit, to non-essential businesses in order to keep them alive.

Far from wanting to wipe them out, the Government finds it advisable to intervene for the purpose of keeping them from being wiped out. Because all these so-called non-essential businesses, though they can contribute nothing directly—save taxes—to war work, are inextricably woven into the national fabric of credit and commerce. The Government does not want to start an unraveling of the skein. It does not want a lot of insolvencies. It does not want to raise wholesale doubts about commercial credits. It wants the least possible disorganization of industry, so that when peace comes the wheels can start turning again as smoothly and promptly as possible.—Saturday Evening Post.

New Haven, Conn.

Unprecedented Demand for Dahlias

Owing to the scarcity of other suitable flowers for funeral work, and for bouquets for the military hospitals, the florists of New Haven have been obliged to use Dahlias almost exclusively for the past two weeks. As one prominent florist said, "Every backyard grower has had an opportunity to sell Dahlias this year, the demand far exceeding the supply. In quality there is a wide range, from very ordinary stock, which is selling at about $2.50 per 100, to some unusually fine blooms that sold for $10 per 100 on Saturday last.

Few 'Mums have appeared so far, but some Lilies and Roses were on the market. However, the supply was small and was quickly taken up.

The general report is that there is much funeral work with little to work with. S. H. Moore, for instance, made the comment that it seemed too bad, after all the money this firm has spent for advertising, to have to turn down $250 worth of business in one day for lack of stock.

Most of the growers got their allotment of coal and will make it do by growing mostly 'Mums and closing down the houses after the 'Mums are gone. It is noted that most of the growers have planted the earlier varieties.

John H. Slocombe, who has been ill for nearly a year, is able to be out a little these fine October days.

Dahlias Shown at Meeting

At the last meeting of the New Haven County Hort. Society, held on Oct. 8, a number of choice new Dahlias were exhibited by various local growers. A. E. Doty showed fine seedlings and numerous new varieties. Other handsome displays were made by B. G. Leeper, Frank C. Sheldon and Louis Alling. In spite of the unfavorable conditions the society's exhibition this year was a complete success. Prizes in all classes are being paid in full this week. Otto Unger received a special certificate for a new red hybrid Cactus Dahlia seedling called War.

The topic for discussion at the next meeting will be the white fly, its cause and remedy. An interesting letter on the subject from Richard Vincent, Jr., will be read. Another matter to be discussed is the new trial grounds for Dahlias at Storrs College, in charge of Prof. Fraser.

WM. J. RATHGEBER.

Providence, R. I.

Business is still booming. Never before has such a scarcity of stock existed. The stores are having all the business they can take care of. And for once? the grower is getting something beside "exercise" out of his houses. The market is very short of price cutters.

Ferns and all potted plants sell well at prices above last Fall.

The writer regrets to report the death of Mrs. Koppelman, wife of Joseph Koppelman, wholesale florist of this city, due to influenza. Mr. Koppelman's three children also suffering from influenza are, at the last report, on the road to recovery.

Florists have noticed little change in siness. The past week made their ird successive week of hard work. owers, although a trifle more plenti- l, are still short of the demand, and ices remain high. But flowers are be- ; used sparingly in window and store splays, decorations being mostly potted liage plants in variety. The fruit and getable exhibit scheduled for last ursday at Horticultural Hall was stponed owing to the epidemic. It will obably be held Thursday, Oct. 17, if nditions continue to improve.

Carnations, 'Mums and Violets have made rapid gain in quality and quan- y the past week due to good weather. ey may be found at nearly every flower op. Practically all stores were closed turday in observance of Columbus y, but shops, banks and flower stores mained open their usual hours. The olesale prices for the week were: As- rs, poor in quality, $2 to $4 per 100; rnations $2 to $5; Roses $5 to $20; lies $15; Violets $1.50 per 100; 'Mums .50 to $3 per doz., and Gladioli $1 to per doz. Slocombe's Dahlias

There was received at this office on ednesday of last week a box of hand- me Dahlia blooms from J. H. Slocombe, well known Dahlia originator and ower, of 555 Townsend ave., New Ha- n, Conn.

Though this is reported to be an off ar for Dahlias and the early frosts ve already nipped them in many sec- ons the blooms submitted for inspection ere choice and large. Mr. Slocombe, it ill be recalled, was a winner in several asses in the recent show of the Ameri- n Dahlia Society and the American stitute in New York City, with blooms most all of which were of his own ori- n and introduction shown in competi- on with the best imported and American tised varieties.

To the already long list of the Slo- mbe Dahlia originations, Mr. Slocombe as recently brought out a set of six, mely, Jean Slocombe, a hybrid Cactus, hose large mauve-pink blooms are borne long stems; Edith Slocombe, in the me class, whose purplish garnet flow- s, shaded with maroon are carried on iry stems; Graydon Slocombe, of the me class, a salmon rose bloom shaded pricot; Slocombe's Red, of the decora- ve class, a large velvety red bloom; alph Slocombe also a decorative, a olden yellow carried on long stiff stems, nd Lorna Slocombe, a peony flowered ariety, immense flowers with a scarlet round color, with apricot shadings. The ew originations of Mr. Slocombe may e called the Slocombe Family Six.

Mr. Slocombe has a large number of romising unnamed seedlings also in the everal classes, which are well worth any ahlia lover's inspection, as those who ave viewed Mr. Slocombe's Dahlias this eason readily attest.

The annual Dahlia show of the society was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, on Wed., Oct. 2. There was an excellent display of flowers, fruit and vegetables. Competition was keen in most classes and the quality was up to the usual high standard. The vegetable exhibits aroused special interest. Robt. Jones the efficient manager assisted by Jas. Gladstone are to be congratulated on the excellent arrangement of the show. The judges were Wm. Robertson, Portchester; Geo. Ferguson, Manhasset and John W. Everitt, Glen Cove. John Scheepers & Co., Inc., N. Y. City., had a display of their new Raspberry La France which was awarded a certificate of merit.

Wholesale Market and News of the City

The Market

Oct. 15.—The pronounced features of the wholesale cut flower market this week, as last, are a rather limited supply, a large demand by out-of-town florists, and an active demand from this city and vicinity and continued high prices, but with signs of weakening a little on some items which are coming in more freely.

American Beauty Roses are in considerable supply and choice selections of special grade blooms are selling at 30c. to 40c. each. The other grades are realizing corresponding prices. In Hybrid Tea Roses No. 2 grade blooms are selling at $4 to $6 per 100, and fancies and specials at 8c. to 30c. each. The demand for the No. 2, No. 1, and extra grades is very active.

Carnations are moving well at $2 to $6 per 100, the price having weakened a little today.

Cattleya orchids are in larger supply and are also meeting with a brisker demand at prices ranging at 25c. to 60c. each in general, with occasional sales of extra choice blooms at 75c. White Lilies are in short supply and are going quickly at 20c. each. Pink Lilies, grown outside, and not plentiful, are meeting with a weak demand at about $6 per 100. Lily of the Valley is in limited supply and is not meeting with a strong demand at about $10 per 100 for the best.

Chrysanthemums are now the dominant flower in the market. They are arriving in larger numbers and in much greater variety than last week and are meeting an active demand at prices ranging from $2 to $6 per doz. in general and $9 for a few exhibition blooms. Bunch 'Mums, both Pompons and Singles, are beginning to arrive and are selling at 25c. to $1 per bunch. Dahlias are more in evidence, in spite of frosts, than last week, but are not moving as freely. Prices range from $2 to $12 and occasionally $15 per 100.

In other flowers there are seen single and double Violets, Antirrhinums, Delphiniums, Tritomas, Hardy Asters, Bouvardia, Marigolds, Calendula, etc., all of which are moving moderately well at quoted prices.

Asparagus, Smilax and ferns are meeting with a fair demand and boughs of Oak foliage are selling freely.

There was an interesting meeting of the Florists' Club at its rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening. A full report of this meeting will be found in this issue.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History on Thursday evening, Nov. 7, from 7 to 10 o'clock, on Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m., and on Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. This will be the annual Chrysanthemum show of the society. Schedules are now out naming the prizes in the several classes of Chrysanthemums, Roses, Carnations, foliage and decorative plants, orchid plants, vegetables and fruits.

There were noted this week at the wholesale store of Thomas Young, Jr., 53 W. 28th st, some extraordinarily fine blooms of Hybrid Cattleya orchids, also of the variety labiata.

Jack Trepel, the retail florist of Fulton st., Brooklyn, who has been at home sick for several days, is again able to be out and attend to business.

At the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st., the fine 'Mums seen this week were from the growing establishment of Frank McMahon of Seabright, N. J. Among these were Marigold, Tints of Gold, Pink Beauty, Touset and Comeleta.

Some of the Dahlias which survived the frosts and are now arriving in the wholesale market are fine, particularly splendid blooms of these including his namesake, Mandiana, from W. A. Manda's, South Orange, N. J., were seen this week at John Young & Co.'s, 53 W. 28th st.

General Pershing Geranium

A new variety of Geranium, named General Pershing, has been developed by John McE. Bowman's gardeners. Blooming plants will soon be used in the hotels Biltmore, Murray Hill, Manhattan, Ansonia and Belmont, of which companies Mr. Bowman is president.

Boston

The vegetable, fruit and flower show and the meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club for Oct. 15 and 16 has been cancelled by order of the Board of Health.

George W. Homar is back at work in the Boston Flower Exchange.

The Montrose Greenhouses cut 4500 Roses last Monday—Ophelia, Black Beauty, Killarney Brilliant and Double White Killarney.

Frank Edgar of Waverly is marketing Golden Glow 'Mums. His greenhouses are well stocked with Poinsettias and Begonias.

We have had no frost to speak of so Dahlias are flowering profusely. They have had a heavy call and the price has been higher than ever before.

The retail stores are doing an enormous business. The call for funeral flowers still continues. In many stores the men have to work late at night to keep up with the demand.

At Welch Bros. Co. local trade is less but shipping business from distant cities and towns has increased the past two weeks. They have big supplies of Cattleyas, Liliums, 'Mums and Roses.

William Hannon & Son, of Dorcester, are fortunate in having a daily cut of about 1000 Lilies.

Shipping business at H. M. Robinson & Co.'s was never better than at present. They get a good supply of all kinds of flowers, including large shipments from New York.

At the seed stores they are waiting anxiously for Holland bulbs. So far none have arrived. Darwin Tulips are in big demand; as many orders are in now as will clean up the Holland shipments.

At local nurseries interest has centered in herbaceous plants. Sales have been heavy during the past month. Evergreens have sold well this Fall, more especially Blue Spruce. It is interesting to know that many of the large coniferous evergreens partially injured in the Spring have completely recovered during the Summer. R. C.

Three cheers for the Florists of Chicago and Cook County!

The Fourth Liberty Loan quota - $300,000—for Florists and allied trades only (does not include nurserymen and seedsmen) was oversubscribed by Oct. 10, 1918.

Total subscriptions to date: $303,000. Of this amount $92,000 are "plus" subscriptions.

(Signed) F. LAUTENSCHLAGER,
Chairman Florists and Allied Trades Fourth Liberty Loan.

Stock Continues Scarce

Oct. 14.—The unprecedented scarcity of stock is the prevailing topic of conversation. No one can recall such a scarcity at this time of year since this market has assumed the importance that it now possesses, in the last decade or two. Telegrams for stock which cannot be filled, pour in daily from other cities, and in many instances no reply is made except by letter. Florists in the surrounding cities ask why the wholesalers continue to advertise stock when they have none to sell. The best, however, that the wholesalers can do is to make an even distribution of all available stock among their good and steady customers. The buyer, who sends only an occasional order receives no consideration whatever in times like these. The same condition prevails in other cities as well as Chicago, as representatives of the trade from various points have come here during the past two weeks to investigate conditions. Prices are higher than ever known at this season. The local retail trade is also brisk, with much funeral work. Toward the end of the week there was noted a slight increase in the supply of stock coming in and it is the general opinion that the worst period of stringency has passed, and a larger supply of stock will be available for some time to come to meet the already heavy demand that seems to be assured.

The supply of Roses is probably larger than that of any other item of stock on the market, but even of these there are not enough for the demand. Prices are very high, short stock bringing $5 per 100 and up to $15 and $18 for the best and fancy grades. Am. Beauty Roses are moving quickly and in many cases where stock is good fancy prices are received.

Carnations are more plentiful than a week ago, but still far from being equal to the demand. Stock of medium quality has sold for as high as $5 and $6 per 100.

Every day sees an increase in the supply of 'Mums but still the daily receipts are far short of the demand. They are bringing high prices, ranging from $2 to $6 per doz. The sorts coming in are an improvement over the extra early varieties which have held the market for some time. In the second earlies there are good whites and pinks, and many types of yellows of more than ordinary quality. Some California stock has come in during the past week, but owing to the general scarcity no one complained of this competition. In a general way growers say that for some reason or other, 'Mums are later this season by two weeks or more than last year. It will not be before these are in the height of their season that the tightness of the market will be relieved, should the present lively demand continue.

Gladioli and Asters are at the close of their season and are to be had only in small quantities. Orchids are more plentiful, while Valley remains on the short list. Easter Lilies are in only moderate supply, all stock coming in bringing good prices and moving daily. Violets have jumped to $1 per 100 and ferns have been so difficult to obtain and so much used in funeral work that there are instances where the price of $5 per 1000 was paid for them during the past week.

Club's Loan Meeting

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Randolph Hotel on Thursday evening, Oct. 10. This meeting was scheduled to be the great Liberty Loan meeting and prominent speakers to boost the sale of Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds were provided for the occasion.

President Lautenschlager, noting the great enthusiasm displayed by the visitors, very wisely postponed all matters concerning club business until the next regular meeting to be held in November and turned the meeting into a grand rally for the sale of Liberty Bonds. Speakers from the Division 19-B were present and gave rousing talks that inspired every visitor present to purchase more bonds.

Capt. Maurice Bernhardt, a French soldier, who fought with the Union Army in 1861, made a fine appeal. The hat was passed around and a contribution of nearly $100 was taken up that the Captain will send to the poor children of France and Belgium. He was so elated over the generosity of the members that he presented the secretary with a framed photo of himself to be hung in the meeting rooms of the club.

Peter Reinberg, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of Cook county made a good speech. There were numerous other talks by visitors and club members, which resulted in those present increasing their purchases of bonds. Up to the time of the meeting the division to which the Florists belong was short about $48,000. About $51,000 was subscribed at the meeting and more subscriptions are coming in daily so that by this date the florists are well "over the top" by from $15,000 to $18,000 and the total may go still higher before the close of the campaign. Among the principal subscribers at the meeting was Peter Reinberg, who increased his already large purchase of bonds by $7000. Weitor Bros. took an additional $5000 and all the way down the line to the small purchases of $1000, $500, $100 and $50 subscriptions, the amounts were increased. Fred Lautenschlager, chairman of the Florists' Trade Division was too busy selling Liberty Loan Bonds to attend the meeting of the F. T. D. in Cleveland. This was a matter of much regret to him as this was the first meeting of any importance that he failed to attend in several years.

Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Ass'n, made several good customers for his firm at the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland. He was much pleased with the meeting.

E. C. Pruner, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., who attended the F. T. D. meeting, left at the close of the meeting to visit his brother in Akron, O., whom he had not seen in several years.

Arthur Liebermann, brother of Fred Liebermann of the Kennicott Bros. Co., died the past week at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., of pneumonia.

Sigmund Misiewicz, a former well known retailer on Milwaukee ave., died of pneumonia in France. His name appeared in a recent list of casualties.

T. E. Waters, of the supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., went to Akron, O., from the F. T. D. meeting on a business trip to the Goodrich Rubber Co.

A. F. Longren of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia., had an exhibition of baskets in the Palmer House during the past week.

In our last issue, page 599, we stated that the Kroeschell Bros. Co., together with its employees, had subscribed $3000. This we are happy to say was an error, as Kroeschell Bros. Co. and Kroeschell Bros. Ice Machine Co., firms, officials and employees, have subscribed $30,000 to the Fourth Liberty Loan, which is, in fact, one-tenth of the total quota assigned to the florists of their district.

Philadelphia

The Market

Oct. 15.—There is practically no change in the cut flower market. Flowers are scarce and high. It is utterly impossible to fill orders and a number of retail shops have stopped taking orders except from regular customers. As previously stated, there is an overwhelming demand for flowers of every description. Ruling prices are: For Roses from 8c. up; Carnation 8c. to 10c.; Easter Lilies 25c.; Dahlias 5c. and up, and 'Mums $3 to $5 per doz. Other stock brings corresponding prices. Greens have also gone to the vanishing point and, like other foliage stock, are snapped up on arrival. This week is opening up with a stronger supply, with more Dahlias and 'Mums to draw upon.

Notes

The Henry F. Michell Co. had a large block of Gladioli at the nurseries at Andalusia, the cut from which is meeting with a brisk demand. Manager A. R. Burton has arranged to run half the greenhouses during the coming Winter.

The unprecedented demand for flowers has brought a call for almost every conceivable blooming flower; even the Geranium was welcomed in the wholesale market.

The death of Theodore Schober, manager of the Wyncote establishment of the Joseph Heacock Co., was a shock to all who knew him, and his passing leaves many regrets. His obituary will be found on another page.

With the arrival of the Dutch bulbs at the port of New York, the local seed firms are making arrangements for receiving them here at an early date.

Samuel F. Lilley is now with the S. S. Pennock Co. William Moore is with Chas. E. Meehan. Ed. Dornheim is seeking pastures far remote from the florist's field.

The writer is exceedingly sorry to report that John Welsh Young is confined to his bed with the grippe. Here's wishing him a speedy recovery.

It is a pleasure to be able to report that Charles H. Grakelow, who has been ill, is pronounced out of danger and on the road to recovery. Mr. Grakelow has been appointed a director of the F. T. D.

All the supply houses report being heavily drawn upon for artificial flowers to help out in the present drain on the cut flower market.

Benjamin Berman, formerly with Eugene Berheimer and lately with the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is dead, a victim of pneumonia.

(Owing to a regrettable delay in the mails Mr. McLaughlin's letter, mailed immediately after the close of the meeting on Monday evening, did not reach our hands until Thursday morning, Oct. 10.)

Club Meeting, Monday, Oct. 7

Regular meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club was held at the rooms in the Hollenden, Oct. 7, 1918, with President Chas. J. Graham in the chair. Many well-known men from other cities were present, gathered here to attend the meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. Robt. Weeks gave a detailed report of the work being done by the Gardeners' Service Committee. Mr. Anderson, of Nashville, Tenn., made a few remarks upon his local conditions, business hours there being from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., the idea being the conservation of fuel.

The Cleveland Florists' Club service flag was shown and elicited much applause; there are now 45 stars upon it.

A rising vote of thanks was unanimously given retiring President Carl Hagenburger and Treasurer A. C. Fox.

Tim Waters, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, made a brief address complimenting the club upon its splendid representation in the military service. He also expatiated upon the work of the Chicago Florists' Club along the lines of amalgamating the different branches of the trade. Sam Seligman spoke of the fine decorative work shown in the windows of the Cleveland retail florists.

At this point the executive committee of the F. T. D. which had been in session until then, entered the room; their advent was hailed with applause and, quite naturally, each individual thereof was called upon for a short powwow.

William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. and president of the F. T. D., upon request, said he could ill afford to leave Washingtan at that time, but still less could he afford to stay away. It was only through the efforts of the S. A. F. that the florists had been enabled to obtain their allowance of 50 per cent. of coal for this Fall and Winter. The non-essential idea had been more liberally construed; it was not intended to destroy any industries; flowers, it had been discovered, were necessary for the hospitals and for the morale of the Army. Misinformation had been added to misinformation by local administrators, thereby augmenting the troubles experienced in obtaining coal. Mr. Gude again called attention to the work of the Society in regard to the coal shortage and said that it would not affect the florists' industry more than any other industry. As to the Work or Fight order what General Crowder is after more particularly is the slacker and the loafer. Mr. Gude further reminded the audience that priority orders were confined to U. S. necessities only.

Mr. Gude made a strong appeal to the florists to do the very best possible under the present conditions and, incidentally, putting forth every effort to win the war. His speech was given prolonged and hearty applause.

W. J. Gammage, of London, Ont., Canada, spoke on trade conditions in that country, which were prosperous at that time, but artificial in many respects, because occasioned by the war. In his opinion the present extremely high prices of labor will make trouble when the millions of men abroad return to take up their places in industry. He conveyed the greetings of the Canadian florists and expressed a hope that the continent of North America should be the big influence in setting aright the disturbed world conditions.

John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., expressed his pleasure in being present at a meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club. He emphasized the importance of the work being done by Mr. Gude in his duties as Washington representative, and spoke in great appreciation of the splendid treatment given the florists by the Government, expressing his conviction that the trade is being treated fairly.

He did not think Mr. Gude's work on behalf of the trade was sufficiently appreciated nor did he get the support he deserved. Loss to the florists of their men would be due more to these leaving to obtain the high wages obtainable or through the workings of the draft. A strong argument was made by Mr. Young when he asked the question: If the growers had been unable to obtain the coal, where would the retailers stand? This coal had been obtained through the efforts of the S. A. F.

Mr. Young pointed out the great educational benefits derived from his trip from Coast to Coast in the interests of the S. A. F., enabling him to get into touch with florists in all parts of the country. He spoke of his long term as secretary of the New York Florists' Club, and expressed himself as happiest when working with an organized body of florists, and concluded with a forcible argument as to the necessity of a strong national society of florists.

Philip Breitmeyer was introduced by President Graham as a florist from a small town which was a suburb of Toledo. Mr. Breitmeyer in his happy manner gave a fine talk upon trade conditions in general, optimism being the keynote of his remarks. We have had prosperity for 20 years back and should be in a position to get through this crisis with credit; he could see no cause for alarm. It may be well these times have come to us to put a stop to the overbuilding of glass and the gluts.

H. G. Dillemuth of Toronto spoke of the work accomplished by the florists' club of his city. The trade in Canada has experienced fuelless and heatless days, embargoes, etc., but has come out with colors flying after four years of war, because of its superb cooperation.

Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, addressed the club upon its growing importance, and exhorted all members present to push with all effort possible the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," Mr. Pochelon said this was the third meeting of the F. T. D. Association, now eight years old. There were 4879 villages and towns in the United States and Canada, containing from one to five thousand population, and there should be an F. T. D. representative at each one of these points. Retailers must keep in business and use their every effort on behalf of the boys over there who would come home with more pep than when they left this side. As evidencing the benefit of the F. T. D. to the retailers he mentioned the case of a member who had filled orders for $1260 worth of flowers through the payment of his $5 dues.

W. A. Smythe, of Chicago, spoke of his inspection of the Cleveland stores and reported flowers as scarce in his city as he found them here.

Carl Baum, of Knoxville, told of conditions in his part of the country, having their share of fuel shortage and scarcity of stock, labor troubles, however, not being so acute as in other parts of the country. Express service is bad and business hours are confined from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., creating great difficulty in shipping off orders. A larger crop of flowers in sight in the State of Tennessee than ever before, and prices are to be advanced to meet the increased expenditures. For fuel they were burning coal, corncobs and wood; for labor using colored women to whom they paid 12½c. an hour.

About 100 florists attended the meeting and it was greatly enjoyed by all.

The call for funeral work has been ater than we have experienced in some e. Both city and shipping trade held well and the end of the day generally nd the market pretty clean. The ng, constant demand always greater n the available supply, in many cases ught prices even higher than quality rranted. The quality of stock on the ole was satisfactory, with some of it ceptionally fine. No difficulty was nd, however, in moving the inferior ades. Really fine stock was at a pre- um. Good American Beauty Roses short and bring top prices. All other rieties of Roses sold well, the demand ng exceptionally strong. The shorter ades are grabbed up quickly. Carna- ns are still in short supply, especially long stemmed stock, of which there is actically none. Prices have advanced. ums are coming to the front more ry day and will be the most popular wer for a while. Dahlias have been ying an important part as they have n cheap compared with other stock l they work in well for ground work designs.

Boldt-Lundy, House of Flowers, s added another star to its service flag, L. E. Murry, the chauffeur, who is do- clerical work in the limited service. Frank Meyers, for the past five years eman for the Shotwell Floral Co., of rgo, N. D., has arrived in this city. intends to make Denver his home. Jesse R. Kern, manager of the Bar- des Seed Co., has been busy on the perty Loan committee. Denver is sure go over the top, as in all other drives. Mr. Lamerman, of the City Floral Co., s been confined to his home with the luenza.

E. S. Kennedy and wife, of the Alpha oral Co., spent several days at their tage in Buffalo Park, Colo.

Mr. Grover, of Elitch Gardens Co., s called to Kansas City very suddenly account of the death of his sister.

Emil Glauber has finished resetting the ss on his Rose houses. He hopes by doing he will be able to conserve fuel.

C. R. Root, of the Colorado Seed Co., s been out of town for a week on a siness trip. This firm reports business y good so far this season.

Herbert Clauson, of the American ower Shop, is back at the store again. has been on the sick list.

N. A. Benson, of the Denver Whole- le Florists' Co., when speaking of stock and prices said it is not a question of price at present as the main thing is to get enough stock to fill orders.

Oct. 4 a big surprise to the trade was to learn that Charles, son of W. W. Wilmore, who is in the U. S. Tank Corps at Gettysburg, Pa., arrived in this city on a four days' stay. He brought back the body of a comrade who died at his camp with influenza. The deceased was a Denver boy and the body was brought back for burial in this city. C. F. E.

Portland, Ore.

The shops all report trade brisk and prices satisfactory. The stock of cut flowers is exhausted daily and in many lines substitutes have to be used, as everything in flowers cleans up well. California 'Mums are most welcome and have been arriving in first class condition. Roses, because of the bright weather, are coming in in fair supply. Carnations are also in fair receipt and the quality good. A few Violets are arriving and prove a welcome addition to the variety of stock. Zinnias, Gladioli and Dahlias are still with us, and should the frost hold off we will have a crop of Cosmos, something which has not happened in many a year. Some Primula obconica, with the first flowers showing, have been drafted into service to meet the shortage of blooming plants.

State Fair

The State Fair, as far as the floral exhibits are concerned was a success, in spite of the slight interest shown by the trade generally. At any rate it was a forerunner of better things to follow. A special floral pavilion is in sight and it might not be out of place to have the Portland Floral Society as sponsor of a real flower show at the State Fair annually. By intelligent arrangement the prize money could be redistributed to make the premium money at least cover costs. The value of the advertising given to the use of flowers must not be overlooked; the last day's attendance was about 20,000.

It is up to us to push the matter, now that the fair board has awakened to the possibilities. Julius Brotje received a cup for his display of Water Lilies, and Clarke Bros. a cup for the best display of cut Roses. The Swiss Floral Co. exhibited fine Zinnias.

The Holden Floral Co. have a new Studebaker delivery car.

Some of the stores are showing fine Oconto 'Mums. These and some Comoleta, are the only good local 'Mums arriving on the market so far.

John Young has purchased the greenhouses of Thomas Ellingham, which he will take down and move them to Yakima. John Young was formerly with the firm of Young & Lester of Walla Walla.

Daylight Saving

According to U. S. Senator Calder, who backed the Daylight Saving Bill in the Senate, it is estimated by the U. S. Fuel Administration that one and a quarter million tons of coal were saved by turning the clock ahead an hour for seven months, by lessening the load on lighting plants through the daylight saving scheme.

Definite reports from St. Louis show a saving of 17.5 ton for each thousand of population on the seven months basis. The saving in France for a three and a half months' period was 250,000 tons, which would make a saving of 12.5 tons for each thousand of population in a seven months' period according to the Fuel Administration.

Food Production Increased

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the National War Garden Commission, gives great credit for the war garden record of 1918 to the Daylight Saving law. According to estimates by the commission the war garden crop this year is worth $525,000,000. This is an increase of 51 per cent. over that of 1917. The commission's survey shows that 5,285,000 home food-producing plots were planted. With 26 working days in each of the seven months you have 182 extra hours of time, if only one gardener worked this extra hour of time in each plot it will be seen that 961,870,000 hours of extra time were added to the country's wealth. Since there are 8760 hours in a year, you find the staggering total of 109,803 years of 24-hour days.

In a working day of eight hours the real advantage is found by multiplying 109,803 by three, giving 329,409 working or eight-hour years. Importance of this extra time cannot be over estimated in the opinion of Mr. Pack. There is to be an army of 5,000,000 men, and as it costs 40c. a day to feed a soldier it will mean that food valued at $2,000,000 must be found for the army every day.

More Efficient Work

The good effect of daylight saving was felt by business concerns. Everywhere reports come to the Garden Commission showing increased production has resulted and the worker has more "pep" for the next day's tasks as a result of getting out from work into daylight. Thousands went into their gardens after work in the big plants and there produced food in the plots started for them by the management, who found a war gardener to be a vary good worker.

Seek to Continue Daylight Saving

Senator Calder on Oct. 7 introduced a bill, at the suggestion of Bernard Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, to continue the present time system. The law now in force calls for the turning back of the clocks on Oct. 27. Mr. Baruch states that a continuance of the present system would result in considerable saving of power in the war industries and would enable them greatly to increase their output.

[We can see no benefit to accrue from continuing Daylight Saving after Oct. 27.—ED.]

Schedule Received

The Hort. Society of New York, exhibition to be held at Amer. Mus. of Natural History, Central Park West and 77th st., Nov. 7 to 10. Geo. V. Nash, sec'y, Mansion N. Y. Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, N. Y.

Books Received

The Greenhouse Beautiful, a 32 page and cover book prepared by Philip J. Foley and just issued by the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. of Chicago, affords the strongest kind of evidence that our greenhouse builders are prepared for a wonderful renewal of building just as quickly as the war closes, and this book, coming in advance of the time, will undoubtedly lay the foundation for some good business in the near future. The book is printed upon coated paper, profusely illustrated with various types of greenhouses and conservatories for private estates, many of the pictures presenting a quite natural appearance in their shades of green and black. The private estate owner should have no difficulty in selecting the type of house therefrom to suit his own particular fancy.

Fires for Roses

People are suffering these cold mornings and evenings from cold, due to the request that furnace fires be not started until November 1.

Does the Fuel Administration realize how much coal is used up in keeping hothouse fires going to grow roses for the rich. Truly this is a non-essential industry.—M. H., in N. Y. American. (Name withheld.)

While anonymous letters usually attract little attention, this one may do damage because it gives a false impression and because of the large circulation of the medium that published it. Anyone who will take the trouble may prove for himself that "the working classes," not the rich, have this year been and are now the principal buyers of flowers; that the great bulk of flowers raised recently have gone to hospitals and cemeteries; that countless greenhouses have closed down or are running on 50 per cent. or less of their usual fuel supply and are growing cool temperature crops, which require less coal than high temperature ones; that vegetable crops have more or less replaced flowers in hundreds of establishments; and that the Board of Health has ordered residences, offices, factories, etc., warmed as a safeguard against influenza.

The Meaning of Your Subscription to the Fourth Liberty Loan

WHAT IS THE LIBERTY LOAN?

It's forts and it's ships and it's shining guns.
It's squadrons that sweep the sea.
It's all of the circling band of steel
That shall keep all the home shores free.
It's grub and it's warmth for the sailor lad
Far out on the wintry foam.
For the brave jack tar, as he fights afar,
It's the good old "Money from home."

WHAT IS THE LIBERTY LOAN?

It's rifle and helm and it's bayonet,
It's shovel and shard and shell
For the soldier boy in the olive drab,
Out there on the edge of hell.
It's the soaring wings of the whirring planes
That battle on high alone.
For the lad who is daring "Over there"
It's the good old "Money from home."

WHAT IS THE LIBERTY LOAN?

It's the succor and life for a bleeding world.
It's the glimmer of Peace at dawn.
It's the strength of a mighty arm to strike.
It's the gleam of a great sword, drawn.
But, more than all, it's the pledge of love
To the lads whom we call "Our own."
To the boys on land, afloat, on high,
It's the good old "Money from home."

Eliminate The Fuel Wasting Factors

A boiler with bulky soot accumulating surfaces causes enormous fuel losses. Faulty coal wasting boilers that cannot be kept clean and which constantly keep you in trouble can no longer be tolerated.

Meet the high cost and limited supply of fuel with Kroeschell Boilers. These highly effective fuel-saving boilers will make every dollar you spend for fuel do its utmost.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., 468 W. Erie St., Chicago

Heid Kerosene Heater

The "HEID KEROSENE HEATER" needs no electric motor, no air pressure. No ashes to remove, and can be used in any make of boiler.

By order of the United States Fuel Administrator, florists will get only 50% of their coal this season.

WHY NOT BURN KEROSENE OR CRUDE OIL AND SAVE COAL?

With a few pounds of coal you cannot heat water or make steam, but with five gallons of oil in my Heater you can.

You can heat your greenhouses quicker; it is cleaner and above all, a time saver.

Equally adapted for heating private residences.

Write for prices. When writing give width of feed door of boiler, size of grates and height of chimney.
